A Quarter of a Milbn Germans Now in Retreat BetweenSt. Quentin and Cambrai

At Some Points the Allies Have Advanced for a Distance of Fifteen Miles in the Past Two Days—A Dangerous Salient.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Oct. 10.—A quarter of a million Germans are now in full retreat between Cambrai and St. Quentin, with the Allies hot at their heels, according to battle front reports that are coming through. At some points the advance has exceeded fifteen miles in the past two days.

This forward movement of the Allies is regarded as the first step in the great general retreat of the Germans, which seems now inevitable, for it is doubtful whether Gen. Ludendorff has such fortified positions on the upper Oise and Cambrai canal as to permit him effectively to resist the exploitation of victory of the past two days on the Allied side. The result of Marshal Foch's skillful strategy is that the region of Laon and St. Gobain massif has become so dangerous that the evacuation of this vast and important pocket in the near future seems imperative.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Oct. 10.— (Official.) — Further progress was made by the British last night towards the northern part of the present battlefield, to the east of Cambrai. Progress is going on south-east of Cambrai, on both sides of Caudry. The British are now within two miles of Le Cateau. Sailaumines and Noyelles are captured.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, Oct. 10. — Official.) — French troops advancing east of St. Quentin-Le Cateau river, have captured Etaves Wood and Bocquiaux Village and further south have taken Marcy and reached Fontaine Dame, as well as Fonsomme.

The renewal of the attack on the Laon region was announced by the French War Office to-day. Progress was made there as well as east of St. Quentin and in the Champagne.

PEACE WITH GERMANY IS NOT SO NEAR AS IT WOULD APPEAR

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The military plane of America and her Allies contemplate smashing back the Hun to his home defence lines in the west before diplomacy, by any chance, gives Germany a chance to withdraw unhindered.

Military men are delighted, to put it mildly, over the development of the western battle line. They foresee that the German retreat eastward between Cambrai and St. Quentin, and the American smashing of the Kriemhilde line are the forerunners of a general withdrawal that will free Northern France and Belgium of the enemy.

As predicted some days ago, they think that this retirement can be accomplished before winter sets in.

Peace with Germany is not so near as it appears. It's a long road to the end the President seeks. But it can be hastened, officials declare, by speeding up all war work.

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, Oct. 9.—The weather yesterday was most unfavourable for aerial operations it was officially reported here by the French Air Ministry. However, three hostile planes were shot down and two captive balloons set afire.

The weather was better at night and twenty-five tons of bombs were dropped on stations at Marle, Mont Cornet, Rethel, Aspel D'Lavill, Juneville and Chathelet-Sur-Retourn and the railways between these stations. Fires were observed and explosions noted at several places.

Prisoners Taken.

WITH BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 10.—A detachment of German cyclists was brought up near Premont early yesterday morning to lead a projected counter-attack.

Some doughboys and Tommies filtered past the spot where the Germans were waiting. After they had got some distance beyond, they discovered the Boches and started back to take them prisoner. About the same time other infantrymen, coming up from the opposite direction, spotted the Germans.

A wild race ensued with the Germans as a prize. The result, according to the prisoners themselves, was about a dead heat.

STEAMER LOST.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—It is feared that the United States freighter Ticonderoga, five thousand tons, formerly the German vessel "Rickmera," has been sunk by a submarine with the loss of many of her crew.

ALBANIA FREED—This map shows the boundaries of Albania, from which the Austrians have withdrawn their troops, and Berat, which has been occupied without a fight; as well as Durazzo, the Austrian naval base on the Adriatic, which has been the scene of a great Allied victory.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—The Associated Press this morning issued the following summary.

Crossing the St. Quentin-Le Cateau railroad the French forces operating just south of the Americans and British along the line where the Hindenburg system has been smashed, have made a new advance which appears to be important. Marcy has been captured from the enemy, and the French have reached Fontaine-Notre-Dame and Fonsommes, well east of the railroad. They have also occupied Etaves wood and the village of Bocquia further north. Marcy is approximately five miles east of St. Quentin and is directly south of the line on which the British and Americans were fighting yesterday. This advance cuts the railroad by which the Germans just north of St. Quentin could escape from the net being thrown about them, and marks a new step in the operation of outflanking the Laon salient. British and American forces seem to have won a complete victory southeast and east of Cambrai, reports state that the Allies are marching eastward through burning towns, pursuing the enemy who appears to be harrassingly retreating.

REPLY WELL RECEIVED

The President's Reply, Together With War News, Creates Great Excitement in French Capital.

HUN COMMENT

(United Press.)

(By Robert J. Bender.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10. — That Pope Benedict will appeal to the world to accept President Wilson's fourteen peace principles was indicated in reports to this government to-day. These stated that the Pope has selected Nov. 2, All Souls' Day, for his move.

In this connection it is significant that the Holy See knew as early as Oct. 3 that Austria would appeal to Wilson for peace, accepting his 14 points. Despatches further disclose that Austria's plight is serious and that whatever Germany answers to the President's test of her peace sincerity, Austria and Turkey cannot long survive the growing demands in their countries for an end to the struggle.

This probably accounts for President Wilson's decision to leave Austria in doubt for the moment. Later he will reply to her peace proposal.

"That's the Stuff to Give the Germans."

(United Press.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

PARIS, Oct. 10.—The swords of Generals Byng, Rawlinson and Lewis are to-day reinforcing President Wilson's pen in making answer to Germany's peace suggestions.

Wilson's reply and the fall of Cambrai, the news of both being received at the same time, created great excitement on the boulevards. All people were of the same opinion. No matter in what words the comment was couched, what everybody really said was: "That's the stuff to give 'em." None failed to note the significance of the double response to Prince Maximilian.

Opinion here is firm as a rock with regard to Germany's plea for a truce. It is now generally recognized that a pause in the hammering of the weakening German ranks would merely serve Ludendorff's doomed armies.

President's Reply Was Well Received

Special to The Examiner:

WITH AMERICAN FIRST ARMY, Oct. 10.—President Wilson's reply to Germany was what the army expected, especially that portion of the note demanding withdrawal from all invaded territory.

From the highest to the lowest, every man in the army was pleased. Every man is determined to drive out the Boche if he refuses to withdraw.

If the Germans choose to continue fighting, it is only a matter of time until it will be possible to impose any terms desired by the Allies. News of Germany's appeal did not change a single plan for prosecuting the war. The army, guns and men, continued hammering the enemy as hard as ever.

"Has Adopted the President's Conditions"

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 10.—A Central News despatch from Amsterdam, dated Oct. 9, asserted it was reported from Berlin that, according to German press comment on the war situation the Government majority in the Reichstag has adopted the whole of Wilson's conditions as a basis for peace.

Special to The Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 10.—The German Chancellor will address the Reichstag Saturday, according to copies of the Berlin Tageblatt received here to-day.

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Oct. 10. —The Army Commission has endorsed President Wilson's reply. It coincided with the wishes of the French people.

THE ALLIES HAVE SMASHED THE LAST GERMAN DEFENCES WEST OF THE MEUSE RIVER

The Argonne Pocket Has Been Wiped Out by the Junction of the French and Americans—Germans in the St. Quentin and Cambrai Region are Staggering Under the Impact of the Combined British, French and American Blow.

THE ENEMY IS REPORTED IN WILD RETREAT

(By Fred S. Ferguson—United Press Service.)

WITH THE AMERICAN FIRST ARMY, October 10.—The Americans are through the Kriemhilde line on a front of six kilometres (nearly four miles). They have smashed the last organized German defences in this region, west of the Meuse, and are advancing northward with only natural defences between them and the Belgian frontier.

The Argonne pocket has been wiped out by the junction of French and Americans at Lancon. The Americans are moving up through the forest, with the engineers blazing the way through the woods and tangled mass of wire.

KAISER'S ORDER OF DAY ANNOUNCING HIS INTENTION OF ASKING FOR AN ARMISTICE TOOK FIGHT OUT OF GERMANS

Our detachment are reported to have entered Vitry-En-Artois and Arleux and to be headed for the great centre of Douai. Inspired by their government's request for an armistice of which they know only as was contained in the Kaiser's order of the day. Some German divisions between Cambrai and St. Quentin made one of the feeblest fights since the Somme became a battlefield. "They didn't fight like they did a week ago," said the South Carolina boy who participated in both battles. "If the Kaiser does not want to fight why should we," asked a German private who became a willing prisoner. While fighting was resumed in full force at dawn yesterday morning and some advances had been made north of Cambrai even before that hour, the break was not maintainable until broad midday, then some tanks and whippets were sent as scouts across to the objectives varying from four to six thousand yards behind the starting point. A short time later the infantry had developed in many places far ahead of their objectives. The number of captured and slain is staggering, prisoners already fill the prepared cages to overflowing, while dead Germans and dead German horses strew the ground everywhere, this despite the fact the English, Scotch, New Zealand, French and American troops participating in the advance, have escaped with slight losses.

GERMANS IN ST. QUENTIN-CAMBRAI REGION APPEAR TO BE ON VERGE OF UTTER ROUT AND ABANDONING EVERYTHING

(By Lowell Mellett—United Press Service.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, October 10. — The Germans in the St. Quentin-Cambrai region, staggering under the impact of the combined British, French and American blow, appear to be on the verge of an utter rout.

The Allies have burst through the last of the organized German defenses along a front of a score of miles and have poured into the open country beyond.

The Germans are reported in wild retreat to the eastward, abandoning everything that would retard their flight. Allied cavalry is cutting and slashing at the enemy's heels, while our infantry is marching in the wake of the horsemen in column formation.

Additional advances of more than six miles at some points along the fifty-mile fighting front are reported since yesterday's renewed attack began. Bohain, Busigny, Clary, Caudry, Fonsomme, Caurior, Carnieres, Fontaine-Notre-Dame, Marcy and Mezieres-Sur-Oise are reported to have fallen.

The British and Americans were reported on the outskirts of Le Cateau and approaching Solesmes. To the southward the French are bearing down on Ribemont.

The Allied progress has been extended northward to the Scarpe.

A German officer in the prisoners' cage of a certain Allied brigade when asked why his soldiers ran, sighed and said: "German officers have a hard time now. The men won't fight. The Kaiser's order of the day telling us he wants peace, was read by the men when we received it the day before yesterday. It hasn't helped any. The war is over, so far as we are concerned."

MORE THAN TWO HUNDRED A LLIED BOMBING PLANES IN ACTION ON TH E FRANCO-AMERICAN FRONT

(By Frank J. Taylor— United Press Service.)

WITH THE AMERICAN FIR ST ARMY, Oct. 10.—(Noon)—Heavy fighting is under way in the region of Romagne (between the Meuse and Argonne) where the Germans are ru shing reinforcements and concentrating artillery. The enemy is frantical ly reinforcing the sides of what remains of the Argonne pocket, while withdrawing in the centre.

More than two hundred Allied bo mbing planes, a hundred battle planes and fifty chasers are in action. The Franco-American air hordes simultaneously attacked the cantonment a rea near Damvillers and Waverille (east of the Meuse) where the Germa ns were massing for a counter attack shooting down twelve Boches, with o nly one casualty.

Dun-Sur-Meuse, Bantheville, Ain croville, and other towns are burning.

CHILDREN'S TAG DAY SATURDAY

It is the wish of the Directors of the Children's Aid Society that citizens shall keep in mind the function of the Annual Tag Day, Saturday, 12th inst., remembering the Day, to remember the Society. And the Children, who will benefit.

No local object is more worthy. None carries on its work, so quietly, sympathetically and efficiently. Its functions surrounded by law and order and its responsibilities defined and laid out. Its privileges to do Good. To rescue and care for the helpless and the neglected, or those who from force of circumstances might be neglected.

One of the features of the work, that has come into being in the last four years, is that of the care of children of men on service, children temporarily deprived of protection and care by one or both parents. It is true that we have Work of the War more in the public eye, and with larger ambitions, but we should not count less essential or less worthy the work that may be hidden from view.

REMEMBER THE CHILDREN ON TAG DAY, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 12TH.

A SINISTER EFFORT.

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Germany is approaching the Czecho-Slovaks with proposals for autonomy, according to information reaching the State Department to-day. This is taken as a sinister effort to remove the Czecho-Slovak influence and power in Russia and to keep others of the race in the near east quieted.

BECOMING ANXIOUS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 10. — Indications that Germany is becoming anxious in consequence of the threat of reprisals for destruction of towns in France are afforded by a telegram from the Wolff Bureau, saying that Douai was burning as a result of the continuous British bombardment.

CANADIAN VICTORY

The Canadians Are Now in Complete Possession of Cambrai—A Brilliant Operation.

STORMED CANAL

WITH CANADIAN FORCES, Oct. 9.—(Delayed)—(By J. Livesay, Canadian Press Correspondent) — Early this morning Canadian troops penetrated Cambrai and are now in complete possession of the city. Thus is fulfilled the legitimate ambition of the Canadian corps for the achievement of which they have been fighting hard ever since they stormed the Canal Du Nord and took Bourlon Wood on September 27. Even if the Imperial troops which fought so gallantly and advanced south of Cambrai had had the good fortune to capture the city, its fall must still have been attributed to the sledge-hammer strokes of the Canadian corps, before which the defence of the enemy crumbled. The capture of Cambrai fittingly crowns the brilliant record of the corps since August 8. Cambrai fell in a night attack. We kicked off at half-past one. The morning was pitchy dark, but careful preparation resulted in all the troops getting to the city without a hitch. Our third division crossed the canal and penetrated into the city.

Element of Surprise.

The element of surprise assisted in overwhelming the enemy defence in the streets. Some enemy elements apparently were caught between the city and the Imperials further south. Our troops began at once to try and save the city from the fire that broke out at various points. The Allies have not fired a single shell into Cambrai, and these fires must have been of incendiary origin. Meantime our third division due east to the line of the Scheldt canal was secure. All bridgeheads as far as Eswars and Morenchie, Ramillies, Blacourt and Cuvillers, were captured, with many hundreds of prisoners. The victory was complete and glorious.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 10TH, 1918.

THE HUN UNREPENTANT.

Official reports from the Belgian Government show little indication that the Germans are beginning to repent. On the contrary the same spirit of frightfulness, of wanton cruelty, and of premeditated abuse that have characterized the war methods of the Hun ever since August, 1914, is still strongly in evidence. At the very moment when the new German Chancellor is prating of the German anxiety for the welfare of humanity, and the Kaiser is telling his battered soldiers that he is offering the Allies an honourable peace, comes the word that the Germans are still acting the brute in Belgium. In the western part of that stricken country all the men from fifteen to forty-five years of age are being dragged from their homes and forced to do military work for their captors. The reports say that these unfortunate men are being most cruelly treated by the Germans.

This conduct in Belgium is on a par with the wanton destruction of French cities.

And these exponents of Kultur are asking for peace negotiations.

THE VICTORY LOAN.

The speech of Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, at Winnipeg, on Tuesday night, places the second Canadian Victory Loan squarely before the people of Canada. The Dominion requires five hundred millions of dollars to carry on Canada's part in the war, and the minimum amount asked for by the Minister of Finance is three hundred million. The larger amount will be raised, if possible, and no one doubts the ability of the Canadian people to oversubscribe the maximum mentioned.

The selling campaign begins on Monday, October 28th, and continues until November 16th. The rate of interest to be paid on the new bonds is announced as 5 1-2 per cent., the same as on the first Victory Loan but in the new issue there will be no twenty year bonds. As already intimated, the bonds will be free from taxation, including income tax.

The possibility of an early peace should not interfere in any way with subscriptions to the Victory Loan. The money will all be needed, and the loan will be, to quote Sir Thomas White, "a vital factor in the creation and continuance of our prosperity," especially, as the money to be raised through the loan will be spent in Canada. Patriotism as well as thrift, should result in an eager rush to secure these bonds when they are put on the market at the end of the month.

And the people of Peterboro should always bear in mind that this district is out after one of the Governor-General's honour flags.

CIVIL SERVANTS' SALARIES.

There were some striking figures in the memorial presented to the Government the other day from the Civil Service Federation of Canada, asking for a war bonus of $350 for the Civil Servants of Canada. Some people are inclined to believe that a Government official draws a very substantial salary for a minimum amount of work, but the figures as submitted by the representatives of the Civil Servants throw a very different light upon the case.

Outstanding facts in the memorial include the following:

(1) The average salary paid to Civil Servants, top to bottom, east to west, is $1,125 a year, $3.60 per day; (2) thousands receive far less than this; (3) the average Civil Servant has been promoted at the rate of $22 a year for the last nine years; (4) the advancing cost of living has reduced his salary at the rate of $62 a year for every one of the same nine years, and has stranded it 80 per cent. below the cost of living; (5) with the war bonus added the average salary will still be below the minimum needed by the average family of five and 40 per cent. below the cost of living; and (6) since this is the first general war bonus to relieve a condition which has existed for years and which has been met gradually by private industry, the whole sum is not chargeable to one year at all. A proper bonus for this year alone based on the increased cost of living, is given at $725—a figure that throws the requested war bonus of $350 for more than this year, into its true light.

Discussing the memorial, "Civilian" says:

When we realize that day laborers are now receiving forty cents more per day than do the men and women who run the Government we feel safe in saying that the average citzen who reads the memorial will come to the conclusion that its framers could have made striking use of the figures of his own trade or profession in support of the claim that the condition of Civil Servants is one demanding remedy.

Even the most casual reading of the memorial will convince anyone that the difficulty experienced by those responsible for its construction was mainly one of what to leave out. The case of returned soldiers averaging less from the Government than garbage collectors from the city is striking, but only one of dozens of similar comparisons that might have been made.

THE LESSON OF FLANDERS.

"The man in the street" in English-speaking countries is pulled two ways by his feelings about the war. On the one hand, he has an intense conviction of the horribly senseless and tragic folly of war, and a proportionate desire to see it ended. On the other hand, he has an equally intense conviction of the guilt of Germany in the origin and conduct of this war, and a proportionate desire to punish the huge crime, and check any recurrence. The former feeling leads him to receive with welcome at first thought any move which seems to promise early peace; the latter feeling compels him later to realize that no peace can be made a good peace which after this awful four years' welter of war and foulness may merely bring back international conditions to where they were before August, 1914, and which is to be discussed with German militarism, and with a German army still in being. There must be no misconception left in Germany as to who has won the war, no power left in Germany to soon resume the war, and no agreement made with Germany dependent upon the good faith of the junker caste which forced the war upon the world.

Otherwise, we English-speaking peoples would be breaking faith with our dead. Millions of our men have had their blood shed by the Huns, and the lives of many women and little children have gone too. No stop can be tolerated now which would have any doubt as to the nature of the verdict which we demand upon all that has been done. The splendid lives we have lost call to us from the Flanders battle-fields in the wonderful lines of that noble soldier of our own country, Lt.-Colonel John McCrae, who lies there himself:

In Flanders fields, the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly,
Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie:
In Flanders fields.

Take up your quarrel with the foe!
To you, from failing hands, we throw
The torch. Be yours to lift it high!
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields.

Whatever further sacrifice of life or effort is necessary to make our answer complete, it must be made complete. We shall not fail to answer for ourselves as an American has answered for his country:

Rest ye in peace, ye Flanders dead.
The fight that ye so bravely led
We've taken up. And we will keep
True faith with you who lie asleep,
With each a cross to mark his bed,
And poppies blowing overhead,
Where once his own life-blood ran red—
In Flanders fields.

Fear not that ye have died for naught—
The torch ye threw to us we caught.
Ten million hands will hold it high,
And Freedom's light shall never die!
We've learned the lesson that ye taught
In Flanders fields.
—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Victory bonds mean support for the boys overseas. For that reason make up your mind to buy to the limit.

On October 27th the Canadian people will put their clocks back and on the following day will start to set the Huns back by liberally subscribing to the Victory Loan.

Money is urgently needed to carry on the work of the Children's Aid Society during the coming year. Saturday's tag day should supply the necessary amount.

The Canadians overseas are still driving the enemy back. The least the people at home can do to show their gratitude is to roll up a Victory Loan total that will show the world that Canadians everywhere are in the war to a finish.

Sir Eric Geddes' warning against peace talk is a timely one. "We cannot win this war by talking peace," says the First Lord of the Admiralty.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

THE STICK HABIT.

(London Daily Chronicle.)

The stick habit is much more common in England than in America. In New York, or Boston, or Chicago, or any other English town for that matter, you seldom see a youngish man carry a stick. As a general thing he is too busy to be bothered with a piece of wood in his hand. He carries his paper, of course, and he must have one hand free for a cigar and for raising his hat.

THE GUERRILLAS OF LABOR.

(Springfield Republican.)

Labor must give a thought to its reputation for fairness and good sense and a serviceable loyalty to the country in days like these, for it can never go far without the backing of public opinion in the normal times which will eventually return. The guerillas of labor are alone responsible for unwarranted strikes, and it is a pity that their acts may tend to discredit organized labor as a whole.

ENCLOSE STAMPED ADDRESSED ENVELOPE TO
E. P. ISHERWOOD,

TO FARMERS

The Government has sent out an appeal to the Canadian people to buy at home. Why? Because when we buy abroad more than we sell we have to pay a premium on the excess, in addition to the price of the goods. This is known as an adverse rate of exchange. We have bought four hundred million dollars' worth more from the United States than we have sold to it. The rate of exchange is 2 per cent. against us. In other words, we are paying 2 per cent. on four hundred millions of dollars, or eight million dollars, which means that if we owe a great deal of money for goods bought we have to pay extra for the privilege. If we keep this up Canada will bleed to death. Please inquire into this matter at once.

NORWOOD'S 50TH FAIR ATTRACTED GREAT CROWD AND FINE EXHIBITS

Was Formally Opened by Mr. G. Lockie Wilson, Ontario Superintendent of Agriculture and Horticultural Exhibitions—Fiftieth Anniversary Favoured by Splendid Weather Worthy of the Event—More Than 4,000 Persons on the Grounds—An Historical Reference or Two

"ONE OF THE BEST FAIRS IN THE PROVINCE."

Although the new harvest moon appeared uptilted on one of its crescent tips, a portent of rain according to weather lore, the Norwood Fair yesterday basked in the hazy sunlight of October, except for a few brief hours that were dulled by passing clouds. It was a glorious day befitting the fiftieth anniversary of the East Peterborough Agricultural Society's exhibition. The woods nearby were a lovely harmony of soft shades of brown and red, in contrast with the vivid green of the Fair grounds, verdant as in spring from the recent heavy rains. There was a suggestion of strange apposition of the two opposite seasons with which summer begins and ends, but the warm sunshine, like a thin golden vapour, inspired a feeling of contentment, which, looking neither forward nor in the past, was satisfied with the sensual comforts of the present.

Under the spell of this essential attraction, the success of the semi-centennial exhibition was immediately assured, and the attendance, roughly estimated at over four thousand, piled up the gate receipts to the delight of the directors who, happy and smiling, greeted the crowds that gathered from far and near. Automobiles, parked on the grounds and scattered all over the village, were a striking feature of the progress that has evolved since the days when eggs sold at eight or ten cents a dozen. The motor car predominated, and had the occasion been an automobile show the display would have been exceedingly impressive. Streets near the fair grounds were lined with them. Long double rows on either side formed lanes through which an occasional horse and buggy ambled with an air of dejection, a stranger in the land of gasoline, an anomally almost as conspicuous as the Detroit product might have been in 1868 when the first group of directors expectantly swung the gates open to the exhibitors of an almost forgotten day. From the Fairs that are stored in brief memories, it is more than likely that excepting the automobile and the farm tractors, the directors of a half century ago would have found few variations from the exhibition they conceived. And this applies to any of the fairs in this district and to the disparagement of none of them. There was, too, probably the nucleus of a midway fifty years ago, but it is almost certain that there were no "hot dogs." And it is equally certain that there were wider acquaintanceships than in these latter days which bring hosts of people together only for the moment, and leave them the strangers they were before casual meetings.

J. Lockie Wilson Present.

Coming down to the present, however, Norwood celebrated its fiftieth Fair by inviting Mr. J. Lockie Wilson, of Toronto, Superintendent of Agricultural and Horticultural Exhibitions, Toronto, to officiate at the opening. He was met at the C.P.R. station at noon by the directors and escorted to the Exhibition grounds by the Norwood band, High school cadets and Boy Scouts. It was quite an impressive parade the village presented to the visitors and to Ontario's Superintendent of Fairs. At the grounds, Mr. Wilson addressed the crowd on the subject of the importance of agricultural exhibitions to the farmers and of the great place that agriculture occupies in the world to-day. Afterwards he formally declared the Fair open, and turned to examine the exhibits.

Pleased With the Fair.

Later in the afternoon Mr. Wilson stated to the Examiner that Norwood's Fair was one of the best he had attended this fall. He was pleased with the fine display of grain, roots and poultry, but was a little disappointed with the cattle and horses. His criticism was particularly directed not to the quality of the live stock, but to the lack of careful grooming, that indicates such a pride on the part of the exhibitor that he simply will not send out his stock unless they are carefully cleaned and prepared for showing.

"Perhaps the exhibitors did not have time this year to attend to this important detail," Mr. Wilson observed, "but they might have found a few hours after their work for it."

Mr. Wilson as a breeder of Ayrshire cattle and thoroughbred sheep, recalled his experience as an exhibitor in Eastern Ontario. He was never satisfied with anything but first prize, and invariably won it. "I remember that I used to wash the sheep thoroughly, dry them and comb them, I polished the horns and hoofs, and I felt confident that I could feel proud of them in any exhibition."

A Benefit to the Animals.

Continuing, Mr. Wilson remarked that these attentions were a physical benefit to the live stock. Just as a man feels fresh and clean after a bath, so are the animals refreshed. "And if it is only an annual wash for them, it is that much gained," he laughed.

Mr. Wilson maintained that the agricultural exhibition is a decided advantage to the farmers, particularly when many of them enter into the spirit of the Fair and vie with one another in possessing good stock and keeping them fit. He added that he had visited many of the Exhibitions this season, and could say of Norwood's that it deserved rank with the best of them.

Review of the N. H. S. Cadets.

An interesting part of the afternoon programme was the inspection of the Norwood High School Cadets by Lieutenant-Colonel Everitt Birdsall, who went overseas with the 2nd battalion and was injured in France.

Under the command of Cadet Captain Paul Irwin the boys performed their squad and company manoeuvres with fine precision, and at the conclusion were complimented by Col. Birdsall, who said that it was a great pleasure to review the Cadets, of whom in his High school days he had been captain.

Mr. R. H. Lawlor, principal of the High school has been the instructor of the Cadets since coming to Norwood, and his interest in the work is shown by the fine showing the Cadets made yesterday.

Display of Scouts.

The exhibition by the Norwood Boy Scouts under the direction of their scout master, Rev. R. Manswell Irwin, was an attraction well worth witnessing. The troops won the $20 dollar prize for their drills, camp craft and first aid work. The bandaging prizes were won as follows:

Patrol A—1 R. Greenbank, 2 Eric Elliott, 3 Norman McLean.

Patrol B—1 D. Irwin, 2 H. Baker, 3 R. Garlick.

Patrol C—1 Ross Irwin, 2 Jack Webb, 3 Jack Minore.

Best Cadets.

The prizes awarded to the best set up cadets were won as follows: 1 E Finlay, 2 F. White, 3 J. Raddon.

The Horse Races.

The inevitable horse races lacked this year, in the opinion of the judges, the competitive keenness that makes a rousing race. The directors agreed that hereafter more attention should be paid to this atraction, and bigger purses will doubtless be hung up.

"I have been advocating that for years," said the veteran J. B. Pearce, who declared that the races should receive the best attention in order that speedy horses would be attracted.

It was stated that Warkworth had a card of eleven horses at their Fair with keenly contested races as the result.

Yesterday's heats were as follows:

Open Trot.

"Jim Elliott," W. H. Elmhirst	1	1	1
"Jimmy Shell," A. Elmhirst	2	2	2
"Dan Direct," E. W. Jones	3	3	2

Green Trot.

"Mollie H," R. Huphries	1	1	1
"Clara D'Ora," W. Taylor	2	2	2
"Maggie H," Walter Heath	3	3	3

Dr. Munroe of Warsaw, and Mr. R. J. Munro of Peterborough, had an easy afternoon handling the two trots, but like the keen horsemen they are, longed for more speed and peppery finishes.

Rural School Exhibit.

The rural school exhibit, under the supervision of Mr F. C. McCrae, district representative of the Provincial Department of Agriculture, proved a distinctive feature that should be fostered. The Norwood Fair Board has evidently realized the value of this movement, and the exhibit in a big tent set apart for this feature as highly interesting. The collection of vegetables, grains, fruits, weeds, seeds, woods, insects, sewing, manual training and domestic work were excellent. For example in the samples of woods shown, Miss Grace Cameron of S. S. No. 2 Asphodel had a collection of forty-eight species, all nicely mounted on a large cardboard and correctly named. The samples were three inches long and one inch in diameter and each piece was shown in its two halves.

Farm and Dairy's Exhibit.

The visitors also flocked about the "Farm and Dairy" tent in which was shown the prize winning grains of the competition conducted by this paper. The Government's display of canning interested many of the ladies and the tractor's every little movement was followed by young and old.

The display of carriage horses was not much larger than last year's, but at that the class was large and the entries uniformly good. The circular show ring was lined two and three deep during the judging, and the crowd remained until the last ribbon had been awarded.

Directors Delighted.

Mr. Ed. Hawthorne, president of the Board, and Mr. John E. Roxburgh, secretary-treasurer, and the other directors, too, were highly gratified with the success of this year's fair, and grateful for the weather man's co-operation. Norwood Fair has a reputation for being one of the best country fairs in the province, and to the business ability, breadth of vision, and attention to detail is due their present enviable position. Their reputation is no sounder than their financial standing. The Exhibition they have developed has been a gradual growth, largely the result of the splendid entries which were attracted by the attractive prize lists. This year's prizes total $2,50, a handsome sum for a community the size of Norwood. In short the directors deserve every congratulation upon their fifty years of success. They have realized the ambitions of the founders of the East Peterborough Agricultural Society, and the township of the east riding may well be proud of the position they occupy through the efforts of the Norwood Fair directorate of this and past years.

A Reminiscence.

It is interesting to record some facts regarding the first exhibition of the society, which was held in Norwood in the year 1868. At that time the society did not possess the large grounds and buildings that they now do, and the old township hall was used for exhibition purposes, while the stock was tied around in the yard adjoining. The gate receipts that year were only $145.00, but gradually increased until last year they reached $1400.00, almost ten times the first year's amount.

The first president of the society was the late Francis Birdsall, who remained almost continuously in that office until his death a few years ago, when he was succeeded by Mr. Edward Hawthorne. The first secretary was the late W. E. Roxburgh who held that position for thirty-eight years, when his son, Mr. J. E. Roxburgh, the present secretary succeeded him in that office. In this connection it is singular to note that the same two men (the late John Brackenridge and the late Hugh Neilson) who nominated the late Mr. Roxburgh in 1868 also nominated his son in 1906. Other men who were directors on that first board were: P. M. Grover, Peter Pearce, Thos. Blezard (all deceased), and A. R. Kidd, now of Peterborough.

Some of the Visitors.

While the Norwood band, under the direction of Bandmaster Archie Breault, including Reeve Squire and Mr. Tom Finlay among its musicians, contributed a very creditable programme during the afternoon, the visitors strolled about the grounds, passing from one exhibit to another. Warden Anderson and many of the members of the County Council were present, also Mr. Jas. L. Thompson, M.P.P. for East Peterborough, and Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., County Clerk E. M. Elliott, Mr. M. J. Maher, Mr. J. J. Duffus, Mr. A. H. Stratton, Mr. Walter Stocker and other Peterborough citizens were present. Mr. Wallace B. Cumming, Peterborough County's organizer for the new Victory Loan, improved this splendid opportunity of meeting the leading residents of the eastern part of the county, and of enlisting their services in the promotion of the coming loan.

It need scarcely be remarked that the good roads question, which Mr. Thompson is warming up, was discussed in the little groups that formed and reformed throughout the afternoon, discussing the war, Spanish influenza and ultimately Peterborough County's attitude toward good roads, to the general aspect of which the County Council has already declared its support.

Rarely Have Such Original and Becoming Dress Styles Been Seen

Because of various reasons designers knew they must exert extra efforts if Canadian women were to continue to interest themselves in Fashion. How well they have succeeded can be seen clearly in the new styles for Fall which reflect originality and becomingness in no uncertain degree. For instance, the various combinations that have appeared are most unusual and decidedly novel. And even the navy blue serge dress is brought out in such models as to appear twice as charming as ever before. The new panels, fringe, as well as the satin models bring out all the charm of the newest thoughts.

Victory Loan Campaign For Securing $500,000,000 in Canada, if Possible, Begins

Sir Thomas White Explains Issue in Winnipeg

MINIMUM IS $300,000,000

Bonds Will Return 5 1-2 Per Cent. Interest—All to Be Spent in Canada.

WINNIPEG, October 9. — Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, opened the campaign for the second Canadian Victory Loan with a stirring speech at Winnipeg on Tuesday. The Industrial Bureau was crowded with men and women to hear the Finance Minister speak on the new loan.

Five hundred millions of dollars is the amount required to be raised by the Canadian Government to carry on the war. The minimum amount which the Minister of Finance asks for is three hundred millions of dollars. The larger amount will be raised if possible.

Sir Thomas in his speech announced the terms of the forthcoming war loan as follows:

To be Spent in Canada.

"Through the prospectus of the fifth Canadian war loan—the Victory Loan of 1918—the Dominion of Canada will ask for a minimum amount of $300,000,000 ,with the right to accept all or any part of subscriptions in excess of that sum, to be used for war purposes only, and to be spent wholly in Canada. The rate of interest will be 5 1-2 per cent. per annum, payable May 1, and November 1, and the denominations $50, $100, $500 and $1,000. The loan will be offered in two maturities—five year bonds due November 1, 1923, and fifteen year bonds, due November 1, 1933.

"The issue price will be $100, and accrued interest for both maturities, making the income return 5 1-2 per cent. per annum. Provision is made for payment in five installments as follows: 10 per cent .on application; 20 per cent. December 6, 1918; 20 per cent., January 6, 1919; 20 per cent., February 6, 1919; 31.16 per cent., March 6, 1919.

The Why of 31.16 per Cent.

"The last payment of 31.16 per cent. covers 30 per cent. balance of principal and 1.16 per cent. representing accrued interest at 5 1-2 per cent. from November 10 to due dates of the respective installments. As a full half-year's interest will be paid on May 1 ,1919 ,the cost of the bonds will be $100 and interest. Payment may be made in full at the time of application at $100 without interest, or on any installment date due thereafter, with interest accrued at 5 1-2 per cent .per annum. Bearer bonds will be available for delivery at the time of application to subscribers desirous of making payment in full. Bonds registered as to principal only or as to both principal and interest in authorized denominations, will be delivered to subscribers making payment in full as soon as the required registration can be made.

Free from Taxation.

"Bonds of this issue will be free from taxation—including any income tax—posted in pursuance of legislation enacted by Parliament of Canada, and will carry the privilege of conversion into any future domestic issues of like maturity or longer issued by the Government during the remaining period of the war.

"Subscription lists will open on October 28, 1918, and close on or before November 16, 1918."

Sir Thomas White, in the course of his address, said:

"The Victory Loan is an undertaking of the utmost importance to the people of Canada. Its success is absolutely essential to our continued prosecution of the war and the maintenance of prosperity upon which our war efforts naturally depend. Canada relies on the Victory Loan to enable her to 'carry on.' It is not necessary to speak of the achievements of the Canadian forces in France. Their valour has won the admiration of the world, and will for all time shed lustre upon the name of Canada.

War Run by Finances .

"An army constantly requires food, clothing, ammunition, pay. For these purposes money must be raised. Finance underlies all the operations of war. The main purpose of the Victory Loan is to raise money for the continued prosecution of the war until final victory is achieved. Money can be devoted to no higher purpose than this. The Victory Loan is essential that we may carry on the war.

"There is another and most vital aspect of the matter. The success of the Victory Loan is absolutely essential to the prosperity of Canada, and every class and individual in Canada. Canada is a great producing country. We produce much more than we require ourselves, and have the balance for export. The value of these exports has enormously increased since the outbreak of the war. In the fiscal year 1914, they were $450,000,000. Last year they were over a billion and a half. Our total international trade for 1914 was a billion dollars. Last fiscal year it was two and a half billions.

Spanish Influenza May be Prevented

It is a Duty One Owes to One's Self and to the Community.

The difficulty with this form of influenza is that a very mild case may, by contagion, produce in another individual the very worst form of the disease. That is, a person, who seems to have but a slight cold, may be the Carrier of the Germs.

Those, who are liable to be exposed to the Contagion, should, both for themselves a the sake of their families, take e y precaution to avoid contracting it.

The mouth should be cleansed once or twice a day with an antiseptic wash and the throat gargled with the same.

Also one of Moncur's Capsules for the Prevention of Spanish Influenza should be taken each morning. These Capsules strengthen the system so that the Germs, even though the person is frequently exposed to the contagion, are quite unable to gain a foothold.

However, they are not recommended to cure the disease but only to prevent one from taking it; which they will do if they are taken before the person is already infected. If the prevalent Epidemic strikes Peterborough in full force, these Capsules will save a lot of people from sickness and also prove an enemy to the Undertaker.

Sold at Moncur Drug Store, 407 George St. Next the Royal Bank.

ENGAGEMENT OF JOHN E. KELLERD A REAL TREAT

Packed Houses Likely to See Presentation of Merchant of Venice and Julius Caesar.

The announcement that Mr. John Kellerd, the eminent Shakespearean actor, will appear at the Grand Opera House on Saturday, matinee and night, in "The Merchant of Venice" and "Julius Caesar," is looked forward to with great pleasure by theatre-goers. Mr. Kellerd is so well known in his interpretations of the Shakespearean roles that comment is unnecessary.

There is a curious history attached to the sword worn by John E. Kellerd the Sheakespearean actor, in the character of Hamlet.

Originally the property of the great English tragedian, William Charles Macready, it at one time passed into the possession of Edwin Booth. It was given by Booth to Eben Plympton, who was his favourite leading actor, both in England and America, and was given by Mr. Plympton to Mr. Kellerd with a message, a part of which was: "You are a real fine tragedian—you improve." Mr. Kellerd wore it during his run of 102 performances in New York City a few years ago, and it is a most highly prized possession.

At the matinee, Mr. Kellerd will present "The Merchant of Venice," and at the evening performance, "Julius Caesar." Tickets now on sale.

Says Kaiser Has Abdicated

Persistent Rumours Concerning the "All Highest."

(Special to The Examiner.)

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 10. — Rumors are persistent here that the Kaiser has abdicated.

Rumors of the Kaiser's abdication or serious illness were first current in Europe several days ago. In connection with this it is noted that reports of the overthrow of the Hohenzollerns were expected to be circulated at the same time as the German peace offensive was launched.

Recently the Kaiser was reported so ill that he was forced to cancel all his engagements. A few days later word was received that he had been to Mannheim to make an address and was forced to flee from an air raid, hiding in a cellar.

Helmets Mark Soldiers' Graves

(By United Press

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept 12. (By Mail.)—By their helmets you shall know their graves.

It's the case over the battlefield that stretches north from the Marne over rolling hills covered with grain fields and woods.

As the German forces retired they left many dead behind. American troops following buried these Germans where they fell at the first opportunity. Usually the graves are marked with nothing but a German helmet on the fresh mound of earth.

Sometimes a stick is erected or a cross, depending on the intensity or artillery fire in the region, and the time at the disposal of the "moppers-up." Sometimes the German helmet is on top of the cross. Once on the grave the helmets are untouched.

The American dead were buried in groups farther back when possible. Sometimes this couldn't be done. Then a silent group of doughboys buried their fallen by the roadside.

These, too, are recognized by the helmets on the fresh earth mounds, with crosses at the head, and usually a bottle stuck in the earth into which data regarding the fallen fighter was hastily scribbled and placed by his comrades. Some day it can be gathered and information forwarded to his folks.

Notice Concerning Coal for North Monaghan

Notice re Coal for North Monaghan—

For the information of residents of North Monaghan, I hereby announce that I have secured an allotment of sufficient coal to supply the general percentage as recommended by the Fuel Controller based on my estimate of requirements for the said township. It is desirous that definite information be secured to guard as far as possible against any shortage. I will consider it a favor if those in need of coal furnish me with this information. For convenience in securing this information, I have placed blank application forms at the post office of Claredale and Brownton, also at W. J. Byers' store. Mr. Bruce Johnston, the township clerk, will also accept orders. I request that those wishing coal would make application on or before Wednesday, Oct. 16. The regular prices as arranged by the Fuel Controller shall prevail. Shipments are consigned direct to me from the mines. The first shipment should arrive in the near future. I shall endeavor, as far as possible, to distribute this coal equitably, having regard to the most urgent cases. I am requested by the Fuel Controller to urge farmers having wood lots to provide their own fuel, and also divide with their neighbors. Parties having hot water equipments in their homes must use soft coal. It is urged that all use a portion of same.

I shall be at the Bank of Ottawa on Saturday, Oct. 12, between the hours of 10 and 12 o'clock to receive orders. All transactions are to be in cash. Any moneys accompanying orders shall be placed to the credit of those so doing in the Bank of Ottawa, and only applied as order is filled.

My address is Fred E. Wilson, R. R. No. 5, Peterboro. I shall be pleased to furnish any other information I may receive from time to time, to anyone who requests it.

Fred E. Wilson.

CAPT E. V. FREDERICK

Capt. E. V. Frederick has just arrived home from service in Mesopotamia and India. He is one of several Pterboro doctors who went overseas in a party of 35 medical men early in the war. Originally assistant senior surgeon with No. 1 Stationary Hospital, Capt. Frederick was with the R. A. M. C. at Cairo as a lieutenant in the spring of 1916, and has been given his captaincy since then. He is an M. B. of Toronto Univrsity with class '03.

They Hooverize in the Army Nowadays

(By United Press

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept 16. (By Mail.)—The boys over here are not going to let the folks back home excel in this game of Hooverizing.

The boys have been getting letters from the folks in U.S.A., telling about food saving. Some mothers and fathers and sisters and brothers were going without things they wanted, that the fighters might have more.

To show its appreciation of economy back home, the army has begun a similar campaign to "save grub," as they call it in the ranks.

The campaign is one of saving without denial. Men cannot stand the strain over here if they are denied enough food. But they can save without being stingy.

There are several ways of going at "saving grub" in the army.

One is to avoid over-helpings at the camp kitchen or the mess. The cooks in the army are good scouts, and proud of their creations, and when a doughboy shoves up his plate for a meal, the tendency is for the cook to get enthusiastic and dish out more than any normal man can eat. They are much more careful about helpings now than formerly, and if a man's belt is not tight after his first plate of "chow" he may go back for more

Theyr'e utilizing surplus fat in all meats for cooking grease, instead of just frying it away in smoke.

Crusts of dry bread will make good material for various dishes—probably there'll be more puddings than usual in the army now. It won't make the doughboys mad

The American army has better "chow" than any other in the army now, and the men realize that they are under obligations to the rest of the allies to economize on their food.

Admits Situation is Very Grave

ENEMY PRESS COMMENTS ON PRESIDENT WILSON'S REPLY.

(Canadian Press.)

LONDON, October 10. — "Only military reasons could compel us to accept President Wilson's conditions," says the Cologne Gazette, in commenting on American reply to the German peace offer.

"It is possible that Germany may require counter-guarantees, for example, the evacuation of the colonies occupied by the Allies."

The newspaper continues: "Political and military authorities of the Empire are not going to debate these questions. It is probable that the Chancellor will present to the Reichstag the result of these deliberations. For the moment the hour is too grave to permit of suppositions."

Some men get there because they are pushers, and others because they are kickers.

One American (?) Town Buys No Liberty Bonds

(By United Press

Lancaster, Pa., Oct. 10.—This county of plain sects and conscientious objectors includes probably the only hamlet in the country where a Liberty bond has not been sold nor a war savings stamp disposed of.

Five miles east of New Holland, there rises a bushy, scrubby hill, known as the Welsh Mountain because of its settlers, and now inhabited by about fifty families of negroes.

It was there that Abe Buzzard and his cohorts took refuge when state officers, years ago attempted to round up the notorious horse thieves that were roving eastern Pennsylvania. Crude stone monuments still stand as markers of spots where battles with the constagles were fought.

The negroes are now under spiritual care of a Mennonite minister, and a small mission has been established atop the mountain. But booze and congenial tendencies still combine to create lawlessness, and state constables periodically are called to maintain order.

Dugouts in the side of the mountain, made by horse thieves, when first they sought refuge among the underbrush of the hillsides are still used as dwellings by the negroes of the present day The only regular income the villagers have is the money paid them at the mission for broom making and carpet weaving. These trades were learned by many of the inhabitants while they were "doing time"

They haven't given anything to help finance the war.

Nobody ever thought it worth while to call upon them for a subscription.

OFFICERS LOST LIVES.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Two officers are reported killed and several others were injured, in a fire which destroyed the officers' quarters at Base Hospital No. 3, early to-day, at Colonia, three miles from here. The fire was confined to the officers' quarters and did not spread to the main hospital building. Captain Warren, quartermaster, is reported to be among those burned to death.

Telephone Service and Spanish "Flu"

In common with the general community the operating staff has been affected by the present epidemic of Colds and Influenza, and has been seriously depleted in consequence.

At the same time the volume of telephone calls has greatly increased. So many people are ill at home that the Telephone has been used continuously, and the load of extra calls on our depleted operating force has been very heavy.

Please keep this extraordinary situation in mind, and USE YOUR TELEPHONE ONLY WHEN ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY. You will thus be helping to keep the service intact to meet the urgent needs of the community in the present emergency.

LIGHTEN YOUR WASHDAY LABOR

Comfort and convenience count on washday, perhaps more than on any other day of the week. Anything that will lighten the work is doubly welcome then.

EDDY'S INDURATED FIBREWARE

are labor lighteners. They save time and strength. Incidentally they cost no more.

Eddy's Fibre wash-tubs are easy to lift and easy to carry. They keep the water hot a long time because they do not radiate heat as galvanized iron or tin will do. They cannot leak, because they are made in one piece, without joint or seam. And the cost is actually less because they will outlast several of the old-fashioned kinds of wash-tubs.

Eddy's Twin Beaver Washboards save time by the special crimp which loosens the dirt easily. A washing surface on each side gives them double the efficiency of the ordinary washboard.

When you buy matches look for the name "Eddy" on the box. A kind for every purpose.

"Nuts for Skeptics to Crack" Subject of an Interesting Address by Dr. Honeywell

Largely Attended Meeting at the Tabernacle—Three Delegations Attended the Meeting—Campaign Announcements.

"Nuts for Skeptics to Crack, or Will the Old Book Stand?' was the subject of Dr. Honeywell's address last evening at the Union Evangelistic Campaign in the Brock street tabernacle. His remarks were based on the text, "The grass withereth, the flower thereof fadeth away, but the Word of the Lord abideth forever." As a companion text he took the words, "The tree is known by its fruits."

In opening, Dr. Honeywell pointed out that although there is no nation, no community, no family or individual, that has not been blessed through accepting the teachings of the Scriptures, yet the gospel has been attacked wherever it has been preached. Wherever he has gone through the course of his evangelistic campaigns, he has invariably run up against some of these infidels with their little carping criticisms against the Scriptures. One of the most common objections to accepting the Scriptures is the claim that the Bible teaches that a whale swallowed Jonah, and that this is a physiological impossibility. Dr. Honeywell pointed out that the Scriptures do not say that a whale swallowed Jonah, but that God prepared a great fish for that purpose. The people who find it so hard to accept this statement evidently are unaware that in the British museum there are skeletons of fish, the jaws of which are propped open, and through which it is not only possible for a man to go but also to drive a time of horses and a wagon. In addition, he referred to the book by Prof. Fairchild of Oberlin University on the Book of Jonah, in which proof is given of instances where whales have swallowed men who have afterwards been rescued and lived. Yet in the face of such facts, men continue to strain at accepting the teachings of Scriptures on such a point.

A Frequent Objection.

Another frequent objection to the acceptance of the teachings of the Scriptures is based on the claim of an inability to accept the Gospel record of the immaculate conception. The people who cannot accept this teaching do not, however, object to the well known fact that all drone bees are virginally produced. This is true also of silk worms. Many of the difficulties of skeptics are not such great difficulties after all when they are examined as they are supposed to be.

Dr. Honeywell asked his audience to compare the Bible record of the origin of man with that of the evolutionists. The Bible says in the Gospel of Luke, "Which was the son of Adam, which was the son of God." The evolutionist on the other hand, says, "Which was the son of man, which was the son of a hybrid tailless monkey, which was the son of a fish, which was the son of a frog, which was the son of a protoplasm, which was the son of a biplasm, which was the son of nothing." Dr. Honeywell stated that if some people preferred to trace their ancestors to hybrid tailless monkeys and fish, they were welcome to, but for himself he did not come that way and did not want to be associated with their miserable ancestors. He preferred to trace his genealogy according to the Bible records back to God. Although Darwin's theory of evolution met with wide acceptance at the time, leading scientists of the world were to-day discarding the theory, the president of the King's College in England having stated that the British Museum is simply full of evidences of the falsity of Darwin's claim, and that all progress since Darwin's book was written has been exactly in the contrary direction.

Wonderful Unity.

After pointing out the wonderful unity of the Scriptures, written as they were during a period of some four thousand years by many different writers and comprising 66 books, Dr. Honeywell showed that those who criticize the Scriptures cannot explain how the Scriptures are the only book in the world which have foretold long in advance things which would happen, and which later did happen. No one can read the Bible earnestly without being convicted of sin. He had never seen an infidel but who had some sin. Every one who reads the Bible also soon realizes that God is speaking through it.

Dr. Honeywell stated that he believes the Bible because of what it has done for men. In this connection he named a large number of the world's greatest men including statesmen, medical men and others, all of whom believe implicitly that the Bible is the word of God.

Three Delegations.

Last night's meeting was attended by delegations from St. Paul's, St. James', Mark Street and Park Street churches. Each church was well represented.

At the beginning of the service last night Dr. Honeywell said that he had reason to believe that some people were rather nervous about attending the meetings because of the prevailing epidemic. In this connection he drew attention to the statements of the provincial medical health officers, who have stated that it would be folly to close the schools or other similar public places because these were invariably well ventilated and there was less danger of contagion in them than there would be in other more crowded places not so well ventilated. He pointed out that the Brock Street Tabernacle is large and well ventilated, there being two large cupolas at the top of the rink which are constantly drawing off the air and insuring a change of air.

Campaign Announcements.

This afternoon at three o'clock Dr. Honeywell is to speak in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, and to-morrow at three o'clock Mrs. Russell will speak in the Reid Street Sunday School hall, corner of Charlotte street.

Rev. Mr. Webb announced last evening on the part of the Allocation Committee that next Sunday Dr. Honeywell will speak in the morning in the Gilmour Memorial Church, Mrs. Russell at Park Street Church, Mrs. Dixon in St. Paul's, and Evangelist Kennedy in Mark Street. In the morning Mr. Dixon will sing in the Murray Street Church and then proceed immediately to the Bethany Tabernacle where he will speak. The collection last night amounted to $45.85.

At 5:30 this evening the business girls of the city are to meet in the George Street Sunday School hall where tea will be served, after which there will be addresses by Mrs. Dixon and Mrs. Russell, in the church where a flashlight photo will be taken. Later the girls will walk in a body to the tabernacle. This evening there will be delegations also from such points as Warsaw, Lakefield, Springville and from other churches in outside points. A message received to-day from Lakefield stated that some twenty cars will come down from there bringing about seventy people. Word was circulated there last evening that the schools in Peterborough had been closed and they were telephoning to find out if this was true. This rumour probably grew out of the fact that the public schools were closed to-day on account of the Teachers' Convention.

DOCTORS PREPARE FOR ANY EMERGENCY THAT MAY DEVELOP

The Medical Association at a special meeting last night passed a resolution to support any proclamation the Board of Health may issue for the purpose of preventing the spread of the influenza outbreak in Peterboro. The doctors decided that owing to the limited accomodation of the local hospitals they would treat the milder cases at home. As a precautionary measure the Association is considering several buildings in the city that are available as emergency hospitals if required. It was also decided to secure a list of persons who have had any experience in nursing. Members of the St. John Ambulance Association and others who would be of service in the event of a serious epidemic in Peterboro are requested to report to the Medical Officer of Health. There were some of the matters considered last night as a forehanded movement to be prepared for any emergency

World Happenings

(Special to The Examiner.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—It may be stated on the highest authority that there willbbe no extended note writing between the President and Germany. Germany must answer the President's recent inquiry frankly and to the point or the discussion will stop. On this point the American people may rest absolutely assured, it is stated.

NATIONAL AUTONOMY.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 10.—It is reported from Vienna that the Austro-Hungarian Ministerial Council has decided to introduce national autonomy "in order to make President Wilson's stipulation an accomplished fact," says a telegraph despatch from Copenhagen to-day. The Czech party did not take part in deliberations, advices add. It is holding an important meeting to-day.

ANOTHER RUMOUR.

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10. — Rumours without official substantiation in any form said to-day General Ludendorff had suffered a temporary physical collapse and as a result had to relinquish his command of the German armies.

DON'T SCOLD, MOTHER! THE CROSS CHILD IS BILIOUS, FEVERISH

LOOK AT TONGUE! IF COATED, CLEAN LITTLE STOMACH, LIVER, BOWELS.

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if the tongue is quoted; this is a sure sign its little stomach and liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, does not eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs,' and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative,' and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, mother! A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs,' which has directions for babies, children of all ages, and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

WHEN ONE SHOVELFUL IS WORTH TWO

(By U. S. FUEL ADMINISTRATION.)

"A PENNY saved is a penny earned."

Apply this reasoning to something more important than even pennies are just now—coal.

A ton of coal saved is a ton mined.

We face war's stern demand for this Winter. The gap between the 50,000,000 tons obtained by increased production from the mines and the excess war demands for 100,000,000 tons is 50,000,000 tons of coal. We must obtain 50,000,000 tons more than we had last year!

But how?

The miners are working as never before to mine the coal and are producing more coal than has ever been mined in the history of the world.

So, instead of grumbling, "Why doesn't the Government mine more coal if it needs it?" let use begin now to supply the coal needed by saving it in our cellars.

One of the best ways to do this is not to build our furnace fire so early this year Try to get along without it until Winter is really here. Close up the coldest rooms. If need be, build a fire in the fireplace of faggots or driftwood. Wear warmer clothing.

Remember, every ton of coal you save helps toward winning the war.

THE GIRLS' DOUGHNUT SHOP WAS BOMBARDED

Salvation Army Canteen Girl at the Front.

(Written for the United Press)

WITH THE AMERICAN TROOPS AT THE FRONT, Sept. 17 (By Mail.)—A few nights ago we had another taste of war. We had been lulled into a false sense of security by an unusually quiet week, very little artillery, no barrages at all, and very little air fighting.

In fact the pans in our kitchen had not been rattled for days, and we were ready to forget we were at the front, except for soldiers and the necessity for keeping out of observation of German lookout posts on the hills opposite us.

All of a sudden, at midnight, the big guns let loose in a box barrage about a mile and a half from us at the nearest point. At the same time they shelled all the villages in a circle about us.

We hurried into our clothes and went down to the barbed wire entanglements in a neighboring field. There we were comparitively safe, as long as we lay flat to the ground so that eclat could not reach us if shells came nearer. We could also get a fine view of the fireworks.

It was wonderful, and solemn, too, when one thought of it. The night was blue black and with each retaliating shot from our guns great orange flames darted and disappeared into the blackness We remained perfectly silent while we watched.

My heart always speeds up as I watch such a sight and realize what it is meaning to our boys out there in the trenches.

After an hour of the most brilliant artillery display I have ever seen, we went to bed and tried to sleep, but too many whining shells passed over head for that. I didn't tell Mrs. Sheppard, the inspector from Boston, who was with us, that the shells were incoming, because it was her first experience under shell fire, and we didn't want to scare her to death. But my sister and I knew what they were.

At the same time we were watching just where those shells were landing. Just as dawn was breaking, which is early in France, the church bell and the klaxons sounded above the noise of bursting shells and we knew a gas attack was on.

Gladys and I donned our masks, and then discovered Mrs. Sheppard could not get hers on. Investigation showed she did not have it far enough under her chin, and her nose clip could not find home. Gladys turned on the flashlight while I tried to make the clip and Mrs. Sheppard's nose connect.

Finally the junction was made and we realized she was safe and ungassed. Then our relief wanted to vent itself in laughter, and we giggled until we were afraid we would blow off our respirators I had to dress with my gas mask on, and it was more like an obstacle race than anything I have yet attempted.

Before long the all-clear signal was given an we knew the gas was gone though the guns still sounded around us. It was now perfectly light, and we hurried to the kitchen to make a fire and get hot chocolate and food for any wounded who might come through.

In a short time some boys did arrive, slightly wounded, and well enough to stop a few moments for hot drinks and sandwiches. They were glad we had something to give them, for the poor boys showed the strain they had been under, and they were immensely appreciative of something hot to eat and drink.

DR. AMYS CLOSES THEATRES AND THE TABERNACLE

Appeals to Churches to Co-operate in Public Movement to Check Outbreak of Influenza.

SCHOOLS ARE CLOSED

Actuated only by a desire to safeguard the health of the public, Dr. Amys this afternoon ordered all theatres and the Brock Street Tabernacle closed until Tuesday, October 15th. This drastic step is taken in the hope that the outbreak of influenza may be immediately checked, and the Medical Officer of Health earnestly appeals to the citizens for their whole-hearted co-operation in an united effort to stem the epidemic at its present stage.

Consulted Authorities.

Dr. Amys stated that it was not until he had carefully considered all aspects of the local situation that he made his decision this afternoon. He consulted the Medical Association and members of the Board of Health, and convinced himself that the wisest and safest course was that which he has adopted.

Schools Are Closed.

The closing order is simplified by the fact that the schools of the city will be empty until next Tuesday to permit the teachers to attend their County Convention to-day and to-morrow, and the holiday is fortuitously prolonged by the incidence of Thanksgiving Day on Monday. Thus the question of closing the schools was settled before hand, and it is now urged that the people assist in every way possible to take the fullest advantage of the order and the favourable weather that is promised for the week-end.

Appeal to the Churches.

Dr. Amys added that he hesitated to include the churches in the order. Several of the members of the Ministerial Association had assured him that they would endorse any restriction he felt it his duty to impose.

For the present, however, Dr. Amys simply requests the churches to hold only one mid-day service on Sunday, dispensing with Sunday School and the evening service. This recommendation or request is presented to the church people solely in their own and in the interest of the general public, that the epidemic may be abated. Dr. Amys believes that by immediate, concerted action the outbreak may spend itself by Tuesday, and the danger to the community be ended. It is pointed out that co-operation now may obviate the necessity of more stringent measures if the present restrictions prove unavailing.

To Employers.

Dr. Amys also directs these cautions to the employers in the city. He mentioned the case of one girl who with inflamed eyes and sneezing should have been at home. She spoke of quitting work, but her foreman advised her to remain until noon at least. It is in the interests of the factories that they send home the mild cases in order that the other employees may be protected as much as possible. By such general co-operation Peterborough may escape the serious degree with which the epidemic has crippled many of the communities in this province causing widespread distress and many deaths.

Party of Soldiers Come Home Quietly

A party of Peterboro soldiers reached home yesteday from Kingston and were met at the statoin by Ald. Worth, chairman of the City's Reception Committee. Ald. Worth provided for their conveyance to their homes, and warmly welcomed the boys. Every effort to obtain the names of this party were only partially successful. One of them was Private Moscrop of the Original 2nd Battalion. Private Ernest Cook, one of the men who returned home yesterday, went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and was wounded at Vimy Ridge. Since that time he has been undergoing treatment in a number of hospitals in England. He was shot through the leg and part of the bone was carried away. Pte. Cook is a nephew of Mr. Chas. Noyes. His youngest and eldest brother have been killed in France ,and two others are in the navy.

HEARTS OF THE WORLD COMING TO PETERBORO SOON

Some Facts Regarding D. W. Griffith's Latest and Best Film—Taken at the Front.

More than 120,000 feet of film were taken, although only 12,000 feet are used in the production.

David Wark Griffith was the first American ever to set foot in the front line trenches. This was, of course, before the United States entered the war.

Fifty per cent. of the net profits from the exhibition of the film in England, goes to the British government for war purposes.

There is no papier machie scenery, nor any artificial scenery of any kind used in the production; no studio "props," no super-numeraries, no "fakes" or artificialities whatsoever throughout the entire film.

Mr. Griffith describes "Hearts of the World" as "A story of the great war," with the actual conflict itself serving only as the grim background for the unfolding tale of life in a small French village.

The story of "Hearts of the World" was written by M. Maston de Tolignac, and translated from the French by Captain Victor Marier. The story is in two parts.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—At the request of Mrs. Knox, in charge of the Children's Aid Tag Day, I have much pleasure in asking permission of the public to call its attention to the annual collection to be made on Saturday. The record of the Society is before the people, and I am sure it is really not necessary to do more than to remind the public, as Mrs. Knox requests me to do, that Saturday is The Children's Tag Day.

MINISTER OF JUSTICE AND THE "RACING FORM"

The Minister of Justice is being strongly urged to bar from Canada a publication called "The Daily Racing Form," which gives racing tips. It has already been refused the mails but still enters Canada by express and thousands of copies are sold on the streets of the leading cities. It is claimed that in view of the fact that racing is prohibited in Canada it is inconsistent to allow this publication to enter the Dominion.

Spanish Influenza on the Increase in Peterboro

Several Additional Cases Reported to the Medical Fraternity—Nurses Stricken.

The doctors in the city are divided in their opinions of the severity of the influenza epidemic. Dr. E. E. Harvey considers it a serious thing needing immediate drastic measures to suppress. He himself has attended six cases all of which are very serious and thinks all public meetings should be suppressed.

PUBLIC PANIC STRICKEN

Dr. T. P. McCullough said that he thinks the public has become more or less panic stricken and taken a cold seriously because of the prevalent scare. He has just returned from New York where there is so much of the disease reported and is in excellent position to express an opinion. He said that two or three days sunshine like we had today ought to go to long way towards ending the coughs and colds.

SHOULD CLOSE THEATRES

Dr. Edward Wood said that he has had about ten cases which he is sure is the genuine 'flue'. Th first few cases are traceable to outside sources and have been handed around to others. He considers the closing of the theatres absolutely essential towards stamping out the disease and preventing the spreading of it.

DRUGGIST SOLD OUT

The stock of camphor, at the local drug stores was almost exhauster last night through a steady stream of people using it as a precaution against the 'influ' at one drug store the entire stock the proprietor had bought for the winter ran out yesterday and several other druggists after borrowing supplies from one another had to admit they were through. Some idea of the rapid demand may be got by the fact that in two hours 32 squares were sold at a George street store.

CASES IN THE CAMPS

(Special to The Examiner)

WASHINGTON, Oct 10.—Nearly 200,000 cases of Spanish influenza in the army camps have been reported to date, it was announced to-day. Yesterday 13,605 cases were added to the list, making the total 198,799 reported since Sept. 13.

Red Cross officials and government specialists are co-operating in an effort to quell the spread of the malady Protective measures against spread of the epidemic have been ordered enforced in many municipalities.

TO PREVENT INFLUENZA.

Influenza is present in a number of widely separate districts, and as we have no means of checking its progress, the chances are that it will spread all over the country. Everyone should therefore get him or herself into the best defensive condition and should also know what to do if attacked.

The disease is very contagious and the first measure is to avoid infection as far as possible. The microbe is present in enormous numbers in the nose and upper part of the air passages, and when a sufferer coughs or sneezes or uses a handkerchief the infection is spread broadcast. We cannot all keep away from infection, but it will be found that the majority of those becoming infected have been below par physically at the time of contact, therefore it should be the duty of the press of Canada to enlighten the public as to the best means to combat the disease.

Last June and July this same infection was rampant in Great Britain, and below are some of the measures to stamp it out, viz.,

Keep the mouth shut.

Avoid both indigestion and hunger.

Be cheerful but avoid crowds and public places.

Get a good night's rest and don't get over-fatigued.

Walk to and from work and be in open as much as possible.

Eat plenty of vegetables and fruit.

Have windows open both at work and at home.

Smoke very little, as this lowers nerve power and the resistance of the nose, throat and mouth to infection.

Infection comes in through nose, mouth and eyes, therefore disinfect these two or three times daily, the nose with boric ointment, the mouth with an antiseptic wash, and bathe the eyes with boric lotion.

On first symptom of infection go to bed immediately and do not attempt to fight it off.

FOOD BOARD FLASHES FOR FEMININE FOLK

Just how serious food conditions are in Germany may be judged from a recent examination of samples of bread at the Chemical Institute of Research in Leipzig. The following foreign bodies were found to be present in the bread: Feathers, thread, wadding, lysol, paper, wood, straw, gypsum, chalk, splinters and sand. Indeed, the bread of one large bakery contained about 13 per cent of copper in the form of verdigris

Germans Withdrawing on Hundred Mile Front

Between Cambrai and Rheims Huns Look for Another Line—Foe Tries Countless Machine Guns to Slacken Allied Push.

ALLIES ADVANCE FOUR MILES N. E. OF ST. QUENTIN

B(y John De Ghant.

PARIS, Oct. 11.—The Germans are reported to be withdrawing on wide sectors along the hundred-mile front between Cambrai and Rheims. They are employing countless machine guns to slacken the allied push.

Towards Guiz, the allies are accentuating their progress, and are reported to have reached the Sambre-Oise canal. (This represents an additional advance of about four miles, north-east of St. Quentin.) The railway from Laon to Maubeuge, via Guiz, is now under shell fire.

North-east of Vailly, Gen. Mangin is advancing on the roads toward Craonne.

BENT ON DESTRUCTION ARE BEATEN GERMANS

With the Anglo-American Forces, south-east of Cambrai, Oct. 11.—The powerful mines which the Germans had placed under Cambrai seem to have been set with a time fuse, the idea being so to complete the destruction started by fire and to kill as great a number of the allied soldiers as was possible.

The explosion went off with a roar under the centre of the town after it had been occupied by the British. The crash and detonation were seen and heard for miles.

Great damage, the exact extent of which has not yet been determined, was done in Cambrai. More French civilians have been freed from the Germans. Some of the inhabitants of the town rushed out to meet the marching British and greeted them with cheers and tears.

Not many German prisoners are now coming in, for the bulk of the Teutons, even machine gunners in many cases, fled for their lives as the British and Americans approached.

As the allied troops advanced the opposition became less and less and finally died away entirely at many parts of the front on which the drive was being made.

SAME HERE, OLD CHAP

(By United Press.)

London, Oct 1. (By Mail.)—"Hello, Central, are you there?"

Nine times out of ten she isn't, and that's because there's a war on.

So many telephonists are getting married lately that all the exchanges are under-staffed.

Bright, alert girls now join the army or navy telephone service, and it is not surprising that their marriage prospects become greater.

The lure of the telephone may not be marriage so much as the comfortable conditions of work, but the claims of love prove too strong for many and that is why you have to jab the telephone receiver before you get the answer to your query "Are you there, Central?"

She is there, but not so abundantly as in pre-war days.

WAR HELPS JAP BANKS

Tokio, Sept. 5. (By Mail.)—When Japan entered the war in 1914, the deposits in the postal savings banks totalled $100,386,000. Today the $250,000,000 mark has been passed, it is announced by the department of communications. The depositors have increased in number from 12,070,907 to 18,464,431.

These banks were established in 1875. After a third of a century, in June, 1908, the $50,000,000 mark was reached. The war's effect is patent: in January, 1917, the level of $150,000,000 was attained, and in October, 1917, deposits amounted to $200,000,000. The average deposit has grown from $7.75 to $13.55.

Changes in the Presidency of the Canadian Pacific

Mr. Grant Hall Becomes Vice-President of the Company.

MONTREAL Que. October 11. — Lord Shaughnessy remains chairman of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. E. W. Beatty is now President.

At a meeting of the directors held in Montreal yesterday Lord Shaughnessy, after twenty years of office, resigned the presidency of the Canadian Pacific Railway, although still retaining the position of chairman of the company, so that while relieved of executive duties he will continue to serve with his counsel and experience.

This change is due to Lord Shaughnessy's conviction that in view of the extensive programme planned by the Canadian Pacific for the period of reconstruction after the war the best interests of the company would be served if a younger man were to assume the active direction of so large and complete a system. Although several years older than either of his predecessors were at the time when they retired from the presidency, he decided when the war broke out, to carry on the work. Now, however, he feels less hesitancy in handing over the executive responsibility to a successor especially to one who has such intimate knowledge of the affairs of the company, who has shown notable administrative ability and who enjoys to a marked degree the confidence not only of the political and business leaders of Canada, but also the employees of the Canadian Pacific Ry. itself.

Mr. E. W. Beatty, the new president, has been a vice-president in council and the director of the Canadian Pacific Ry. Co. for several years.

Sir George Bury, on account of ill-health, is retiring from the office of vice-president, and Mr. Grant Hall, who has been vice-president in charge of the western lines, has been appointed in his place.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards— Receipts yesterday, 60 cars, with 250 cattle, 87 calves, 1,949 hogs, and 1,212 sheep and lambs.

With practically nothing in the market yesterday but common thin cattle, trade was very draggy, and in order to clean up, further concessions had to be made on the poorest lots. There is a fair demand for choice butcher killing cattle, and anything under this head steady at the declines of earlier in the week. Choice quality heavy steers seem to be in demand at good prices.

Very good quality stockers and feeders sell well, but the bulk of the feeders now being shipped to market are being sacrificed at far too low prices, considering what the needs of the market will be later on.

Lambs were very weak yesterday, and about a dollar lower.

Hogs unchanged, but the market is weak.

BY JANE PHELPS

RUTH UNSUCCESSFULLY ATTEMPTS KEEPING HOUSE

CHAPTER X.

Ruth repeated her little speech about changing the paper as they walked slowly back to the hotel. Brian flushed, looked uneasy, then finally said:

"We'll do it after a while. But we can stand it for a little bit. Anything is better than living at that hotel, spending all I can earn, and getting nothing for it."

It flashed across Ruth's mind that Brian had the same answer for everything. He would do it—sometime in the future. She wandered when, then dismissed the thought as unloyal.

They spent the next day buying the necessary furniture, so that they could move right in. With unerring taste, Ruth obstinately refused to have anything but the simplest, the most unpretentious furniture.

"We will either have to give it away or sell it pretty soon," she said when Brian, lacking in artistic sense would have her buy the more ornate pieces when the price was the same, "and then, too, it will be more appropriate to the rooms."

"All right! I told you you should fix it as you liked," Brian returned with condescension.

As she liked! Ruth could have screamed with laughter. Why she could not have one single thing she wanted. Then she looked at Brian. Tall, virile, handsome. He was worth more than everything else. She ought to be ashamed to feel as she did. Surely, he would soon be able to give her all she had been accustomed to—even to sending for old Rachel? To tell the truth, Ruth had shed tears several times from sheer lonliness and the desire for her old mammy.

But finally they had all the absolutely necessary things with which to begin housekeeping. So, on Wednesday morning, they set up their Lares and Penates in the five-room flat, and proceeded to take up the serious business of home-making.

How Ruth struggled and toiled to make the place what she considered livable. She knew nothing of cooking and the first few days she spoiled the food and burned her hands. Brian wanted clear expenses, badly fed developed a spirit of fault-finding which finally got on Ruth's nerves to such a degree that she went to bed and sent for the janitress.

"I can't cook a decent thing! I don't blame my husband. No one could eat the things I have offered him," she wailed.

"It's sorry I am, I haven't got the time to learn you. But they has them fine cook books, now, that tells you everything to do."

Ruth had not thought of a cook book. Her aunt's cooks, experts, had not depended upon cook books to prepare their meals. But she would get one at once. She at least could read, and had common sense enough to follow directions. So she jumped up and dressed for the street before she remembered she had but 50 cents in her pocket book.

"Oh, I forgot to ask for some money!" she exclaimed.

"I can let you have a dollar."

"Oh, can you? That will be fine. I'll give it back as soon as my husband comes home," and tucking the dollar bill in her purse with her fifty cent piece, she started out.

When she returned she carried a book under her arm. It was nearly dinner time, and she was tired. But she hurriedly slipped out of her street clothes into one of her simplest negligees—which, simple as it was, looked terribly out of place in the small kitchen—and started her dinner.

At half past six, when Brian came in, Ruth was almost exhausted; but an eatable dinner was on the table. She had selected some simple ways of cooking her meat and vegetables, a rice pudding for dessert. As she had followed the directions faithfully they were all well cooked, and really deserved the praise Brian bestowed.

"You will be a famous cook in no time," he told her, as he kissed her flushed face. He noticed that she ate nothing, and that, when they rose from the table, she halted as she carried the dishes to the kitchen to be washed.

"Perhaps, but I doubt it," she had retusned, "I have a notion, Brian, that to do anything really well—to become famous, as you say—one must like their job. And I hate housework. I hate cooking! I hate every single thing about it!"

"You'll feel differen after you have learned how. No one likes to do things they are unfamiliar with." He had been surprised at her vehemance, but was interested in something he was reading, so paid no further attention.

Ruth carried the dishes out, then stood a moment looking at him reading his paper so comfortably. Without a word, she went down stairs and asked Mrs. Murphy if she would come up and wash her dinner things.

"I just cannot do it! I am so tired," she told her, and Mrs. Murphy agreed to come up in a few minutes, although she didn't know how she was to spare the time.

"Brian, give me a dollar. Mrs. Murphy let me have one to-day to buy a cook book. She is coming up to clear away for me, and I want to return it."

To-morrow—Brian Tells Ruth What He Earns. They Plan To Use It To Advantage.

HIS FRIEND THE RAT.

The Mine Disaster Story That Went With a Stuffed Rodent.

Any man who will keep a stuffed rat in his room wherever he goes must have a story to tell about the rat. This man has.

"This story," he said, "concerns an experience that made my hair curl. I am an engineer. I was once retained to report upon the working of a mine in southern Arizona. The mine was called the Barbara. On an adjoining claim was another mine called the Hyperion. A dispute arose. The Hyperion people claimed that the lower levels of the Barbara had been bored into their ground and half a dozen fortunes in ore taken out of their mine.

"The first thing to do was to make a survey of the Barbara. The Barbara people, of course, objected. Finally, an order for the survey was secured from the court, and I was sent, with a man named Jim Banks, to make the survey.

"There are tricks in all trades, and the Barbara representative knew a few in his. When we reached the mine he said that the tunnel we wished to explore was in a dangerous condition. There had been a cave-in, the timbers were rotted, and so on.

"We classed him as a liar, though he turned out to be right. We worked our way into the tunnel until we ran against a jam of fallen timbers. The timbers, however, were sound and had plainly been arranged to stop our progress. Banks went back for an ax, while I worked at the roof with a pick to dislodge the center pieces.

"I succeeded and had climbed halfway over into the other side of the tunnel when there came a terrific crash of loose ore from the roof. It fell on both sides of the timbers, pinning me in a hole which would have been a grave but for a few sticks which held the mass of ore above.

"The place was barely large enough to move in, and I knew it was certain death in a few hours unless Banks could dig me out.

"The foul air was getting into my brain, and I think I was actually insane with the fearful dread of being buried alive.

"I had given up all hope and was almost swooning when I heard a strange, scraping sound above me. I yelled, but received no answer. With new energy I threw my body against the walls and tried to pick out the ore from between the lodged timbers. Still came the queer scraping noise, which seemed to come nearer and sounded not unlike the steady grinding of a saw. It seemed to last for hours, though it could hardly have been a minute after when a bit of earth dropped to my feet from the upper end of the wall, and along with it came a big gray mine rat.

"That rat saved my life, for he left a clear hole for his trail, and through it came a breath of fresh air that gave life to me. The fellow had bored his way through from the shaft side of the cave. I stayed there two hours after that, until Banks found the cave, got help and dug me out without breaking the airhole.

"I caught the gray rat too. I kept him fed up like a king until he died, and I wouldn't take a lot of money for his skin now."

When Seals Were Food.

The gray seal used to serve Cornishmen as an article of diet. Stephen Hawker tells how he and a brother clergyman, having asked a landlady at Boscastle what she could give them for dinner, were told "Meat and taties." They tried to get her to particularize the meat, but "Meat, nice, wholesome meat, and taties" was the full extent of her information. When the meat was served it tasted like veal, but was unaccompanied by any vestige of bone that might have enabled the diners to infer its origin. Years afterward Hawker lighted on the nature of the "meat" when he read in an old history of Cornwall that "the people of Boscastle do catch divers young sorles, which, dontiful if they be fish or flesh, corrupe housewives will nevertheless roast and do make thereof savory meat."—London Graphic.

Twenty Years of Pleasure.

St. Michael's church, Macclesfield, England, is noted for its beauty. In "The Manchester and Glasgow Road" Charles G. Harper tells of a curious epitaph in the churchyard upon one Mary Broomfield, who died in 1755, aged eighty. It reads as follows:

"The chief concern of her life for the last twenty years was to order and provide for her funeral. Her greatest pleasure was to think and talk about it. She lived many years on a pension of ninepence a week and yet saved £5, which at her request was laid out at her burial."

How About Your Danger Zone?

YOU'VE got it—every human being is born with it—your large intestine, or colon. It is a large tube—a reservoir or sewer—intended to collect waste matter and remove it from the body.

Plug it up with waste, neglect it, and you're sick on your feet. The waste matter stagnates, undergoes decay, fermentation and germ action. Dangerous poisons are produced, that can easily be absorbed and carried all over the body.

Allow constipation to become established, and you are liable to become definitely and miserably sick — and not on your feet either. You have broken Nature's laws.

Better be kind to her. Keep the danger zone clean, with a regular bowel movement, and Nature will thank you, and pay you back in gold coin—health, good-nature, and a feeling of eagerness for your daily task.

A large proportion of almost every form of sickness is caused or made worse by the poisons produced as a result of constipation.

Nujol has the approval of established medical practice, because it does not upset the system as do pills, castor oil and purgative mineral waters, salts, etc. It softens the contents of the colon, making them easy for the intestinal muscles to move at regular hours. Don't fight Nature. Help her. Nujol is health insurance for tens of thousands of American families today. Sold at drug stores everywhere.

Warning:

NUJOL is sold only in sealed bottles bearing the Nujol Trade Mark. Insist on Nujol. You may suffer from substitutes.

Your "exact" figure

It would be folly to try and fit your figure with a Type A Suit if you were tall and weighed over 170. It would be ludicrous to attempt to fit a Semi-ready Type B Suit on a man who is short and stout.

There are Seven physique Types—seven distinct and separate designs; we have added an eighth, called a "stub" figure.

The purpose is to fit all men in Semi-ready Tailored Clothes—to give a fit as perfect as can be made to measure after a try-on by the best custom tailor.

THE COST: The label price in the pocket is the same here as at the door of the Semi-ready shops—the same price everywhere.

TO FARMERS

The Government has sent out an appeal to the Canadian people to buy at home. Why? Because when we buy abroad more than we sell we have to pay a premium on the excess, in addition to the price of the goods. This is known as an adverse rate of exchange. We have bought four hundred million dollars' worth more from the United States than we have sold to it. The rate of exchange is 2 per cent. against us. In other words, we are paying 2 per cent. on four hundred millions of dollars, or eight million dollars, which means that if we owe a great deal of money for goods bought we have to pay extra for the privilege. If we keep this up Canada will bleed to death. Please inquire into this matter at once.

LOSES CHICKEN FINDS RASPBERRIES

Experiences of a Peterboro Man at The Bobcaygeon Fair

During the Bobcaygeon Fair, Harry Lush, one of our big poultry exhibitors from Peterboro, had the misfortune to lose a chicken, so Harry thought he had better take a stroll over the little Hill behind the fair grounds and see if he could'n't locate it. While Harry was going through the bushes, he noticed a lot of red things on the bushes, but he could not believe they were berries, and he always thought the raspberry season was in the early part of the summer, so he tasted them and sure enough they were raspberries It is needless to say that Harry spent the remainder of his time picking raspberries for Mr Lush.

If any one has seen this rooster since the fair will they leave word at this office or communicate with Mr. Lush, Peterboro.

Report on Farm Conditions Issued by the Department

Cattle Are Still Putting on Flesh—Milk Cows Are In Strong Demand—Weather Delays Harvesting of Fall Crops.

The following is a summary of reports made by agricultural representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

The corn crop has come through the season surprisingly well. The wet weather increased the growth of stalk considerably and while in most sections the leaves were killed by light early frosts, the ears continued developing to a most satisfactory degree. In fact, the general opinion is that unless cutting is further delayed by rainy weather, there will be full supply of nutritious corn ensilage. Most of the husking corn in the south-western counties was got in unharmed.

The seeding of fall wheat is still proceeding. That which is up looks very promising, especially early sown, which has a good top. This is particularly the case in the premier fall wheat county of Kent.

Brant reports the fall weather as having been too catchy for beans, some of which are still in the fields, which is likely to affect the colour and market quality. The yield, however, will be fair.

Buckwheat Suffering.

In some localities buckwheat is also suffering from the wet weather.

Essex reports that tomatoes are yet being delivered to the factories in fair quantity.

Cattle are still putting on flesh on the good fall pastures and are likely to go into winter quarters in good condition. Kent reports feeders being purchased at 11c. a lb., and in Lambton six carloads of stockers arrived from Western points during the week.

Milch cows are in strong demand, but are comparatively scarce. The York representative states that a number of milking machines are being put in by dairymen.

Dufferin and York report a good number of hogs coming along. Prices generally have slightly fallen during the week.

Poultry are also in good supply and in fair demand.

The marketing of grain has become more active, but less hay is being disposed of.

Fodder supplies generally are sufficient for the winter and are being helped out by the excellent late pastures.

Wet weather has been delaying the harvesting of fall crops, although some progress has been made in lifting roots. Corn cutting and silo filling are also taking up much labour. Fall ploughing is about two-thirds done, generally speaking, but some farmers are reported as having already exceeded last year's area.

Says 50 Cents Limit For Pound Butter

Recent Commandeering Order Will Have Slight Effect.

How slight the effect will be on home supplies of butter of the recent commandeering order is shown in a statement by the Chairman of the Canada Food Board. Incidentally, the facts given also show how great is the uncovered field for national butter export.

"The quantity of creamery butter which may be taken under the commandeering order," he said, "will probably not exceed 120,000 packages of 56 pounds each. An authority who has been consulted by the board believes that Canadian consumptions of butter could profitably be reduced 25 per cent. If that measure were adopted, it would release for export 56,000,000 pounds per year. Another of our technical advisors states that national consumption averages 28 pounds a head per year, so that the cut required to enable this addition to our exports to be made would only mean seven pounds for each person in the 52 weeks."

Mr. Thompson added that "from information in the possession of the board it is seen that prices of butter purchased by wholesalers now run between 43c. and 44c. a pound. The wholesaler cannot, under Order 45 or food regulations, charge more than 10 per cent. gross profits in his re-sale, and this with all carrying charges included should not make the price to the retailer more than from 49c. to 50c. If a dealer should charge more the overplus can be recovered by action at law. With these figures in mind, consumers may see whether or not they are being charged fair prices."

There are about 20,000,000 pounds of creamery butter in cold storage for supplying the home population.

Publicity or Bankruptcy?

Bradstreets statement that 84 per cent of all failures are among non-advertisers is significant.

Intelligent advertising has become absolutely essential to every modern industry—

But what shall the advertiser do in the face of war conditions, when he finds it difficult to get goods to fill his orders?

First of all, remember that the fundamental purpose of advertising is to fix indelibly the trade mark or the trade name in the public mind.

A let-up in that campaign must be fatal to any product.

The American Rolling Mill Company declares its purpose to continue its advertising, although for two and a half years it has been unable to supply the demand for its product.

"We are building," they say, "a permanent business edifice, and some day we would have to spend millions of dollars buying back the business and goodwill of our clients if they are forsaken in this emergency."

Unless advertising is kept up without break the advertiser loses the results of all previous effort.

Here is a warning to the advertizer who neglects the dull season in summer—

When advertisements are fewest is the very time when a message to the public may get the most attention, providing, of course, that the character of the advertising deserves it.

WHAT IS AMORTIZATION?

The Method of Providing For the Repayment of a Loan.

Every now and then the plain man who has saved a little money and wants to invest it so that he will get a reasonable and safe return runs against a nest of terms which are bewildering and all but meaningless. I'm afraid he usually passes by without taking the trouble to understand them.

Take the word "amortization." I hold that it's no shame to any man not to know what that word means. And yet to investors the word is highly important.

"Amortization" means simply the method of providing for the repayment of a loan. If you lend me $10,000, which I promise to repay in ten years, you have a right to be interested in my plans for meeting the demand for the $10,000 which you expect to make upon me ten years hence.

So I say to you:

"I am going to amortize that $10,000 debt in this way: Out of my earnings every year I'm going to set aside $900. Each year I will set the $900 to work earning something too. At the end of ten years the fund will amount to just enough to discharge my debt."

You will find that specialists in bonds use the word a great deal. They know better than anybody else its importance. They realize that a borrower of money for a long term of years is very apt to forget to make provision for repayment.

Certain lenders of money on long terms insist upon the borrower's taking out a life insurance policy big enough to meet the debt in case of death before the debt becomes due. Generally the longer a debt has to run the more important becomes the question of "amortization."—John M. Oskison in Chicago News.

NAVAJOS FEAR THE DEAD.

Hence They Get Rid of Their Bodies as Quickly as Possible.

One practice of the Navajos that promotes health among them, however repugnant it may be for us, is their disposition of the dead. In the presence of the living the Navajo is without fear, but his terror of the dead is abject and unreasoning. The dead are believed to be possessed of malevolent feelings toward the survivors, with unlimited powers for working evil upon those who carelessly place themselves within the power of the spirits.

So when any one dies the only anxiety of the surviving relatives is to get rid of the body as quickly as possible. If there are any white men living in the neighborhood an effort is made to induce them to perform the offices of undertaker. If not, the disposition of the body depends somewhat upon circumstances. If the hogan—the modern wigwam—is built of wood it is set on fire and burned with the body in it. If of stone the body is usually taken outside, the entrance to the hogan closed up with stones or sticks and a hole made in the wall opposite to permit the evil spirits to depart and to warn passersby that the structure belongs to the dead.

If the death occurred in a rocky country the body will likely be taken to some crevice and thrown in it. It may be left uncovered to become the prey of wolves and coyotes, or sticks and stones may be cast over it. If the family lives in a sandy part of the reservation, with no convenient crevices or chasms near by, the body will be laid upon the sand, a little earth and some stones thrown upon it, and a pile of brush laid over all.—Christian Herald.

The Judge Who Didn't Joke.

The funny sayings of a judge who never joked are found in "Arabiniana," a selection of the dicta of Sergeant William Arabin, who sat as a judge at the Old Bailey in London from 1830 to 1839. For instance, his remark to counsel:

"If you can show precisely at what moment the offense was committed and prove that the prisoner was not there when he did it he could not possibly have done it." And he sagely added as an afterthought, "We cannot divest ourselves of common sense in a court of justice."

Another axiom he delivered himself of has been fathered on many other occupants of the bench:

"If ever there was a case of clearer evidence than this case, this case is that case."

Odors of London.

The sense of smell which enables an engine driver to avoid a collision or a sailor to steer clear of an iceberg is the least cultivated of our senses. But with a properly equipped nose and a little practice we ought to be able to tell where we are blindfold all over London, for every locality has its distinct odor. Soho smells different from Southwark, Billingsgate differs from Limehouse, Rotherhithe has quite a special smell of its own, and Barking is absolutely unique.—R. L. Stevenson.

A Natural Inference.

"Matrimony," said the lady who had just secured her third divorce, "is, after all, an uncharted sea."

"I take it, then," her friend replied, "that you have not engaged in your various ventures for charting purposes."—Chicago Record-Herald.

It is estimated that the life of the average horse in bondage is twenty-five years. The wild horse's age is about thirty-eight years.

NEBRASKA JUDGE NOW ENDORSES IT

Hon. B. F. Whittington Has Gained Twenty Pounds by Taking Tanlac.

One of the distinguishing features of the introduction of Tanlac throughout the country is the large number of prominent men who have felt it their duty to disregard precedent and come forward with their unqualified endorsements of the medicine because of the benefits they have derived from its use.

The latest addition to the list of prominent endorsers is the name of Hon. Benjamin F. Whittington, judge of the Rolston Court, South Omaha, Neb. In relating his experience with Tanlac Judge Whittington said;

"The results of Tanlac in my case certainly seems wonderful to me. Before I began taking it my health was broken in many ways, and I did not know which way to turn for relief. My liver was all out of fix, I was habitually constipated, and bilious. I was so frightfully dizzy most of the time that I could not stoop over for fear of falling My kidneys were all out of order, and in bad shape, and I had fearful pains in the small of my back My appetite seemed to be fairly good, that is I could eat, but my food did not seem to be properly assimilated. Sleep failed to rest me, and I felt tired, languid and wornout all the time. I was pale, and not only felt badly but looked that way. I had been in this condition for a year, and was becoming badly worried because nothing seemed to reach my case.

"I had fallen off twenty pounds in weight, as a result of my troubles, but I have gained it all back by using Tanlac, and have never felt better in my life I decided from what I read in the papers about it to try it, and I felt like a new man before I finished my first bottle. So I went right back for another and so on until I took five bottles, and now I haven't an ache or pain and am feeling great. And, eat, gracious! I eat like a farm hand, all I can get, I never saw anything like it. I sleep like a log, and get up in the mornings thoroughly refreshed and feel brim full of energy all day long. All the time I was taking Tanlac I was doing three men's work, and improving at the same time. Now this is just what Tanlac has done for me, and I gladly give this statement for what it may be worth to others who are trying to find relief."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd., in Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Colour, Gloss and Attractiveness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn grey, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

THE AMERICAN FEELING.

Tribute to Young Canadian In New York Paper.

A day before he was killed last July 27 Col. J. Alexander Turner, a Canadian in the British army in France, wrote to his mother:

"Just a few lines to let you know that we are very busy. I have come in contact with the new American troops. These have been in France for thirteen months. They are all fresh, which is good. They are not brain and nerve weary. They have done well."

In years a lad who in normal times would have stood expectant on the threshold of life, Alec, as his friends still called him, had been matured by three years of fighting. He knew the qualities it calls for, the demands it makes on brain and nerves as well as body. A volunteer at twenty-two in the first days of the war, he had served with distinction, winning the D.S.O. and the M.C., being twice severely wounded, and passing in three years of active service through all the grades to a lieutenant colonelcy only to be killed by a stray shell. Broken more than once to the verge of disability, young blood and high spirit had carried him through undismayed and ever ready to rejoin the great crusade.

So Alec Turner, of the very flower of Canada, embodying most fittingly and gallantly the young country from which he went forth to do his part, sent to his mother, whom he would cheer, a message that is full of promise and assurance for us, neighbors of his people. He would have her take heart because of what he had seen, troops from America that are all fresh, that are not brain and nerve weary. The laconic phrase speaks eloquently of life all but spent, the phrase not of a boy, but of a man into whose hours had been crowded the experience of years. But what volumes of hope for the cause are in these simple words! Millions of fresh men who are not brain weary, sustained by high purpose, streaming across the ocean against an enemy that is brain and nerve weary, and heartsick as well. Well might young Canada, worn but still dauntless, welcome the spectacle and bid the homefolks be of good cheer. Fresh in body, fresh in brain, fresh in nerve, the armies of America take to the battlefields of Europe reserves of power no roll call can reveal. But the Canadian lad who had lavished his teeming years in the fray and knew what was needed and must turn the scale—he saw and sent back the message of comfort. — From the New York Globe.

Disraeli and Primroses.

Disraeli's alleged fondness for the primrose rests upon rather flimsy evidence. Lady Dorothy Nevill, who knew him intimately, has recorded that she "never heard him express any particular admiration for the primrose, which it is always said was his favorite flower, though a great admirer of his used to send him big bunches of them from Torquay every spring." Grant Duff, when discussing the primrose cult with Lord Pembroke, was told, "There are two stories about it, but certainly he once told Cory, 'I like to be in the country when the primroses are out.'" A consensus of opinion seems to favor the idea that in Queen Victoria's inscription, "His favorite flower," the pronoun referred, not to Disraeli, but the prince consort. —London Mail.

Abram helping Lot. Gen. 13:5:11; 14-16.

Golden Text: A friend loveth at all times; and a brother is born for adversity. Prov. 17:17.

1 Verses 5. 6. What per cent of business partnerships, roughly speaking, turns out to be satisfactory?

2. What reason, if any, is there to believe that intimate business relationships with relatives are generally less satisfactory than with others?

3 Verse 7. Is it possible or impossible and why, for two parties to quarrel whithout either party being to blame.

5. With human nature as it is, and conditions as they are, is it possible to live and do business without misundertanding or "strife?" (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

6. Verses 8. 9 If you learn that one party to a dispute shows an arbitary spirit, and is determined to fight it to a finish, how would you estimate him morally and spiritually?

7. Verses 8. 9. Would you regard it to be possible or not, and why, for a man to be truly good, and yet be quarrelsome, or anything akin to it?

8. What would you think of Abram's offer to settle the dispute with Lot?

9. When a partner makes a proposition to give or accept certain terms to dissolve membership, and the other partner refuses, how would you characterize the two men?

10. Verses 10 11. When we have the opportunity of living in a Godless community, with great money making possibilities, or in a community of Godly people with meagre financial prospects, which should we choose, and why?

11 What would have been your choice had you been in Lot's position, and why?

12. Chap. 14:14-16. What calamity happened to Lot and to what extent was he to blame for it?

13. Verses 14. 16. Suppose Christ had been in Abram's position, would he have pursued the marauders with an armed band to rescue a relative? Give your reasons.

14. Why would you say, or not, and why, that force is still essential to enforce righteousness?

15. If Abram, having the power to deliver Lot and his family from captivity and to recover stolen property, had refused to do so, what would you have thought of him?

16. Verses 14 16. How do you harmonize Christ's teaching of nonresistance to evil with this noble act of Abram?

17. How do you disinguish between what is known as militarism and a nation being armed sufficiently to protect itself from invasion, or to prevent gross unrighteousness in other nations?

18. Is it right, or wise, or otherwise, and why, in a country like this for a man to go about armed, or to have deadly weapons in his home?

PILES ENTIRELY CURED.

Mr. Wm. Woodell, 167 St. John St., Carlton, St. John, N.B., writes:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for itching, bleeding piles, and as a result have been entirely cured. For years I was a great sufferer from this distressing ailment and can say that three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me. You may use this letter for the benefit of others.

FEATS WITH THE CAMERA.

Difficult to Snap Fast Moving Objects at a Given Point.

Only an expert, and he only after much practice, can take a photograph of a rapidly moving object at a predetermined point—for example, an express train with the cowcatcher just at a white chalk mark on a tie or a baseball at the instant the bat strikes it.

The reason for this is twofold: First, there is a certain appreciable time between the mental decision to do a thing and the actual doing of it; second, it takes a certain appreciable time for the impulse given by pressing the button or squeezing the bulb of a camera to travel to the shutter and open it. The latter may in a very fine camera be only one-fiftieth of a second, but even the fiftieth of a second in a train going 100 feet a second would mean a difference of two feet.

C. H. Claudy in an article in the Camera says that not more than once in four attempts will even an expert catch the precise instant he is seeking. The average man snaps his camera at the moment the ball is striking the club or racquet, and by the time his shutter has worked the ball has gone. A tennis ball travels nearly a mile a minute when struck hard. That is ninety-six feet a second, so in a lag of one-tenth of a second between the pressing of the button and the opening of the shutter the ball will move nearly ten feet, and ordinary cameras work no faster than this. So one need not wonder if even experts fail.

Simple Way To Take Off Fat

There can be nothing simpler than taking a convenient little tablet four times each day until your weight is reduced to normal. That's all—just purchase a case of Marmola Prescription Tablets from your druggist (or if you prefer, send 75c. to Marmola Co., 864 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich.) and follow directions. No dieting, no exercise. Eat what you want—be as lazy as you like and keep on getting slimmer. And the best part of Marmola Prescription Tablets is their harmlessness. That is your absolute safeguard.

STUCK TO HIS FAITH.

Anyhow It Paid the Young Prussia Not to Change It.

A king of Prussia who reigned about the beginning of last century was noted for his geniality, and often in the course of his walks through the streets would enter into conversation with his subjects.

One day he met a young man and asked him what his faith was. The youth, who was somewhat of a wag answered, smiling, "I believe what my tailor believes." The king entered pleasantly into the joke and then asked again, "And what does your tailor believe in?" "Your majesty," replied the young man, "he believes that he will never get the 30 marks which I owe him, and I believe it also."

The king laughed heartily at the outspoken and unrestrained way in which he had answered him, and then gave him 30 marks. "Now, then, you can pay your tailor and so change his faith." The young man fancied, however, that he could use the money for a better purpose, and the tailor naturally went unpaid.

Not long afterward the king met the same youth, who, as he saw his majesty approaching, tried to escape down a side street. The king had, however, espied him and called after him. The youth, somewhat crestfallen and abashed, approached his majesty, who at once asked him if he had paid his tailor. A smile passed over the young man's face as he replied, "Your majesty, I could not change my faith for 30 marks."

Economy Begins at Home

Now-a-days Governments, Chancellors, bankers and business men talk economy. However, it is one thing to talk economy and another to put it into practice.

The Canadian Housewife

holds the key to the situation. Real economy may be practised by the housewife in food purchasing for the home. At very small cost she may obtain the finest cocoa that money can buy — a cocoa unexcelled as a food drink and unrivalled as a flavoring, that adds extra delight to hundreds of dainty desserts.

CLOUD FORMATIONS.

What We Know About Them Seems to Be Mainly Guesswork.

Many scientists have told us how clouds are made. Most of the textbooks on physical geography tell all about them, but it is all guesswork. Clouds are a mystery. It is true they are composed of moisture floating in the air, but how did the moisture get there?

It is held that particles of moisture are evaporated from the earth's surface by the heat of the sun. This moisture does not form into clouds immediately. Indeed, the passage of the moisture from the earth to the upper air is quite invisible. It was formerly supposed that this moisture was condensed by the cold of the upper air into rain droplets, which formed the clouds.

But scientists hold that the tiny particles must have something to condense upon. They used to tell us that the moisture collected upon dust particles to form into rain drops. Now they are practically agreed that it is something else, but they don't know what.

Anyway, when these drops get large enough they accumulate into vapor, forming clouds. When the droplets get too large and heavy to float in the air they fall to the earth in the form of rain, and this is about all we actually know about clouds.—War Cry.

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.

301 George Sreet. BELOW THE MARKET OPPOSITE BARRIES'

THE SUBTLE ASIATIC.

His Illustration of the Saying That "Clothes Make the Man."

Some hundreds of years ago there lived in Agshelin, a little town in Asia Minor, an imam, or village parson, the Khoja Nasr-ed-Din Effendi. Concerning him Mr. H. C. Lukach tells some stories in his book, "The Fringe of the East."

One day a camel passed along the street in which the khoja lived, and one of the khoja's neighbors who had never seen a camel before ran to ask him what this strange beast might be.

"Don't you know what that is?" said the khoja, who also had never seen a camel, but would not betray his ignorance. "That is a hare a thousand years old."

A great man once gave a feast to which, with much condescension, he caused the khoja to be bidden. Accordingly on the appointed day the khoja repaired to the great man's house and found himself in the midst of a fashionable and richly clad company, which took no notice of the poor imam in his threadbare black gown. No one greeted him or spoke to him and eventually he was shown by a servant to the lowest seat. After a little while the khoja slipped away unobserved and went into the hall where some of the mighty ones had left their outer garments. Selecting a magnificent gown richly lined with fur, he put it on and returned to the room. Nobody recognized this resplendent personage, whose arrival excited universal attention. The company rose to salute him, and the host, who had previously ignored him, approached, bowing, and inquired after his honorable health.

The khoja stroked the sleeve of his borrowed garment. "Answer, fur!" he said.

Watches Are Sympathetic.

Superstition or not, I am half sure the watch is alive and knows its owner; that it has some sort of sympathy with the person who carries it. Do you not know the bitterness of sending your own watch to hospital and harboring another—a patient—in your pocket? It lies—always. The scientific man reduces the whole matter to rhythmic motion. To put it roughly, the watch likes—or does not like—your particular skip, jump, stump or decent walk. Really the scientist has nothing much more to say about it as a conclusion, but that—rhythmic—notion. The touch of the watch on the heart.—London Chronicle.

"Mother's Tender Flowers"

Watch the tongue of your young!

Children droop and wither if you permit constipation poison to be absorbed into their delicate systems.

Hurry! Give Cascarets to clean the little clogged-up liver and bowels. Children love harmless Cascarets because Cascarets taste like candy—only 10 cents a box! Grand!

When a child's tongue turns white, breath feverish, stomach sour, mothers can always depend upon safe old "Cascarets" to gently, yet thoroughly clean the little liver and bowels. Cascarets are just dandy for children. They taste like candy and no child need be coaxed to take them even when cross, bilious and sick. Each 10 cent box contains directions and dose for children aged one year old and upwards.

PHOSPHITE NOT PHOSPHATE.

The Proper Sodium Solution to Use In Bichloride Poisoning.

In a recent issue of a well known medical journal the statement is made that mercuric chloride poisoning can be treated by the use of sodium phosphate with excess of sodium bicarbonate. Thus, editorially, the same journal says: "This solution, it is claimed, instantly converts the bichloride to the mild chloride, which can be removed by a dose of castor oil. It is very necessary that the sodium phosphate shall be chemically pure."

"Attention should therefore again be called to the fact," says the Journal of the American Medical Association, "that the names 'sodium phosphate' and 'sodium phosphite' are so similar that a serious error can be made by the misprinting or misinterpretation of a single letter. Sodium phosphite has been suggested as an antidote to mercuric chloride because it acts as a reducing agent to convert mercuric chloride into calomel—mercurous chloride—while the phosphite is changed to phosphate. Sodium phosphate will have no such action on mercuric chloride because it is already as highly oxidized as possible."

An Eccentric Russian Doctor.

The famous Russian, the late Dr Zaharin, was noted for his eccentric methods. When summoned to attend Czar Alexander III. in his last illness Dr. Zaharin required the same preparation for his visit to the palace as to any of his patients' houses. That is to say, all dogs had to be kept out of the way, all clocks stopped and every door thrown wide open. He left his furs in the hall, his overcoat in the next room, his galoshes in the third and, continuing, arrived at the bedside in ordinary indoor costume. He sat down after walking every few yards and every eight steps in going upstairs. From the patient's relatives and every one else in the house he required absolute silence until he spoke to them, when his questions had to be answered by "Yes" or "No" and nothing more.

Tail of the Possum.

An old negro was out with a hunter one day. The two found a peculiar track. Following the line of what were plainly footprints was a small, continuous furrow.

"What kind of a track is that, Jim?" asked the puzzled hunter.

"Dat's a possum track, sah!" explained the old negro.

"But how does he make that furrow?"

"He makes dat furrer wid his tail."

"With his tail?"

"Yes, suh. He lets his tail drag."

"Why do you suppose he lets it drag?"

"Ah doan' know, boss. I jes' reckin he doan' pay no 'tention to dat tail. S'pose he thinks it'll come along, anyhow."—Louisville Times.

STRENGTH OF NATION

SOME FACTS SECURED BY COUNTRY'S REGISTRATION.

Figures Show That 94.4 Per Cent. of People Registered — There Is Much Labor Available, and Hundreds of Thousands of Canadians Possess Farm Experience, According to Returns.

A TOTAL registration of considerably in excess of 5,000,000, including several hundred thousand men trained in agriculture, but at present otherwise engaged, are the striking features of the interim report of the Registration Board which, under the direction of Senator Robertson took a man-power registration of Canada on Saturday, June 22.

"Registration," says the report, "has demonstrated beyond question that we have in Canada an abundant supply of labor, experienced in farming and willing, upon request, to devote itself to farming, but which is at present employed in other occupations. In the Provinces of Ontario and Manitoba alone there have been secured and placed in the hands of county committees, by means of registration, the names of over 140,000 men all with some training in agriculture, but for the present otherwise employed, whose services are available as harvest hands, should they be required.

"If the cards from all parts of Canada were thoroughly scrutinized for farm prospects the labor shown to be available would probably prove conclusively that, despite the large number of men who have left the farm for overseas' service, we still have a force with which we can maintain our production at its present level or even increase it if necessary."

The report states that as a result of the registration the board could in the national interest mobilize labor quickly towards any form of production.

"Were the unexpected to happen," says the report, "and were the United States to serve notice upon us that in ten days all exports of soft coal to Canada would be absolutely cut off, in less than three days we could furnish the Government with the names and present addresses of every man in the country experienced in coal mining, but not now employed thereat, provided always he had declared to that experience on his registration card."

The following table of unrevised figures gives the total registration by provinces, but not including the registration which has since been effected through post offices:

	Male.	Female.	Total.
N. S.	150,075	158,514	308,589
N. B.	109,835	113,153	222,988
P. E. I.	25,395	28,294	53,689
Que.	611,835	615,589	1,337,424
Ont.	908,594	955,148	1,863,742
Man.	162,096	155,351	317,447
Sask.	239,512	177,822	417,334
Alta.	180,885	136,517	317,402
B. C.	184,527	130,892	315,211
Ttls	2,572,754	2,471,280	5,044,034

It will be observed that while the number of females registered exceeds the males in the east, the reverse is the case west of the Great Lakes.

The report contains a table showing the extent to which the law was compiled with on June 22. The estimated population of the Dominion of 16 years and over is 5,426,336, of whom 5,044,034, or 92.0 per cent., registered. In Alberta the registration equalled the estimated population, while in Saskatchewan the estimate was exceeded. By provinces the percentage of registration is given as

Nova Scotia, 86.7; New Brunswick 90.6; Prince Edward Island, 88; Quebec, 89.1; Ontario, 95.6; Manitoba, 92.5; Saskatchewan, 105.8; Alberta, 100; British Columbia, 81.6.

Substantial registration has been effected through the post offices. Since registration day to August 11 the cards actually received numbered 85,624. Since then further shipments have come in which are not yet counted, but which will easily bring the post office registration up to 115,000.

"This," says the report, "added to the figures reported for June 22, enables us to report a total registration of 5,159,000, or 94.4 per cent. of the estimated maximum, to say nothing of the probability that this will be scaled up still further in view of the fact that for the first half of August the post office returns averaged 3,500 cards per day."

The report states that up to August 15 the number of lost certificates reported was 9,329, and observes that "the law as regards notification of marriage and change of address is probably not being observed as well as it should, due, no doubt, to ignorance."

Dealing with the matter of opposition to registration, the interim report says:

"In portions of Quebec the Board's troubles were of a somewhat more serious character. There the opposition to registration was traceable not so much to ignorance as to false information, and indications were not lacking that in some instances false information was deliberately spread by persons who, if they did not know the truth, could plead ignorance of it only because they had purposely closed their ears to it."

Indians Aid Harvest.

Twenty-five Indians from Ontario, some of whom have never been in a large town or city, have arrived in Regina to aid in harvesting the crop and are working at the rate of $3 a day for some of their red brethren on the Indian reserves.

In Their Own Coin.

When S. R. Crockett offered his first book to a certain firm of publishers they returned it with a curt note informing him that there was "no market for this sort of work." In the corner of the note was the index mark "No. 390C."

Some time later, when Mr. Crockett had become famous, this same firm wrote asking him to allow them to publish his next book. Mr. Crockett, who had carefully preserved their former rude letter, politely replied by asking them to refer to their own letter book under the sign "No. 390C." That closed the correspondence.

As You Like It.

Jimmy, who was no highbrow, had gone all alone to see one of those outdoor performances of Shakespeare. He was telling his elders about it.

"Some class to Shakespeare," said Jimmy. "The show was fine."

"But what show was it?" asked Jimmy's big sister.

"Let Ev'rybody Do to Suit Hisself," replied Jimmy.—New York Post.

Dreams.

The seven-year-old boy who told his sister that "dreams are only moving pictures in your mind" gave a better definition of the fancies of slumber than can be found in the dictionaries.

THE REAL RUSSIA.

It Is Confined to a Very Small Section of the Vast Empire.

In "The Russian Empire, Today and Yesterday," Nevin O. Winter says:

"In a strict sense, real Russia covers only a portion of the more than 2,000,000 square miles that lie within the borders of the continent. This narrower definition would certainly eliminate Finland, Poland, the Baltic provinces, Bessarabia and the Caucasus and probably a part of the land of the Don Cossacks, the Crimea and the sections bordering on the Arctic ocean and the lower Volga. In other words, the real Russia has developed within this narrower section, and whatever of Russian characteristics appear in the eliminated sections have simply been imposed by the conquerors upon a people alien by birth and language.

"The actual visible influence of Tolstoy on Russia seems not to have been great. He was beloved and reverenced by many, but no party claims or has ever claimed him as a leader. The higher classes rejected him because of his opposition to all established government; the peasantry were repelled by his diatribes against religion; the revolutionists and anarchists repudiated his teaching because he had no definite plan to offer. His influence on thought and opinion in Russia will not compare with his influence in non-Russian nations."

Deduction.

"Tell me what you eat, and I will tell you what you are," boasted an amateur sage.

CHILDREN MUST BE PROTECTED

The children must be safeguarded, for, if they do survive the frequent coughs and colds, it is often with the lungs so weakened that they become chronic sufferers from bronchitis or consumption. Being composed of simple ingredients of undoubted value, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is admirably suited as a treatment for children. It is pleasant to taste. So much so that children delight to take it on this account, as well as because of the quick relief it affords them.

Sloan's Liniment The World's KILLS PAIN

To Relieve Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness, or who are growing hard of hearing and have head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can usually be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected complete relief after other treatments have failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear. Therefore, if you know of someone who is troubled with head noises or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength.) Take this home and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

Parmint is used in this way not only to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tubes, and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum, but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear, and the results it gives are nearly always quick and effective.

Every person who has catarrh in any form, or distressing rumbling, hissing sounds in their ears, should give this recipe a trial.

Fuel Economy

You can burn any fuel, wood or coal, hard or soft, with less waste, and more heat to the cord or ton, with the than with any other style of stove. It is made in four sizes to suit any requirements, of heavy steel, lined with fire brick, has large ash pit and rests on a broad stand. It is very clean to care for. Call and see them at

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Courage and Cash

By R. RAY BAKER

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Long before she left Indiana—where she first saw the light of day and subsequently saw the light of some 7,606 days—Catherine Owens had decided on the "three C" policy when it came to matrimony. A man must have courage and cash; then he would stand a chance of possessing Catherine.

It was principally on account of her father's health that they had gone out to run the small sheep ranch in a sparsely settled part of Montana, and there, exiled from civilization, Catherine didn't change her views. In fact, as none of the men who occasionally appeared at the ranch seemed to have either of the necessary qualifications, she gradually lost interest in the subject of marriage and devoted her spare time, which was plentiful, to people in story books.

Nevertheless, while she looked with disdain on all the mere male creatures that happened along, Catherine had hopes lingering somewhere within her that the "three C" man would enter her little world sometime. She was twenty-one, and at that age most girls begin to have serious thoughts of wedded bliss.

Thus things stood when a strange young man rode up to the veranda of the ranch house one sunny afternoon and asked what were the chances of being a guest at the supper table. He said the prospects were, if he didn't obtain a real meal soon, that he would fall by the wayside before he reached Odessa, ten miles away.

Catherine was seated on the veranda reading. Her father was out tending his flock and her mother was taking a nap.

"The first real man besides my father that I have seen in the whole year I've been here," said Catherine—to herself. His hair was coal black, as were his eyes, and he straddled his lively bay mount with a jauntiness that captivated Catherine—almost. His broad-brimmed hat sat rakishly on his head and he wore a blue shirt, corduroy breeches, cowhide boots, a red bandana handkerchief—everything a cowboy is supposed to wear but frequently doesn't except on parade. The stranger even "toted" a revolver in a holster on a cartridge belt around his waist.

With a gallant sweep of his hat he introduced himself as Fred Garland and dismounted, as though it was a foregone conclusion he would be invited to stay. As a matter of fact, it was. Catherine wouldn't have let him get away.

The meal was a jolly one. Garland told humorous stories and proved very entertaining. His speech and manners showed education and refinement; and as Catherine watched him with her big, gray eyes, she became decidedly interested.

After that Garland was a frequent visitor, and it was plain from his actions that Catherine was the attraction. He proved to be a mystery, for he never told where he came from where he was going or the nature of his vocation.

One day, six weeks after they became acquainted, while they were walking in the woods, the conversation took a personal turn. Catherine intentionally guided it into that channel, for she was curious concerning Garland's past—as well as his present. They sat on a log, and he chewed a piece of grass while she built a house of sand on the ground with the end of her parasol.

Presently Garland leaned close to her and said earnestly:

"I might just as well tell you now what's been in my mind since I met you. I want to marry you."

Catherine had been expecting it, rather hoping for it. However, she didn't fling herself into his arms; instead, she carefully wrecked the sand house with the parasol.

"I don't know," she said demurely. "You see, I don't know anything about you."

He hesitated several minutes, twisting his hat out of shape. Then he spoke in a rather strained tone:

"It's a rather painful topic. I came of a good family and was educated at Yale; but I guess I was a black sheep, for I never made use of what I learned. I contented myself with drifting aimlessly about, existing by doing various kinds of jobs. Finally I landed on a cattle ranch in this neighborhood. Not a very rosy prospect, I admit, but if you were my wife I'd have an incentive to do something worth while."

Catherine was fond of him, she was bound to admit, and she told him so. However, she had taught herself to hold the "three C" creed almost sacred, and she said she would have to reserve her decision for a week.

"I've always said a man would have to be in good financial circumstances before I'd marry him," she explained. "Money means a whole lot in this world."

She decided, however, while they were walking back to the ranch. A snake suddenly wriggled out from somewhere and coiled itself in front of them. Garland grew pale, and his arm, which she gripped in fright, actually appeared to tremble. He stopped in his tracks, despite her admonitions to kill the snake, and stood idly by while she overcame her own terror and dispatched the reptile with a stone.

Catherine scarcely spoke to him during the rest of the walk home. He apologized repeatedly, saying a snake always gave him "the shivers."

"It's the one thing I'm afraid of," he declared. "I'd rather face a lion than a snake. I've seen two men die from snake bites."

She prepared to enter the house.

"I can't accept your offer," she said coldly. "A man must have courage to win my affections."

Without a word he mounted his horse and disappeared down the road, while she stood and watched him and meditated on the cruelty of fate in sending that snake into their path.

Two weeks later the Odessa bank was robbed of $4,000 by a lone bandit, wearing a mask, who appeared suddenly at noon, held up the employees at the point of a gun, seized all the money in sight and got safely away, although several bullets were sent whizzing about his head.

Shortly after that the stage coach between Odessa and Bay Springs was stopped by the same man and the passengers relieved of their valuables. When one old man attempted to secrete his few dollars, the bandit shot him in the leg.

The next day the Bay Springs post office was visited by the outlaw, who, on account of his daring, had earned the cognomen of "Reckless." The post office paid him a forced toll of $500.

One week later Reckless stood amid a clump of trees a mile from the Owens ranch and smoked a cigarette while he adjusted his mask. His horse was tethered to a nearby tree. In the distance could be heard the rumbling of the Bronto coach on the way to Odessa. Presently it appeared over the crest of a hill, and Reckless adjusted his belt so his revolver was in easy reach.

His eyes on the stage coach, slowly drawing near, Reckless was not aware of the presence of another man, creeping stealthily upon him from behind, until the newcomer threw himself at the outlaw's shoulders. A furious struggle ensued.

Catherine Owens was in the kitchen washing dishes. Her mother had joined Mr. Owens, who was watching his grazing sheep.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain How to Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acids and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion black gauntlets and his Mexican hat.

"Reckless!" she exclaimed, stepping back in terror.

He nodded.

"But what can you want here?" she cried. "This is just a sheep ranch, and there's no money to speak of in the house."

He answered in mild, quiet tones:

"I don't want money; I want you."

Thereupon he took off his mask.

"Fred!" she screamed. "So you're the bandit. What do you want with me?"

"Just to marry you," he responded with a smile.

She covered her eyes with her hands.

"Never!" she cried. "Better ten times a man afraid of a snake than a miserable outlaw who shoots old men."

Garland laughed and tossed aside the gauntlets and hat.

"Reckless is on the way to Odessa in the stage coach with two men holding guns at his head," he said. "I caught him while he was preparing to hold up the stage, and I put on these things just to fool you. Since I've shown a little courage, will you have me?"

She stared incredulously at him, but his eyes never flinched before hers, and slowly a smile crept across her face.

"I've got to believe you," she said "because I love you. You don't know how I have regretted sending you away the other day; for I realize lots of brave men are afraid of snakes. And about the money—well, I'll even forget that. Anyhow," she added, "you have earned the $500 reward offered by the Odessa bank."

Garland shook his head.

"I can't accept it," he replied. "You see, I own the Odessa bank. I didn't tell you all my story the other day because—well, I didn't want to be married just for the cash I had."

Dead Murderer's Hand.

The most chosen of all talismans or charms was the "Dead Man's Candle," or "Hand of Glory." Sir Walter Scott, in "The Antiquary," describes it, in the mouth of Dousterswivel, as a hand cut off a man hanged for murder. It was dried, he says, in the smoke of juniper and yew. A candle made of the fat of the bear, the badger, and a "white sucking child" having been put into the hand at the proper planetary time, treasure buried then would never be discovered by any but the true owner. Scott, however, was inaccurate. The proper recipe is to be found in "Les Secrets du Petit Albert." The hand (which had to be the right hand of a murderer hung in chains) was blanched in the sun with mystical ceremonies. The candle was composed mainly of the fat of a murderer scooped from under the wayside gibbet, the wick being made of the dried hair of the criminal. The light of the horrible candle was alleged to have the effect of preventing those who saw it from moving or calling out, and he who held it could ransack with impunity.

It was principally on account of her father's health that they had gone out to run the small sheep ranch in a sparsely settled part of Montana, and there, exiled from civilization, Catherine didn't change her views. In fact, as none of the men who occasionally appeared at the ranch seemed to have either of the necessary qualifications, she gradually lost interest in the subject of marriage and devoted her spare time, which was plentiful, to people in story books.

Nevertheless, while she looked with disdain on all the mere male creatures that happened along, Catherine had hopes lingering somewhere within her that the "three C" man would enter her little world sometime. She was twenty-one, and at that age most girls begin to have serious thoughts of wedded bliss.

Thus things stood when a strange young man rode up to the veranda of the ranch house one sunny afternoon and asked what were the chances of being a guest at the supper table. He said the prospects were, if he didn't obtain a real meal soon, that he would fall by the wayside before he reached Odessa, ten miles away.

Catherine was seated on the veranda reading. Her father was out tending his flock and her mother was taking a nap.

"The first real man besides my father that I have seen in the whole year I've been here," said Catherine—to herself. His hair was coal black, as were his eyes, and he straddled his lively bay mount with a jauntiness that captivated Catherine—almost. His broad-brimmed hat sat rakishly on his head and he wore a blue shirt, corduroy breeches, cowhide boots, a red bandana handkerchief—everything a cowboy is supposed to wear but frequently doesn't except on parade. The stranger even "toted" a revolver in a holster on a cartridge belt around his waist.

With a gallant sweep of his hat he introduced himself as Fred Garland and dismounted, as though it was a foregone conclusion he would be invited to stay. As a matter of fact, it was. Catherine wouldn't have let him get away.

The meal was a jolly one. Garland told humorous stories and proved very entertaining. His speech and manners showed education and refinement; and as Catherine watched him with her big, gray eyes, she became decidedly interested.

After that Garland was a frequent visitor, and it was plain from his actions that Catherine was the attraction. He proved to be a mystery, for he never told where he came from where he was going or the nature of his vocation.

One day, six weeks after they became acquainted, while they were walking in the woods, the conversation took a personal turn. Catherine intentionally guided it into that channel, for she was curious concerning Garland's past—as well as his present. They sat on a log, and he chewed a piece of grass while she built a house of sand on the ground with the end of her parasol.

Presently Garland leaned close to her and said earnestly:

"I might just as well tell you now what's been in my mind since I met you. I want to marry you."

Catherine had been expecting it, rather hoping for it. However, she didn't fling herself into his arms; instead, she carefully wrecked the sand house with the parasol.

"I don't know," she said demurely. "You see, I don't know anything about you."

He hesitated several minutes, twisting his hat out of shape. Then he spoke in a rather strained tone:

"It's a rather painful topic. I came of a good family and was educated at Yale; but I guess I was a black sheep, for I never made use of what I learned. I contented myself with drifting aimlessly about, existing by doing various kinds of jobs. Finally I landed on a cattle ranch in this neighborhood. Not a very rosy prospect, I admit, but if you were my wife I'd have an incentive to do something worth while."

Catherine was fond of him, she was bound to admit, and she told him so. However, she had taught herself to hold the "three C" creed almost sacred, and she said she would have to reserve her decision for a week.

"I've always said a man would have to be in good financial circumstances before I'd marry him," she explained. "Money means a whole lot in this world."

She decided, however, while they were walking back to the ranch. A snake suddenly wriggled out from somewhere and coiled itself in front of them. Garland grew pale, and his arm, which she gripped in fright, actually appeared to tremble. He stopped in his tracks, despite her admonitions to kill the snake, and stood idly by while she overcame her own terror and dispatched the reptile with a stone.

Catherine scarcely spoke to him during the rest of the walk home. He apologized repeatedly, saying a snake always gave him "the shivers."

"It's the one thing I'm afraid of," he declared. "I'd rather face a lion than a snake. I've seen two men die from snake bites."

She prepared to enter the house.

"I can't accept your offer," she said coldly. "A man must have courage to win my affections."

Without a word he mounted his horse and disappeared down the road, while she stood and watched him and meditated on the cruelty of fate in sending that snake into their path.

Two weeks later the Odessa bank was robbed of $4,000 by a lone bandit, wearing a mask, who appeared suddenly at noon, held up the employees at the point of a gun, seized all the money in sight and got safely away, although several bullets were sent whizzing about his head.

Shortly after that the stage coach between Odessa and Bay Springs was stopped by the same man and the passengers relieved of their valuables. When one old man attempted to secrete his few dollars, the bandit shot him in the leg.

The next day the Bay Springs post office was visited by the outlaw, who, on account of his daring, had earned the cognomen of "Reckless." The post office paid him a forced toll of $500.

One week later Reckless stood amid a clump of trees a mile from the Owens ranch and smoked a cigarette while he adjusted his mask. His horse was tethered to a nearby tree. In the distance could be heard the rumbling of the Bronto coach on the way to Odessa. Presently it appeared over the crest of a hill, and Reckless adjusted his belt so his revolver was in easy reach.

His eyes on the stage coach, slowly drawing near, Reckless was not aware of the presence of another man, creeping stealthily upon him from behind, until the newcomer threw himself at the outlaw's shoulders. A furious struggle ensued.

Catherine Owens was in the kitchen washing dishes. Her mother had joined Mr. Owens, who was watching his grazing sheep.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain How to Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acids and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion the perfect household finish. Producing a lasting finish that will resist wear, its colors will not fade. The surface may be washed with soap and water; the lustre of China-lac remains undimmed.

For stairways, doors, baseboards and all interior woodwork, China-lac comes in suitable shades. There is also gloss white (a hard washable white enamel) for kitchen and bathroom—and flat white where a soft white finish is desired.

China-lac is also the perfect floor finish—lustrous, durable, inexpensive. Will not crack or show heel prints.

China-lac will give years of attractive usefulness to that chair or table which you have discarded because of its scratched surface. A few cents worth of China-lac will transform any piece of furniture.

China-lac, while staining the wood and giving a surface that gleams like glass, permits the original grain of the wood to show through the tough, elastic finish. It stains and varnishes in one operation. Give it a trial on some article of furniture.

She should obtain a book called the "Medical Adviser," either at her nearest drug store or by sending 50 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce, Courtwright St., Bridgeburg, Ont., for this book which tells about Nursing, Bandaging, Anatomy, Physiology, Marriage.

Thousands of women in Canada have overcome their sufferings, and have been cured of woman's ills, by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Sold by druggists in liquid or tablets. Send Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 10c for trial pkg.

Chatham, Ont. — "I am very glad indeed to add my recommendation to the many others that have found relief in Favorite Prescription. After motherhood I could not properly regain my strength. I was very weak and nervous, also had a terrible cough. I was very miserable when I began taking the Prescription. I noticed a marked improvement before I had finished one bottle. I kept up its use and was completely cured of my cough and it built me up in a good healthy state. Favorite Prescription is one of the best tonics for women."—Mrs. Geo. Hill, 210 Wellington St. E.

thrown open, and she who fright, dropping a plate to its the door. A man wearing a mask before her. From description she read of the outlaw she recognized.

Dead Murderer's Hand.

The most chosen of all talismans or charms was the "Dead Man's Candle," or "Hand of Glory." Sir Walter Scott, in "The Antiquary," describes it, in the mouth of Edomstone, as a hand cut off a man hanged for murder. It was dried, he says, in the smoke of juniper and yew. A candle made of the fat of the bear, the badger and a "virgin sucking child" having been put into the hand at the proper planetary time, treasure buried then would never be discovered by any but the true owner. Scott, however, was inaccurate. The proper recipe is to be found in "Les Secrets du Petit Albert." The hand (which had to be the right hand of a murderer hung in chains) was blanched in the sun with mystical ceremonies. The candle was composed mainly of the fat of a murderer scooped from under the wayside gibbet, the wick being made of the dried hair of the criminal. The light of the horrible candle was alleged to have the effect of preventing those who saw it from moving or calling out, and he who held it could ransack with impunity.

SOME OF THE CREWS OF MERCANTILE MARINE

THE TRAGEDY THAT LIES BEHIND OFFICIAL BULLETINS

Again and again, since the outbreak of war and the inauguration of Germany's submarine campaign have the newspapers contained this pregnant phrase. It has been lightly read by the average person and forgotten perhaps, almost as soon as read. But to the thinking few it has a significant meaning. It speaks of a duty done, a life given that others might be saved. It tells the story of heroic deeds executed during the day's work of a merchant sailor.

For the men of the Mercantile Marine the Huns have a great fear and a wholesome regard. To the courageous work of these silent men in jersey and dungarees, the Hun owes much of his failure. An attacking submarine with gun bared and torpedo ready in the tube, knows that riding the waves is one who will fearlessly oppose his murderous impulse and fight to the death, if need be.

To the brave men of the Merchant Marine "Sailors' Week" is specially dedicated. The Navy League of Canada has in prospect the raising of $1,000,000 in the Province of Ontario for the purpose of assuring the dependents of our merchant sailors, a partial recompense and a future livelihood. The campaign will commence on Sept. 1st and conclude on Sept. 7th, and during that time the Navy League will show the people of the Province that it is in their interest to contribute to this noble cause and keep the sea routes of Europe open. The League is confident that the people of the banner Province of Canada will not fail the men of the merchant marine and their dependents in their crucial need.

Boys Garner Hun Hunds and Helmets

By FRED S. FERGUSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 16, (By Mail.)—The American army is gradually being populated with boche dogs

At the same time the United States soon will be thickly populated with boche helmets.

The fighting American is just as earnest in his souvenir hunting as the peaceful American. Practically every doughboy, therefore—whether from town or country—made it a point to pick up a boche helmet somewhere during his advance from the Marne to the Vesle. The German soldiers cast aside the heavy helmets in their retreat, and they were scattered broadcast over the Marne valley, on and across the Ourcq to the Vesle. By pasting the address on the hat together with forty cents postage the American fighting man can send his sweetheart or mother a souvenir direct from the battlefield. And all of them have done it or are doing it.

About the dogs. The boche left them behind, just as he did the helmets. When the Americans entered Bouvardes, Sergy Cierges and various other towns, they found the boche dogs lurking about in the cellars and dugouts their late masters had been driven from. A dog can't help being boche, so the doughboys don't hold against him the fact that he is one. The deserted dogs were fed. They quickly made friends with the Americans and were adopted by various companies. The dogs now are just as good democrats as they were autocrats. Each bears some sort of German name. A chaplain has a little black daschund he calls "Minnie." The after part of her name is "Werfer."

Allies Are Driving Ahead And Are Exacting Terrible Toll From Retreating Enemy

British Forces Reported Four Miles West of Douai—Important Defences Wiped Out.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

(By Lowell Mellett.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 11.— British, French and American troops are pressing on after the retreating enemy between the Souche and the Oise and are spreading out faulike and enlarging the gigantic wedge they are driving into the heart of the German armies. Through the capture of Estrum the British are now only ten miles southwest of Valenciennes. British troops are also reported in Beaumont, four miles west of Douai. The British are beyond Le Cateau. The roads running north-eastward and south-eastward from that place are congested with enemy traffic. Low flying Allied planes are exacting a terrible toll from the confused masses. The Americans are pushing on after the capture of Dux Undigny Forest, between Bozain and Washigny. To the southward the French are battling along the Cambre Oise Canal and have approached to within five miles of Guiz.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Oct. 11.— (Official.) — American troops operating with the British on the front south-east of Cambrai, completed last night the capture of Vaux, Andigny and St. Souplet. The River Selles has been crossed by the British north of Le Cateau. Fighting is moving on the eastern section of the towns. The British are continuing to push forward on the front between Cambrai and Lens. They made progress during the night in the direction of Iziel-Les-Equerchin, five miles west of Douai. They are also progressing east of Sailaumines and along the northerly bank of the Havte Devel Canal east of Lens.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Oct. 11.— French troops last night advanced in the region north of the Aisne and captured the towns of Chivy and Moulins and then pushed on beyond. Italian troops reached a point south of Courtecon on the Chemin-Des-Dames, which highway the French have gained possession of as far as the heights at Cerny-En-Laonnois. In the Champagne region French troops crossed the river Suippe and gained a footing between St. Etinne and Boult Sur Suippe, as well as Warmeriville, Vandetre and St. Masnes.

Cambrai is being rapidly left behind in the battle area as the armies push forward. There are nowhere signs that the Germans intend making a determined stand, but the British are going a little slower now, as it is impossible for the vast organizations in the rear of three armies to keep pace with the advance, although what has been done so far will sound almost incredible when it may be told.

REACHED GRAND PRE.

(United Press.)
(By Fred S. Ferguson:)

WITH THE AMERICAN FIRST ARMY, Oct. 11.—French troops co-operating with the Americans in the Argonne, have reached the outskirts of Grand Pre. Further to the left the French have secured the railway station at the western approach to the Grand Pre Pass. This is the important out through the Argonne, making it thus in control of the Allies, and the most important defences in the great forest have been wiped out.

The Americans to the eastward have reached Sommerance and occupied another large section of the Kriemhilde line.

SERBS PROGRESSING.

LONDON, Oct. 11.— Serbian troops after capturing Leskovatz, again advanced and on Oct. 8 had reached ten miles to the north of that town. More than 3,000 Austrians were taken prisoner and five more guns captured.

Further progress was reported by the Serbian War Office to-day. The statement said the line of Lipovitza and Kossantchiech had been reached.

EVACUATION BEGUN.

ROME, Oct. 11.—Italian correspondent on the western front declares the Germans have begun an evacuation of the villages near the Swiss-Italian frontier. Forty villages between Basle and Colmar have been cleared.

EYES RIGHT.

Every soldier in the Allied armies had their eyes examined before putting on the uniform. Every soldier who needs glasses wears them. If the government values its eyes, why shouldn't you. See Dr. Lacey, 410 George street.

This little map of Cambrai and its vicinity is of special interest, because it shows the road by which the Canadians moved on the city. Escaudoeuvres, the last point mentioned in the despatch before telling of the entry into the city, is shown a little to the north of Cambrai.

Mail Boat Torpedoed

Six Hundred Lives Lost Off the Irish Coast—Few Survivors.

(By Associated Press.)

BELFAST, Oct. 11. — Six hundred lives were lost when the mail steamer, Leinster, was torpedoed and sunk in the Irish Sea yesterday morning. One hundred and fifty survivors have been landed at Kingston. Two torpedoes were fired at the steamer. One struck near the bow. The steamer sank within fifteen minutes.

The passengers, including many women and some children, numbered 650, and the boat carried a crew of seventy. An incoming boat reports that she passed through the wreckage, but was not permitted to stop to do any work, in accordance with the orders of the British Admiralty. Here passengers counted forty dead bodies floating in the water. Of twenty-one mail clerks on board the Leinster, twenty were killed outright by the explosion and the twenty-first was blown through the side of the ship, being picked up at sea later.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Oct. 11.—Sinking of the Japanese steamship Hirano Maru and the Dublin mail boat "Leinister," mark incidents of the new submarine campaign which the Germans launched about ten days ago, according to the Mail. It adds that at this time renewed submarine activity has become evident in various directions, notably along the route followed by steamers carrying American troops. It is reported that the new U-boats are larger and more heavily armed than any which have been sent out previously by Germany. Among the missing is Lady Alexandra Phyllis Hamilton, daughter of the Duchess of Abercorn.

LIBERTY LOAN

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—American troops sent overseas have passed the 1,900,000 mark, General March, Chief of Staff, announced to-day, coupling the statement with an urgent appeal to the country to support the fourth Liberty Loan. The War Department is preparing another two million men to follow the first two million.

Secure Furs Now

Raw Fur Prices All Advanced—Thoughts for the Buyers.

From the full reports to hand of annual Fur Sales held recently in London, New York and St. Louis, prices for raw fur skins advanced beyond expectations, some lines to figures extremely high. The conditions on this continent and the almost totally depleted stocks of fur in England, France, Austria, Germany, Italy and the Balkans has made the present peace possibilities a great source of strength in the big fur sale held in St Louis this week, as all these countries will be actively in the market for American furs once they can get transportation and free access once more to this market. Hitherto unheard of prices were realized on some classes of Raw Furs. All the indications point to very high prices for furs for the next 7 to 10 years after peace is declared as it will take that time to create a normal condition once more; and there is a strong possibility that never again will fur prices be as reasonable as they are to-day as the Fur supply each year is also becoming less.

Fortunately Barrie's Ltd anticipated somewhat these conditions of the market and secured, during the past year or more larger stocks of skins, which places them in the enviable position of being able to give their patrons the old time values without any rise in prices. The fact is that in some popular furs a saving of fully 50 per cent. is thereby effected.

All those who need furs for immediate use or who anticipate such needs are advised to purchase at once, as only so long as present stocks last can we give such value.

Buying fur from the manufacturers gives a basis for guarantee that those who give it a moment's thought will appreciate and also saves many a dollar that under present conditions would otherwise go to middlemen.

Barrie's Limited are large dealers and manufacturers of furs, having factories at Peterboro and Regina with retail fur stores in Saskatoon and Moosejaw as well. Everything in fur coats, sets, capes, muffs, caps, robes and fur-lined garments showing in the very latest styles and of unexcelled quality. We have a very fine showing of fur sets, for young ladies in scarfs and muffs, starting at as low a $12.00 per set and up to $50.00 per set in black and natural furs, which deserve just now special mention.

MR. O'BRIEN RETURNS FROM THE WEST.

Mr. Alexander O'Brien, 450 Driscoll Terrace, who returned from McGregor, Manitoba, last evening, states that the crops in that section are excellent. He says wheat will yield from 40 to 45 bushels an acre, and oats will go 100 bushels to the acre.

Mr. O'Brien left Peterborough for the West on August 29, and has been working in the harvest since that time.

The Allies in No Mood to Bicker With Germany

There is Every Reason to Believe That the Kaiser and His Militarist Crew Will Attempt Evasion and Counter Proposals.

(United Press.)
(By Robert J. Bender.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.— That the Kaiser and his militaristic crew will attempt evasion and counter proposals in the reply to President Wilson's peace note inquiries was the conviction in well informed circles here today.

According to reports received here, the German reply will be submitted to the Reichstag—in order to give it the semblance of "approved by the people."

Many careful observers of German practices believe the reply will run about thus, Germany will accept the President's fourteen points if they are made to apply to America's friends as well as her enemies; Germany will evacuate Belgium and Northern France and draw all but "necessary police forces" out of other occupied territory, provided Great Britain evacuates the German colonies and Japan prepares to return Kiao-Chau.

Vote of Confidence.

To the President's pointed inquiry as to just whom Prince Max represented in submitting his peace appeal, authorities look for some such reply as this: Germany is undergoing a political revolution and in the process of this change insofar as it is possible for any one man to speak for the people as a whole, Prince Maximilian so speaks. (Officials here believe Max will ask the Reichstag either to approve his peace profer or give him a vote of confidence that he may "put over" this claim.)

That President Wilson will enter no bickering or quibbling over such evasions, if made, has been definitely assured. The Allies and America are the Victors—they shall dictate what shall or shall not be done.

Germany Will Evacuate France and Belgium Says an Authoratitive Report

Wants Allies to Give Assurance That Alsace-Lorraine and Polish Prussia Will Not be Demanded.

GERMANY'S REPLY

Specia lto The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 11.—The Kaiser has summoned to Berlin the sovereigns of the German Federal States, for a Crown Council to be held to-morrow before despatching Germany's reply to President Wilson's note, according to a Cologne despatch received here to-day.

Unofficial reports state that the German reply already has been drafted at a conference of Chancellor Maximilian, Vice Chancellor Von Payer and the German ministers and military representatives.

Germany's Reply.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 11.—Germany's reply to President Wilson, according to an Amsterdam despatch to the Express to-day, quoting "authoritative sources" will be as follows: Germany will evacuate Belgium and France, providing peace negotiations start in a neutral country before the evacuation is completed, and providing the Allies will give their assurance that German territory, including Alsace-Lorraine and Polish Prussia, will not be demanded.

During the peace negotiations German troops are to remain in Russia and Roumania.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.— The Associated Press this morning issued the following summary:

From Douai to Verdun the tide of the German invasion is ebbing. A general retreat of the Teutonic forces over this far-flung line appears to have been begun some time yesterday. East of Cambrai the enemy has abandoned Le Cateau, which has been occupied by the British and Americans. Further south the French have pushed further eastward in their advance from St. Quentin. Just north of La Fere, where the enemy has held his positions since early in September and has taken the village of Servais, which marks the point where the wedge is entering the St. Gobain stronghold, which the Germans thought was impregnable. East of the Argonne Forst, American divisions have smashed their way ahead, taking Sommerance, Chevieres and Marq. This brings them nearly up to Grandpre. Further east they have rectified their line on each side of the Meuse. The highest feature of this fighting is that in the Champagne, Argonne and Cambria and St. Quentin, there has been but little resistance to the advance of the Allies. The great battle now being fought on the American front is on a front of nearly thirty miles to-day, it having extended to the north. The British are banging everywhere. There is virtually no enemy counter opposition.

THE COMMON CAUSE

Half the world is united in a common cause. This is what you hear every day. Is it so in your case? Are you united with the others in the effort to bring about a better order of things in this world?

You may think you are, but if you are wasting, when you might be saving, you are not. You are not merely indifferent to the common cause, you are disloyal to it.

Every cause must be financed. It can only be financed if its supporters save, save, and again save.

Canadians who fail to practise thrift are traitors to the common cause. They must Save to Lend! Canada's war effort and peace policies must be financed out of present prosperity. Every citizen must be prepared to do his part, however humble. That's the only loyalty that's worth while. Save until it hurts.

ANOTHER OFFENSIVE

Allies May be Able to Cut Off Enemy Supply Centre.

A MAJOR SUCCESS

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Oct. 11.—(2 p.m. despatch).—To-day's advices from the battle front indicate it is virtually certain that the Germans will have to evacuate St. Gobain Forest almost immediately. The Germans are evacuating the Chemin Des Dames, under pressure of converging attacks west and south of it. The German line behind Laon, between the rivers Serre and Siesone, has been turned, making the German situation in the Laon area most difficult. In the Champagne region the French and Americans, joining hands north of Argonne, in the Grand Pre gap, have occupied Grand Pre Station, while patrols are said to have entered that town itself. On the river Meuse, north-west of Verdun, the Americans have cleared out the little pocket in the direction of Sivry, which has held them up for a long time.

(By J. W. T. Mason—United Press).

NEW YORK, Oct. 11. — American units in the Picardy offensive have begun another drive toward the fortress of Hirson, on the western front of Ardennes Massif, for the purpose of separating the German armies from the Von Hindenburg retreating troops in Picardy and Flanders. The Americans are now twenty-five miles directly west of Hirson. Their position between Wassigny and Bohain is astride the main German railway leading to Hirson from the west.

Hirson is an important supply centre. It was along the Hirson line that Von Hindenburg kept his stores moving into Western France via the Luxemburg route, which General Pershing is now attempting to close north of the Argonne.

A Major Victory.

If the Germans can be forced back quickly upon Hirson from the west, the whole of Von Hindenburg's troops in the Champagne, from the St. Gobain Forest to the Argonne, will be blocked from escaping by way of Liege.

They will have to crowd into the mountainous and almost roadless Ardennes, or else try to retire via Luxemburg. If, at the same time, General Pershing bars the way through Luxemburg, only the Ardennes route will be left. A success to the Allies such as this would be one of the major victories of the war.

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.— The capture of Cote De Dame Marie by the Americans and French on the left of the Meuse, the taking of more than 1,000 prisoners, and the continued advance on the right bank of that river Thursday was reported to-day by General Pershing.

Additional Gains.

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Oct. 11.—(.55 p.m.)—French and American troops have made additional important gains in the Champagne and Argonne regions.

The Americans are reported to be north of the Grand Pre Pass and to be advancing north of Romagne. West of the Forest the French have reached the line of La Neuville-En-Tourne-a-Fuy, Chauroy and Sugny, and are on the outskirts of Machault and about two miles from Vouziers.

In the Picardy region the British and American troops have penetrated the Ardigny Forest, east of Bohain.

Conventions Will Not Be Held Says Dr. Hastings

Influenza is on the Increase in Toronto.

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Oct. 11.—Dr. Hastings issued strict orders to-day that under no condition must conventions of any kind be held in Toronto until the present epidemic of influenza has died out. Arrangements were in process of completion for a number of gatherings which were to have been held during the next few weeks, including one convention that was to have opened its session to-morrow. Those in charge of the arrangements are being notified that they must positively be postponed.

There were forty new cases reported to the Department of Health this morning, while others will come in during the day. Up to date 170 have reported to the Department. This, however, does not by any means represent the number of cases in the city as there are over three hundred cases in the hospials alone.

GIGANTIC BLACKMAIL

Germans Aim to Make France and Belgium a Complete Desert.

SINISTER PURPOSE

(United Press.)
(By William Phillip Simms.)

PARIS, Oct. 11.—The Huns are attempting a gigantic blackmail against France.

Officers recently taken prisoner declare it is the Germans' intention to raze Northern France as completely as they did the section over which they retreated from the Somme. They intimate that General Ludendorff plans to make the country such a complete desert that the advancing Allies will be unable to live in it.

But the most sinister purpose believed to be behind the threat is the hope to create in France a sentiment favouring stoppage of the war as a means of saving the historic cities and towns of France and Belgium from sacking, burning and dynamiting.

Wrecking Cambrai.

The slow mines now wrecking Cambrai have sent pangs of rage throughout the country. The Germans have made another blunder in the psychology of people.

Had the French or their Allies ever entertained the slightest idea of holding out to Germany any peace proposition, not the slightest vestige of any such idea remains.

The Temps asks what will be the fate of Lille and Valenciennes. It says the public is beginning to wonder why it is necessary that retaliatory chastisement of the enemy shall be withheld.

"We have to thank God for the fact that the necessary weapons are in our hands to make the Germans feel our anger," the newspaper says. "Let them be employed at the earliest possible moment."

Peterboro Casualties

Pte. Thomas Joseph Doherty Killed Action.

Mr. Patrick Doherty, Drummond Station, Otonabee Township, has been officially notified that his son, Pte. Thomas Joseph Doherty, was killed in action on September 27th. The late Pte. Doherty enlisted in April of this year. Besides his parents, he leaves to mourn his loss, two brothers and three sisters, namely, John and William at home, also Irene at home, Mrs. William Carey, of Otonabee, and Mrs. Arthur Carey, of Otonabee. Another sister, Loretta, predeceased her brother about three weeks ago.

Is Recovering.

Mr. A. P. Brown, 171 Simcoe Street, received a cable to-day from England, stating that his son, Corporal Cecil C. P. Brown is in London at the Southgate Auxiliary Hospital, as a result of slight wounds from shrapnel. The cable states that Corp. Brown is feeling fine.

Pte. Vincent Tobin.

Mrs. E. Tobin, 128 Stanley Ave., received word to-day that her son, Pte. Vincent Tobin, was admitted to the First Southern General Hospital with gunshot wounds in the left hand and shoulder. Pte. Tobin was wounded once before in the battle of Fresnoy in May, 1917.

SAVE THE GASOLINE

There seems to be an impression among a number of citizens that the ban has been lifte from the use of gasoline on Sunday and that because next Sunday comes before a holiday that cars may be used as usual. This is altogether incorrect. The Fuel Controller announces that there is still great need for the conservation of gasoline and that it is expected that patriotic motorists will continue to remain out of their cars on Sundays until it is officially announced that the need for saving "gas" for use overseas no longer exists. In the war of movement that is developing on the western front gasoline is more and more needed for the tanks as mechanical transport and no patriotic Canadian would want the efficiency of the army interfered with in the least by reason of a gasoline shortage that could have been averted if people at home had been willing to make the small sacrifice of doing without their motor cars for a few Sundays until the conditions are relieved.

REMEMBER THE CHILDREN.

The extent of the work that the Children's Aid Society can carry on during the coming year depends upon the generosity of the people of Peterborough—upon the amount that is contributed to-morrow on the occasion of the annual tag day. The mission of looking after neglected and dependent children, which has been so ably and sympathetically performed by the Society has gained even greater importance because of the drain upon the man power of the country through the war. The children of to-day are an asset that cannot be left undeveloped and for that reason, along with many others it is desirable to have a record collection to-morrow. The organization of the campaign is complete—the success of the day now depends upon the support of the public. In view of the increased expense of the work, every citizen should be prepared to double his or her contribution of last year. The result of such a policy generally adopted throughout the city, would place the Society in splendid position to commence its work for the coming year.

Don't forget the children and be ready to give handsomely to-morrow.

PREVENTATIVE MEASURES.

There can be little fault found with the action of Dr. Amys, Medical Officer of Health, in ordering the theatres of the city to be closed until next Tuesday, and in suggesting to the churches the curtailing of the usual Sunday services as preventative measures tended to check the spread of the epidemic of influenza which is sweeping the country. Similar measures have been adopted in other places, and Dr. Amys has been wise in acting now when the disease has only begun to make its appearance in Peterborough, rather than to wait until there were four or five hundred cases in the city and then adopt drastic measures when the influenza was in full swing. By a fortunate chain of circumstances, the schools of the city are closed until Tuesday on account of the teachers' convention to-day and yesterday and the Thanksgiving day holiday on Monday, so that with the schools closed and the ban placed on theatres and the Brock street tabernacle, it is hoped that the disease will be checked before it has got such a hold on Peterborough as it has in other places.

The public should co-operate with the health authorities in every way possible. While it may seem to many a hardship that they are deprived of an opportunity to attend a theatre, especially on Thanksgiving day; they should regard the checking of the epidemic as of vital importance and be glad to do anything that will assist the authorities in their fight against the influenza. By spending as much of the Thanksgiving day week end out of doors as possible and keeping away from crowds, people will benefit themselves and help to prevent the developing of the epidemic.

FINE ATTENDANCE AT BOARD OF TRADE LUNCHEON TO-DAY

Addresses by J. J. Turner and W. R. Breyfogle on Railway and Housing Problems.

"We have two or three live members in the Council, but their efforts have been largely nullified by members who are not live, and consequently have been unable to make progress alone." With this pointed comment, Mr. W. R. Breyfogle concluded his address on "The Housing Problem in Peterboro", at the noon luncheon of the Board of Trade at the Empress to-day. He reviewed the preliminary work of the citizen's housing committee that had demonstrated that more than four hundred men declared their interest in the proposition tentatively outlined by which they could obtain a house costing $2,500 on a specially favorable installment plan. The committee's report was submitted to the Council where "it was dissected and thrown to the winds."

Mr. Breyfogle called the members' attention to the error made by one of the Aldermen who had estimated that one of these houses would ultimately cost $6,000.

"He figured all his costs, but admitted no credits. He neglected to show that the citizens would have saved $1,400 in rentals, $300 estimated for moving every three years, and finally have $3,000 respecting the value of the house when it was finally paid for. After all the proposition was not so bad, and certainly did not deserve to be turned down flatly by the Council."

The city could not afford to do nothing for five or ten years, Mr. Breyfogle stated, and informed the Board that there were private companies considering the question of erecting houses. The street railway, housing and labour questions were closely related Mr. Breyfogle indicated the De Laval Company's interest in railway extensions, stating that this service was particularly needed during the winter as a facility for the employees and a protection for their health.

THE RAILWAY PROBLEM

Mr. J. J. Turner, President of the Board, discussed Peterboro's railway problems, stating that every effort was being made to secure C. P. R. connection with Montreal, and that the negotiations would be continued until the desired service obtained. The street railway, he said was of vital importance. "If we are to grow the railway must serve many persons who are now deprived of it."

The President spoke with satisfaction of the manner in which Mayor Duncan was pressing the Hydro-Electric Commission for extensions.

AN ENCOURAGING ATTENDANCE

To-day's luncheon was decidedly promising in the large attendance that responded to the executive's invitation. Two banners were suspended from the curtains, inscribed as follows:— "Acres of Diamonds right here, Peterboro possesses possibilities unsurpassed" and "A Greater Peterboro is in your hands. Boost your Board of Trade."

The following members were present:—J. J. Turner, President, Frank Whitehouse, Vice-President, W. A. Kearns, J. F. Austin, T. Hopper, H. Cressman, B. H. Brittain, Dr. Harvey F. Sedgwick, J. W. Meyers, G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., Hughson Johnston, N. A. Turner, A. E. Coulthard, G. A. Sommerville, P. P. Westbye, Dickson Hall, R. M. Glover, Ald. Edgar Worth Thos. Barrie, W. C. Doan, H. O. Fisk, A. L. Killaly, R. Fair, J. D. Cameron W. A. Richardson, C. H. Pennefather G. N. Gordon, W. R. Breyfogle, Reid Munroe, Geo. Lundy, Jas. Hamilton, B. D. Hall, W. J. Thompson, W. C. Ackerman, W. Mr. Turner welcomed Mr. H. C. Hodgins of the Turnbull Co. and Mr. W. A. Kearns, new members.

COUNTING HUN CHICKS

(By United Press.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 12. (By Mail.)—In the —— division they figure that they've spoiled a lot of good German jobs, by keeping the boches back where they belong.

It is this way.

The Germans were so sure they were going to walk right through the division, and the French divisions next to it, that they appointed boches to all kinds of jobs in French cities to be captured. A tank commander who came through in his armored car, thinking the Allies were surely on the run was captured and got real peevish because, being a prisoner, he could not be town major of Chalons.

Documents captured showed that other German officers with influence had been put in charge of warehouses and supply depots that were to have been captured.

BETTER APPLE CROP THAN WAS EXPECTED

NIAGARA PEAR CROP MEDIUM, GRAPES ABOUT 90 P.C. OF LAST YEAR.

OTTAWA, Oct. 11—Despite extremely unfavorable weather conditions in all provinces but British Columbia the condition of the Canadian apple crop is better than it was a month ago, according to the October report of the Dominion Fruit Commissioner. All parts of Ontario report a very satisfactory development of the fruit, and a better crop is anticipated than was thought probable. In British Columbia the total output will be approximately the same as last year. "We do not need," says the report, "to modify our estimate of the Nova Scotian crop, which will be in the neighborhood of 400,000 barrels." The quality of the Ananpolis Valley Crop will be better than anticipated. The Niagara pear crop is only medium but there has been a heavy crop in all parts of British Columbia. The Niagara grape crop is not likely to excel sixty per cent. of last year.

ENGLISH HOMES ARE OPEN TO THE YANKEES

By ARTHUR B. MANN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, Oct. 1. (By Mail.)—England has adopted the American soldiers and sailors within her shores. Her hospitality is limited only by the number of men who come here. Today, Vice-Admiral Sims, commander of the American Naval Forces in European waters, and Maj Gen. Biddle, commander of the American army in England, told the United Press what this hospitality means to the United States forces in waging the war.

"Since our entry into the war," said Admiral Sims, "nothing has been more impressive than the hospitality of the British people to the officers and men of the United States navy based on these islands.

"Organizations and private individuals have vied with one another in opening their clubs to us, presenting us with their residences arranging entertainments, and even attending personally to our wants. To military men serving far from home in a foreign country, the importance of this in maintaining the morale and happiness upon which success of war depends, cannot be over-estimated. We have been deeply touched."

GEN. BIDDLE ENTHUSIASTIC

Gen. Biddle was equally enthusiastic and appreciative in declaring:

"During the past weeks the British entertainment committee has been arranging for the extension of private hospitality and also for various forms of entertainment in different parts of the country to American officers and men, whether stationed or on leave in England. This means that American soldiers will find more home life while in England, that they will have by way of recreation a well organized system of stimulating entertainment and a great opportunity for athletics.

"The British entertainment committee is helping us make the American soldier in England a happier and healthier man."

Hospitality plans recently worked out provide for invitations to American army and navy officers and men on leave in England to spend at least part of their time as guests in English households Information bureaus have been established at ports of debarkation and at military camps, where records are kept of the address ed and accommodation of those who have opened their homes to Americans. As the men report for leave, those who desire to accept such invitations will be assigned to homes, and, as far as possible, they will be sent to the parts of the country they desire to visit.

FOR CONVALESCENTS

The same plan has been arranged for officers and men who are convalescent from wounds or sickness and discharged from hospital but need further rest before returning to duty.

Hundreds of English parents, whose sons have died in the cause for which America is fighting have opened their homes under this arrangement. Hundreds more whose sons are still on the battlefield, are doing likewise. Those who have no sons are doing their utmost to be foster-parents to the Americans over there.

The work of entertaining American troops at rest camps and sailors at shore stations is already well under way. There are movie shows at most of the camps and frequent concerts, boxing boute, theatrical performances by professionals and amateurs from nearby towns. Artists and performers are showing the greatest readiness to volunteer for this work during their spare time.

In fact, the objective which England set out to achieve not many weeks ago has been reached—England is "blighty" for the American soldier and sailor.

SCOURED DISTRICT FOR DESERTING DRAFTEES

Representatives of the civil branch of the Canadian Military Police, who have been combing the district around Peterborough for draftees who have failed to report for service, have completed a successful round up and are leaving for Ottawa to-night to carry on similar work elsewhere.

Refused to Permit Theatre to Open

Dr. Amys received a telegram this morning from Mr. A. J. Small, booking agent for the circuit in which the Grand Theatre is included, requesting him that the order prohibiting public meetings until next Tuesday be suspended for the Saturday and Thanksgiving day attractions that were scheduled for this city. The Medical Officer of Health refused to consider this plea, stating that the precaution was in the best interests of the public, and from the standpoint of the theatre men it was preferable that these two dates be cancelled now rather than run the risk of a dark house for a longer period if the epidemic is not checked by this effort.

Italians Fish by Aid of Light

By HENRY WOOD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Rome, Sept. 19. (By Mail)—Deep sea fishing by electric light is Italy's latest industrial development

Use of electric lights submerged to a great depth not only renders fishing at night possible, but results in greatly increased hauls, the fish being attracted in great numbers by the light.

Aside from increasing the food supply, this new method has the double andvantage of overcoming the crisis ovreated by the shortage of men in the fishing industry resulting in the mobilization of these bot hin the navy and the army. A recently decreased number of fishermen can keep the national haul up to what it was before the war.

The electric light fishing is being used with remarkable success in the vicinity of the numerous islands with which the Italian seas abound, while experiments are now being made on the coast north of Rome.

NOW WE KNOW WHAT IS WRONG WITH THE YANK

(By United Press.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept 14 (By Mail)—Two rotund old French women stood in a doorway of a battered house watching a number of American soldiers stationed in the village for a rest. The boys had just come out of the trenches after repelling a heavy German attack, and they were making the most of a repose to wash clothes catch "cootics" and talk over how they had handled the boches

The two old women were watching the goys carefully. It was always interesting to find out the views of old French people, particularly those who have been within a few miles of the lines ever since war broke out. These fat old women were veterans. Hence their opinions were sought.

They were careful about their views, chary of criticism. They liked the American boys, they said emphatically. They were "bons garcons, bons soldats," good boys and good soldiers. Everything they said was of the same nature.

"But you are like all the French people, Madame, always complimentary. You never say what you really think We want the truth"

This provoked one old woman to a statement. Looking around to see that no one was listening, raising her round, good-natured face, she said in a low, but emphatic voice, "I'll tell you, monsieurs, theyr'e fine boys, brave soldiers, all right in every way, but they cut their hair too short and don't have any mustaches. French soldiers have long hair and mustaches."

DEATH OF FORMER PETERBORO BOY

Lieut. Sydney Lang, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Lang, 771 Indian Road, Toronto, who died in the officers' hospital at St. John, Quebec, Saturday, was buried westerday afternoon in Prospect Cemetery. Spanish Influenza was the cause of the young officer's death.

Lieut. Lang was serving with the Canadian Engineers at St. John at the time of his death. Prior to this he had served with the same unit at St. John, New Brunswick, for a year. An injured knee had prevented him from going overseas. He went to Toronto ten years ago from Peterboro, for the purpose of attending the University. Graduating in 1913, he went to Chilli, South America, as a mining engineer, returning a year ago to enlist in the Canadian army. He joined as a private and quickly secured a commission. He is survived by his parents, one brother and one sister.

"Y.M." AND "K.C." MAKE GOOD WITH YANKEES

(By United Press.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 16. (By Mail.)—You always can tell the "Y M." and "K. C." huts in the ruins of the newly captured villages. That's where the doughboys are crowding, always.

They want cigarettes. Cigarettes seem to be the best thing a man can have to quiet his nerves while the barrages thunder. Most important, they are about the only comfort you can get out there.

The Y.M.C.A. and the Knights of Columbus workers have won their way to the hearts of the doughboys by getting enormous quantities of cigarettes and tobacco to the front while the fighting progresses

Evangelistic Services Have Been Cancelled Until After Thanksgiving Day

Meetings to be Held on Sunday—Last Night's Service Was Held in George Street Church—Campaign Notes.

Although it was found impossible to hold the Union Evangelistic Service in the Brock Street Tabernacle last evening, owing to the action of the local Board of Health in requesting that the building should not be used, a most successful service was, with the full approval of the Board of Health, held in the George Street Church. The attendance was large, although not as large as it probably would have been had it not been for the disorganization caused by the change in the place of meeting, many people apparently having got the impression that the meetings had been called off entirely.

Previous to last nigh's service a meeting of the Executive Committee was held to settle what form the meetings should take during the next few days. It was announced that the Medical Health Officer was quite willing the services should be continued in any of the city churches, although he requested that not over one service a day should be held. When it was announced, however, that the local theatres and moving picture shows were to be closed, it was decided not to hold any of the regular evangelistic meetings either to-day or on Saturday or on Monday. By Tuesday, if the epidemic shows sufficient signs of abatement, it is hoped that it will be possible to continue the regular services once more, probably in one of the churches for a while and later possibly in the Tabernacle. An announcement to this effect was made at last night's meeting.

On Sunday, at the request of the Medical Health Officer, only one service will be held in each church. The purpose of this is to ensure a complete change of air being effected in each building each day. The committee last night decided to request those in charge of George Street Methodist and St. Paul's Presbyterian Churches to make arrangements for the two congregations to worship together in the morning in St. Paul's Church and in the evening in the George Street Church. The evening service will be conducted by Dr. Honeywell on the same lines as though it were held in the Brock Street Tabernacle.

In connection with Sunday night's service it is hoped that the full choir, that has been assisting so capably in the campaign, will arrange to take part in the service. The wings in the gallery on both sides of the pulpit platform will be reserved for the use of the members of the choir, so that it will be possible for all to take part. The song service will be led by Mr. W. S. Dixon. Until it is known what arrangements can be made for continuing the regular services, it will not be possible for the booster choir to take part in any of the services. It is hoped that by next week arrangements will be completed for them to assist.

Dr. Honeywell's Address.

The attendance last night was largely composed of the business girls of the city, some 400 of whom had attended a tea given earlier in the evening. In addition there were delegations from out of town points, although the attendance from these points was not as large as would have been the case but for the various changes in arrangements. Dr. Honeywell chose as his subject "The Love of God." In opening he asked the audience to repeat with him, John iii., 16, "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on Him shall not perish but have everlasting life." Referring to the parable, "The Prodigal Son," Dr. Honeywell called attention not to the act of the son in returning to the father nor to the lack of love shown on he part of the older brother, but to the loving, faithful compassion of the father towards the child who had strayed but had returned. He showed that this love was but a faint illustration of God's love. Telling illustration after illustration was given of examples of the great love of fathers for their sons and of mothers for their children. One story that was told very effectively was that of the editor of the well-known paper, "The Ram's Horn," of Chicago, who for years was known as an infidel. One night he was suddenly converted and later was asked by Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman to tell him about his conversion. His reply was that he believed he had been converted, although he did not know it at the time, when he was a lad of seventeen, by finding how greatly his own father loved him at the time when he was leaving home. His father then was a poor man, well up in years, who urged him to stay at home, but failing to persuade him to do so, he prayed for him so earnestly and also gave him the last fifty cents he had, that he so impressed him with his love that the young lad then promised God that he would try to prove worthy of such a father. Later, however, he wondered off into infidelity, and it was not until by accident he strayed into a meeting addressed by Dwight L. Moody, where he heard the story of the prodigal son told as only Dwight L. Moody could tell it, that he became converted and thereafter lived a most useful Christian life.

At the close of the service a large number of Christians held up their hands signifying a desire to live a more consecrated Christian life. A considerable number of others who were professing Christians, but felt that they were not as sure of their salvation as they desired to be, also held up their hands for prayer, while about forty signified their desire to yield their lives to Christ for the first time. These latter especially were urged to open their hearts to the Holy Spirit, and thereby have their consecration sealed immediately, this being an act between themselves and the Holy Spirit. They were asked also to be sure and attend, if possible, next Sunday night's services, and there take a public stand for Christ.

Campaign Notes.

Last night's collection amounted to $50.33. This makes a total of about $773 that has been taken up in the collections to date. The total expenses of the campaign are estimated at about $2,000, without any promise of anything being given to Dr. Honeywell personally beyond the closing collection.

As there will be no services to-day or to-morrow, Dr. Honeywell left this morning to visit friends in Kingston but will be back in the city Saturday afternoon.

The Business Girls' Rally.

The epidemic scare and the announcement of the closing of several places of meeting had their effect upon the Business Girls' Rally at George Street Methodist Church last evening, inasmuch as though over five hundred girls were expected for supper, the number of those who attended scarcely exceeded four hundred. But four hundred young women from stores, offices and factories, as well as teachers and Business College students, comprised no small representation of the business girls of Peterborough, and it was surely an inspiration to the committee in charge of the Rally and to the girls themselves to see this splendid gathering.

Even before 5.30 the girls commenced to arrive, and were met at the door by a reception committee. A long line was formed as the girls entered the Sunday School-room, and the girls were served a tasty supper in cafeteria style by a number of ladies representing the churches of the different denominations throughout the city. All arrangements for the supper had been made and were carried out under the able direction of Mrs. W. S. Dixon. Groups of girls continued to arrive until well after six o'clock, and those who had been served adjourned to the church auditorium, making room for the later arrivals.

In the church the service was conducted by Mrs. Russel, of the Moodie Bible Institute, Chicago, now so well known throughout the city as one of Dr. Honeywell's evangelistic party. In her own inimitable, enthusiastic manner, Mrs. Russell captivated her audience of girls, leading them in a service of song and explaining to them the object of the Rally. The girls were all asked to stand when the name of their place of business was called; this was "to serve as an introduction," and a motto was given to the business girls of Peterborough —"not slothful in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord."

When the girls had all gathered in the church auditorium a flashlight picure was taken, and Mrs. Russell gave a very beautiful and earnest talk on "The Greatest Love Story in the World," taking as her text, John 3, 16, "For God so loved the world," and bringing to her hearers a realization of the great Father-love of God. It is not likely that those who were present will soon forget either the service of the message brought to them by Mrs. Russell, as all felt that it was good for them to be there.

Health Authorities Have Situation Well in Hand

No New Cases of Spanish Influenza Reported in Peterboro—Social Events Called Off.

Drastic measures are being taken in the city by Dr. C. H. Amys, M.O.H., in enforcing the order prohibiting public gatherings. To-night, as a result of his thorough overhauling of prospective merry-makings, etc., the young people will have an opportunity of discovering the significance of being "all dressed up with no place to go." Not only are the movies and theatres closed, but the doctor has scoured the town for other gatherings and forbidden the Took Makers' dance and all such public social events.

Well in Hand.

To-day Dr. Amys said he had heard no further cases of the disease, which seems to be well in hand. No deaths caused directly by Spanish influenza have been reported up to date.

Results of the Scare.

Results of the scare are perceptible everywhere. Not only are the druggists sold out of practically every preventative, the florists out of flowers, and the doctors in perpetual motion answering calls, but the station houses have lost their popularity. For some unknown reason the public have always gathered indoors while waiting for a train, while at present the waiting room is shunned like the plague and the public waits out on the platform.

George street looked last evening like Saturday night, with the disappointed crowds of people who were unable to get into the picture shows and found partial solace in looking in the shop windows. The restaurants report extra heavy business, as they, too, helped to fill in the blank.

Not Close Theatres.

KINGSTON, Ont., Oct. 11. — The Board of Health at a meeting here decided that it was not necessary to close Kingston theatres, schools and churches owing to the influenza epidemic. There are several hundred cases in Kingston, but the local medical health officer and the other members of the board agreed with Provincial Health Officer McCullough that there would be no marked improvement by closing the above places. People here are taking all precautions possible.

Situation in Toronto.

TORONTO, Oct. 11.—Deaths from pneumonia, following Spanish influenza, continue to be reported in large numbers in the big cities of Ontario and Quebec. In the Montreal district there were eleven fatalities among the soldiers alone, and in Toronto there were nine deaths among civilians, the fatalities among the military being unreported. Niagara Camp reported no deaths, though there are many cases of serious illness. In other parts of Canada the epidemic seems to be getting fairly well under control.

President Wilson Off to New York

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—President Wilson left this morning for New York, where he will spend the week end.

Accompanied by Mrs. Wilson, Admiral Grayson and Secretary Tumulty, the President will rest for several days, anticipting a week of diplomatic and other problems just ahead.

It is likely he will attend some play while in New York, will participate in the Liberty Day celebration at the Metropolitan Theatre Saturday night and during his stay will have ample opportunity to confer with his confidential adviser, Col. E. M. House on problems arising out of the German peace campaign.

PEACE PROPOSAL LACKED SANCTION OF EMPEROR BILL.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—Chancellor Maximilian's peace proposal to President Wilson was made in direct opposition to the views of Emperor William, according to a report brought to London by a neutral who left Germany a few days ago. It is suggested that this may be the reason for the summoning of German sovereigns for a conference. No official confirmation of this can be obtained here.

Protect Yourself Against Spanish Influenza

A Dangerous Epidemic That is Prevalent Throughout Canada

This disease which is now prevalent throughout Ontario, is "Epidemic Catarrh," characterized by acute inflammation of the mucous membrane of the air passages, attended by severe constitutional disturbances followed by general debility and frequently develops into an attack of pneumonia.

It is highly infectious and every precaution should oe taken to avoid contracting this dreaded disease.

Don't put unclean things into the mouth. Keep the hands clean, and wash the mouth and gargle the throat once or twice a day with "PYROLL."

While this epidemic is prevalent, people cannot be too cautious and careful and everybody, and especially those attending schools or places where a number of people gather, should use "PYROLL," which is recommended by doctors and dentists as the best antiseptic and mouth wash to prevent this disease. mwf-6d 82

Will Fumigate Public Schools

The Property Committee Chairman Authorizes Work.

Mr. A. A. Fowler, chairman of the Property Committee of the Board of Education, has, in conjunction with Dr. C. H. Amys, Medical Officer of Health, completed arrangements for the fumigation of the public schools throughout the city. This is being done as a precautionary measure against the possible spread of influenza.

This precaution by the chairman of the Property Committee was on his own initiative, and it is hoped that parents will not infer that there was a special need for this fumigation. Dr. Amys expressed his approval of this preventive measure.

NO COAL TO PERSONS HAVING 500 POUNDS COMMISSION ORDERS

Replying to inquiries from coal dealers, the Fuel Commission on Wednesday night decided that orders must not be delivered to any person who has one-quarter of a ton or more of coal. The records are being filed as quickly as possible, thanks to the industry of the City Clerk's staff, and the delayed reports should be entirely caught up by the end of next week. The Commission has engaged a clerk to assist in this work, and it is hoped that in a short time the Commission will have all the information regarding consumers' holdings that is essential for the guidance of the dealers.

The Commission has been informed that dealers are charging for bagging, hauling and carrying coal from the vehicles to the houses, and has decided to ask the Fuel Controller if it is legal for the dealers to make a charge for one or more of these services in addition to the price of coal as allowed under the Order-in-Council.

The Matthews-Blackwell Company will be asked for a statement of the hard coal they have on hand, also the quantity they have delivered to each employee and the price charged. The company will also be asked to furnish a statement of these details each time hard coal is distributed.

A list of the licensed dealers in Peterborough will be obtained from the Fuel Controller's Department.

Tried to Corner Munitions Market

Pernicious Work of Germany Revealed in United States.

Special to the Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Further proof of Germany's pernicious work in this country was made public today by a revelation of M. Palmer, the alien property custodian, that the Bridgeport Projectile Company, Bridgeport, Conn., had been taken over because of German control.

Count Von Bernstorff, the former German Ambassador, and other leaders in this country, it was shown, had arranged to get the company so as to hamper munitions output for the Allies. The company was to corner the market on munitions supplies, and while ostensibly taking contracts for Allied orders, was never to deliver them. The backers, who had also engineered efforts to create a munitions embargo, stood ready to spend $10,000,000 in their attempts to cripple the munitions trade.

Shower for Miss Ada Payne

Recipient Has Just Returned From Japan.

BETHEL, N. Dummer-Mr. and Mrs. Richard Batten entertained a large number of neighbors and friends the occasion being a miscellaneous shower, given to Miss Ada M. Payne prior to her marriage to Mr. Warren Ambrose Atkinson of Dartford, early in this month.

The evening was very happily spent in music and games.

An address was read by Mrs. Caroline White, a large clothes basket heaped to overflowing, was brought in, and parcels unwrapped by the recipient assisted by Misses Greenbanks and Northey; while the verses, wise, witty and gay were read adding much to the pleasure of the evening.

The company excelled in generosity if one could judge from the large number of useful and beautiful gifts.

Refreshments were then served after which the guests left for their homes after spending a most enjoyable time.

RETURNED FROM JAPAN

In August Miss Ada Payne returned home from Japan where she has been a missionary for the past four years A reception was given by the members of the Warsaw Woman's Auxiliary in Bethel church, Mrs. Wm. Wason, president, taking charge of service. An address of welcome was read and several musical numbers given and an address on missionary work in Japan by Miss Ada Payne who wore a Japanese costume.

Rev. D. R. Clare concluded the service with prayer

Refreshments were served at the close.

JAPANESE EVENING

In September a Japanese evening was held at the home of Mr. Herman Payne when a sale of Japanese articles brought the sum of $60.00 Proceeds for missions.

A good musical programme was given by members of the circuit choirs and a hymn in Japanese sung by Miss Payne; who also exhibited a number of curios. Rev. M. L. Heinton, a former pastor gave an address which was much enjoyed.

CATHOLIC CHURCHES ARE TO SAVE FUEL.

Bishops of Ontario Urge Their People to Subscribe to Victory Loan.

Two patriotic resolutions that will have a beneficial influence were passed by the Catholic Bishops of Ontario at a meeting in Toronto, when those present included the Archbishops of Toronto and Kingston and the Bishops of Sault Ste. Marie, London, Peterborough, and Pembroke.

They passed a resolution requesting each Bishop to take steps to lessen the consumption of coal in the churches of his diocese during the winter by restricting all non-essential services. They also adopted a resolution urging all Catholics of the Province to subscribe, as far as their means will allow, to the coming Victory Loan.

Another resolution passed was one recommending to the military authorities, when there is a cessation of hostilities, to facilitate the speedy return to Canada of young men who had been pursuing university studies prior to enlisting.

Interesting Addresses at the Teachers' Convention

Officers Elected at Last Night's Meeting—Address by H. T. J. Coleman of Queen's University.

At the evening session of the teachers' convention, now being held in the Collegiate Institute, the feature was an address by H. T. J. Coleman, Dean of the Faculty of Education of Queen's University, Kingston, on "National Ideals of Education," which address proved interesting to the large assembly.

Programme Shortened.

The programme for the evening was somewhat curtailed by the illness of some of those who were to have taken part, and was shortened to a piano selection by Miss Eliott and Mr. Coleman's address.

National Ideals in Education.

There is a difference between an ideal and an idea, said Mr. Coleman. An ideal is an idea suffused with emotion. We not only know a thing, that is have an idea about it, but we are enthusiastic about it, that is it has become an ideal for us.

The notion of an education for all the children of all the people is quite a modern one. It began, perhaps, in Germany at the beginning of the 19th century. But the Germany of that time was far different from and better than the Germany of to-day.

Elementary School.

The Elementary School of Canada and the United States, with its eight years' course, was borrowed some 75 years ago from Germany, and in borrowing it we took over its defects as well as it excellencies. In Germany it was a school for the common people—the poorer classes, and so all studies which help directly toward professional and higher official life were excluded. With us we keep many children upon purely elementary subjects for two or three years beyond the time when they are able to take with interest and profit such High School subjects as Algebra, French and Latin.

In conclusion the speaker spoke of these conditions which must be met in the keeping of a proper Canadian ideal in education.

The first was that all our educational machinery should be kept in its proper place. We should not maintain a machine simply to see the wheels go round.

The second was that our educational ideal should fit in with our larger national ideal. The educator must take his orders from the statesman.

The third was that our national ideal should fit in with the new world ideal which is being shaped at the present time.

Officers Appointed.

The report of the Nominating Committee resulted in the election of the following officers:

President—R. F. Downey.
Vice-President—F. J. A. Morris.
Sec.Treas.—Miss F. D. Walker.
Executive Committee—Miss M. Rutherford, Miss B. Fussee and Miss C. Caldwell.
Committee on Reading Course — Mr. Wightman, Miss L. Caldwell, Miss L. Wilson, Miss O'Connell, Miss M. Ross and Mr. A. Mowat.
Social and Athletic Committee — Mr. Steer, Mr. Gould, Miss Erskine, Miss Runnings and Miss J. Graham.

Two Meetings Were Telescoped

Progress of the Teachers' Convention.

The morning and afternoon sessions of the Teachers' Convention were telescoped into one meeting held this morning as a precautionary measure against the spread of Spanish influenza.

The meeting opened with a most interesting address by Mr. R. F. Downey, Principal of the Central School on "The Rural School Teacher and His Work." Dr. Coleman spoke on "The Teacher as a Student," impressing upon the teachers that study should and must be continued while teaching. Miss Jean Harstone spoke on ambulance work in France.

The morning was concluded by a splendid paper on "Nature Study," by Mr. F. J. A. Morris, which, on motion of Mr. A. Mowat, will be printed in the newspapers. Solos by Miss K. McLean and Miss E. Eagleson were appreciated.

"Hearts of the World" Difficulties Experienced

Eighteen Months Required to Produce D. W. Griffith's Latest and Best Picture.

When David W. Griffith was directing scenes just back of the trenches in France, shells fell and exploded within a hundred feet of him three different times, and at each explosion Lillian and Dorothy Gish promptly fainted. The bursting shells are shown in Mr. Griffith's stupendous love drama "Hearts of the World".

Is there a theatrical producer alive who ever spent eighteen months on one production? Hardly. Yet this is the amount of time and concentrated thought David W. Griffith devoted to the production of "Hearts of the World," which immediately was acclaimed his supreme triumph of direction. His background was the war front in France. His characters were humans in the midst of an awful tragedy, yet they intermingled in all the melee of gas attacks—flame waves—bombardments, and aeroplane fights a wonderful love story that no heart can resist.

Nobody knows how much it cost for D. W. Griffith to film his supreme triumph, "Hearts of the World," coming at Grand Opera House next week and nobody seems to care Mr Griffith himself doesn't know. All he feels about it is that the greatest ambition of his life is realized, which his more to him than money.

DANDRUFF MAKES HAIR FALL OUT

A small bottle of "Danderine" keeps hair thick, strong, beautiful.

Girls! Try this! Doubles beauty of your hair in a few moments.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine for a few cents at any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

The committee appointed by the directors of the Peterboro Golf Club have arranged the following program of events for Thanksgiving Day.

10 a.m.—18-hole Club Handicap. Messrs. Mowat and Sangster, directors. Players may arrange their own games. The competition is for a medal donated by the Royal Canadian Golf Association.

4.30 p.m. 2-ball mixed foursome. Mrs. Gardiner and Mr. DelaFosse directors. Players may arrange their own foursomes. During same hours in the afternoon there will be Clock Golf and Tennis.

Clock Golf, Messrs Killaly and G. O. Cameron, directors.

Tennis, Mr. Langley, director.

Obstacle Golf will be open to competitors both in the morning and afternoon. Mr. R. M. Hamilton, director.

Entry fees will be charged for all events and prizes will be given.

Lunch and tea may be obtained at the Golf Club during the day. The House Committee, Mrs. Gardiner (Tel. 521.) and Mrs. Hill, (Tel. 17.) would esteem it a kindness if members would notify them beforehand of their intention to have meals at the club. They would then have an approximate idea of what would be required for the occasion.

The members of the committee, Messrs. Medd, Hamilton and DelaFosse, will be pleased to furnish on request any further information that may be required. Entry to the grounds on Thanksgiving Day will be restricted to the members of the Golf Club and their friends.

Red Cross Society Appeal to Golfers Throughout Canada

The Directors of the Royal Canadian Golf Association—the governing body of golf in the Dominion, at a recent meeting decided to set apart Monday, October 14th, as a "Thanksgiving Day" for golfers and golf on the links of the clubs throughout Canada affiliated with the Association, the proceeds of the day to be devoted to the Red Cross Society.

The glorious allied successes recently recorded on all the fronts mean, alas! casualties in ever increasing numbers, and there was never a time in the four years of the world war when the ministrations of the Red Cross were in such demand, were so urgently required.

The Royal Canadian Golf Association believes that the golfers of the Dominion cannot more appropriately mark the day appointed for thanksgiving by the Government of Canada than in conducting golf events, the entry fees from which shall be entirely devoted to the Red Cross. The cry for funds for this noble institution is both widespread and insistent.

It has been suggested that a fee of five cents per stroke from players entering the competitions would be the means of raising a large sum of money. In the event of that not being thought advisable, it is hoped that an entrance fee of at least $1.00 shall be charged. However, these matters are, of course, entirely in the hands and control of the local committee to work out to the best advantage of the fund. The main idea is to raise an amount throughout the Dominion, commensurate alike with the worthy cause which is so close to the hearts of all Canadians, and the high standard of golf and its following in every community. The Association is giving a sterling silver cup to each club, to be competed for on Thanksgiving Day, and also silk banners to the three clubs which, pro rata of membership, contribute the largest amounts to the Red Cross Funds on Thanksgiving Day. The President of the Royal Canadian Golf Association is also giving a very handsome sterling silver cup to the club making the largest returns to the Red Cross.

Many clubs are organizing for the event ahead of Thanksgiving Day, interesting members in giving subscriptions and otherwise making sure of a successful financial result, regardless of weather conditions on the holiday.

The fund, it may be added, is off to a splendid start alreay, the "Canadian Seniors' Golf Association" having started "the ball rolling" by sending a cheque for $500—the amount voted for the Red Cross at the recent highly successful tournament held by the Seniors at the Royal Montreal Golf Club.

The Royal Canadian Golf Association has already had assurances of hearty support from all the leading clubs of the Dominion and is confident that our club, too, will support to the uttermost this "Thanksgiving Day Drive," and the noble cause which it represents.

County Teachers' Association Met in the Normal School

Committee Was Appointed to Discuss the Revision of the School Readers.

PETERBORO IN 1863

The 67th session of the County Teachers' Association met in the Normal school yesterday.

A committee was appointed to discuss the revision of the school readers as suggested by the Minister of Education.

After forty years' attendance at at teachers' conventions, Mr. Broderick, the president, gave a resume of the history of Canadian education from the time of Grammar schools.

An amusing incident was quoted of a teachers' convention held in Peterborough in 1863, in which the main discussion concerned Dr. Ryerson's bill for compulsory education. A motion was passed stating that the bill was at variance with the principles of civic liberty. "It is deplorable to note that no progress has been made in securing compulsory attendance in rural schools in the last fifty years," said Mr. Broderick. The remedy he suggested was fewer rural schools by consolidation. He ended in an appeal to teachers to form a committee urging the Minister of Education to make a survey of the whole situation of rural schools and have them consolidated.

School Attendance.

Mr. Lees supplemented this by some examples of consolidated schools which he had visited in Indiana. He cited an instance of one school with an enrollment of two hundred and five, that had in seven months an average attendance of two hundred. In another of these schools on a most disagreeable morning of snow and rain he found at 9.05 a.m. not a cloak room full of wet clothing, not a group of children huddled over a rusty stove drying wet feet, but work well in progress, the children having been conveyed thither in ten vans. In three years one of these vans was late once.

Question of History.

After this Misses Borland and Coughlin gave very interesting and instructive papers on the O.E.A. convention held in Toronto last Easter.

Mr. Lees, in some measure reassured the teachers regarding the subject of history, which after a lapse of fifteen years, has been put on again as a subject for entrance examination. He gave an address on the essentials in history. He emphasized the fact that history must not become a matter of dates and kings and queens ,but that the experience of those in the past must guide us to better citizenship.

The afternoon was devotec to the discussion of the teachers' supplementary reading.

Better be not at all than not be honest.

Spanish Influenza May be Prevented

The difficulty with this form of influenza is that a very mild case may, by contagion, produce in another individual the very worst form of the disease. That is, a person, who seems to have but a slight cold, may be the Carrier of the Germs.

Those, who are liable to be exposed to the Contagion, should, both for themselves and the sake of their families, take every precaution to avoid contracting it.

The mouth should be cleansed once or twice a day with an antiseptic wash and the throat gargled with the same.

Also one of Moncur's Capsules for the Prevention of Spanish Influenza should be taken each morning. These Capsules strengthen the system so that the Germs, even though the person is frequently exposed to the contagion, are quite unable to gain a foothold.

However, they are not recommended to cure the disease but only to prevent one from taking it; which they will do if they are taken before the person is already infected. If the prevalent Epidemic strikes Peterborough in full force, these Capsules will save a lot of people from sickness and also prove an enemy to the Undertaker.

Sold at Moncur Drug Store, 407 George St. Next the Royal Bank.

A GOOD OPPORTUNITY

(Toronto Globe.)

A scientific writer, complaining that hardly any attempt has been made to obtain efficiency in domestic fuel consumption, declares that twenty-five to fifty per cent of the coal shovelled into the stoves and furnaces of our homes is wasted. There is evidently a great opportunity here for the enterprise of manufacturers of heating appliances

(By John De Gandt.)

PARIS, Oct. 12.—French and American troops have made additional important gains in the Champagne and Argonne regions.

The Americans are reported to be north of the Grand Pre pass and to be advancing north of Romagne.

West of the forest, the French have reached the line of La Neuville-En-Tourne-A-Fuy, Cauroy and Sugny, and are on the outskirts of Machault and about two miles from Vouziers.

In Picardy British and American troops have penetrated the Ardigny forest, east of Bohain.

Martial Law.

PARIS, Oct. 12. — North of Rheims the French Fifth Army is holding both banks of the River Suippe and has captured Bertricourt. Italian forces played a brilliant part in the magnificent attack of the Fifth Army, which also resulted in the capture of Courtecon and Troyon, south of Laon.

Yanks Clean Up Argonne Forest.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—The cleaning up of the Argonne Forest has been completed by the American troops. No Germans now remain in that great wooded area.

British Push On.

British troops captured St. Hilaire-les-Cambrai, Avesnes and St. Hubert. Many prisoners were taken and much material was captured. General Debeney's army has pushed across the River Oise at several points in the region east of St. Quentin, and his troops are now menacing the strategic town of Guise.

MONTREAL IS HARD HIT BY INFUENZA

Catholic Churches Will be Closed for the First Time To-morrow.

MONTREAL, Oct. 11.—With 369 new cases and 42 deaths reported since Monday the authorities are imposing more stringent regulations in their fight against the epidemic of Spanish influenza. For the first time in the history of Montreal the Catholic churches will be closed to-morrow. In the Anglican churches there will be only an 8 a.m. communion service, and in the other churches minor services. Limited business hours have been fixed, the theatres and schools are closed, all gatherings of more than twenty-five persons whether indoors or outdoors are strictly forbidden, the courts exclude the public, families are urged to discontinue visits for the present, $25.00 fines are imposed for spitting on sidewalks. Among the soldiers the disease is of a particularly virulent type. The hospitals are crowded, and a large proportion of their medical and nursing staffs are stricken. There is a sardonic irony in the fact that Lt.-Col. T. A. Starkey, who has been acting as sanitary officer during the present epidemic is one of the latest victims. Lachine reports 900 cases. One out of every six firemen are ill. A special effort is being made to keep the streets flushed and clean. Of the fifty resident students at the Royal Victoria College, thirty have influenza. As elsewhere, the price of camphor has dropped from $5.00 to $3.20 a pound, but the retail druggists have not depressed their prices.

Japan May Talk at Peace Table

(By United Press.)

Tokio, Sept 20. (By Mail.)—Japan's chief goal at the peace conference should be to obtain an open door for immigration to Australia, India, Casada and the United States, writes E. Uyehara, member of parliament, in "Japan and the Japanese," a popular fortnight magazine of Tokio. Uyehara was a member of the parliamentary commission which visited America early this year.

"In England, the League of Nations theory is finding strong support," Uyehara writes. "A league cannot be realized when Britain, which possesses so much of the earth adopts an exclusive policy in her own territory. Should all the natural resources in British possessions be monopolized permanently by her own nationals, it would be inevitable that the non-British nations would purpue a militaristic aggressive policy against her.

"America is fighting to safeguard the indipendence and rights of the small nations, it claims. This must mean that the small nations are to be given the right developing their own destiny without molestation or interference. It is not calculated to guarantee the independence and rights of small nations for strong powers to monopolize the benefits accruing from their vat natural resources.

"Again the policy of confining a large sumber of people within their own territory of limited dimensions, such as Japan, does not tend to assist the civilization of the world, nor is such a poliy calculated to bring about the peace of the world.

"It is clear in these circumstances that Japan's advocacy of the open door principle will meet with no dissent from Britain or America, even though it may be recognized that the immediate enforcement of this principle is attended with many difficulties.

"While claiming the open door in territories bordering the Pacific, Japan ought to insist that America grant independence to the Philippines America's suspicions of Japan have been the obstacle to her granting this independence, and therefore Japan's expression of readiness to guarantee the independence, acting in consert with Great Britain and America, may induce the latter to comply with Japan's proposal.

"Japan also must insist that Hawaii be made a neutral zone. The independence of the Philippnes and the neutrality of Hawaii are not questions which are important for their own sake, but Japan must contrive for their realization as a means to give effect to America's principle of safeguarding the independence and rights of small nations, and also as the first step in the direction of enforcing the open door principle in regard to immigration.

"Japan's efforts to carry this great principle at the peace conference may pave the way for establishment of a great international ideal, even though her efforts are not crowned with immediate success. Moreover, her claims will be received with universal sympathy and support by the Asiatic peoples, and thus the foundation will be laid for Japan's assumption of the leadership of Asia."

A tale of two Trade Marks

For over 59 years Turnbulls have been making good knitted underwear in Canada—and underwear exclusively—They came from the Old Country with the knowledge of how to make good underwear bred in them—They brought out expert workers from the Old Country from time to time as their business grew—thus have always kept their products up to the highest standard, being made with that thoroughness and care for which the Old Country workers are famous.

The reason for this tremendous growth and popularity can be summed up in one word "Quality" first and all the time—

You cannot get away from the fact that Canadians appreciate "Quality" more than anything else—

SPANISH INFLUENZA RAGES IN CANADA

Thousands of Cases Reported With Many Deaths.

THOSE WHO ARE MOST SUSCEPTIBLE TO IT

"FRUIT-A-TIVES"—The Wonderful Fruit Medicine—Gives the Power To Resist This Disease.

The epidemic of Spanish Influenza which played such havoc in Europe, has reached this continent. Thousands of cases of the strange malady have appeared and many deaths are already reported; Surgeon-General Blue of the United States Public Health Service having stated that "Spanish Influenza will probably spread all over the country in six weeks".

Practically every ship which touches our shores from abroad, brings those infected with the disease.

Surgeon-General Blue urges that "the individual take all the precautions he can against contracting the disease by care and personal hygiene". Plenty of exercise should be taken; the diet should be regulated, etc.

Spanish Influenza affects most severely elderly persons and others whose powers of resistance are weakened by illness, work or worry, especially those who are "run-down" or "not feeling up to the mark."

The really great danger from the disease is not so much in the disease itself, as that it often develops into pneumonia.

What everyone needs now is a general tonic like "Fruit-a-tives". This wonderful fruit medicine is not a germ-killer. It is a body-builder; a strength-maker; a blood-purifier; a power in protecting against the ravages of disease.

"Fruit-a-tives" regulates the kidneys and bowels, causing these organs to eliminate waste regularly and naturally as nature intended. "Fruit-a-tives" keeps the skin active, and purifies and enriches the blood. "Fruit-a-tives" tones up and strengthens the organs of digestion, insuring food being properly digested and assimilated.

Everyone can take ordinary precautions, avoid crowded places, and use "Fruit-a-tives" regularly to insure sound digestion, to keep the bowels and kidneys regular and the whole system in the best possible condition. Then we are safe from disease.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by dealers everywhere at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa, Ont.

(Written for the United Press)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 19. (By Mail)—The Germans are annoyed by the prequency with which they run into the Americans along the line. The Germans don't understand it.

An American outfit captured a German line officer east of Rheims after his unit with others had been trying to break through for three days. A French intelligence officer asked the German why the boches failed to break through.

"The reason for the failure?" said the German, "it is the Americans. We are storm troops, our unit. We have been in attacks on three points along the line in a month. Each time we have run into Americans. I have letters from friends along the line. They have all hit or been hit by Americans, who are everywhere."

GRAIN MARKET

The market continues weak from an over supply of poor quality thin cattle, a large proportion of which should be held back for feeding. Too many cattle of his class are at the present time being uselessly sacrificed at a time when most of the markets are suffering from a congestion of half-starved unfinished cattle. Why so many of these cattle are being shipped to market just now, is a question which many of the men most interested in the future of the cattle trade are asking. Various are the reasons and explanations given. Some say that prospects of peace coming earlier than was only a short time ago expected has given rise to a fear among farmers, feeders and shippers that prices of all live stock will suddenly break, and also that grain prices will be lower. For these reasons it is said that many feeders are getting rid of their cattle, and selling their grain in order to take advantage of high prices, particularly for grain, while the high prices last. Incidentally, too, they are relieving themselves of the labour and trouble involved in feeding the grain to the cattle. Then again it is said that there is a shortage of feed stuffs. Against this it is said that the farmers never had so much grain and fodder feed in their barns before, and that if they would fatten their cattle, instead of sacrificing them in the present overcrowded markets, they would realize far more money in the end. It is pointed out, too, that not only is the farmer and feeder standing to lose money by following the present policy, but that serious injury to the cattle trade of the future and to the country at large, is bound to result from this wasteful sacrifice of all the young cattle in the country. As for the "break" in prices which the farmers are said to fear, there is very little prospects of such a break coming for some considerable time yet, whether there is an early peace or not.

The effect on the local market this week of the overcrowding with poor stock has been a further decline of 50c. in addition to the decline of a dollar or more in the previous week. Thursday's market closed weak and draggy for everything except for choice and well-finished butcher cattle, good quality feeders, and choice heavy steers.

Lambs were down 50c. to a $1.

Hogs weak, with prospects of a further decline next week.

Cattle Receipts.

Union Stock Yards—Total receipts this week: 6,536 cattle, 869 calves, 6,291 hogs, and 7,097 sheep and lambs.

City Cattle Market—35 cars, with 496 cattle, 1,008 sheep and lambs, 252 hogs, and 63 calves.

Oats are weak. Corn a little stronger. Corn reacted from the too sudden and sharp decline of a day or two ago. At the same time there is a feeling that anything is possible to happen on the war fronts in the next few days, and in the option market there is a hesitancy in going long on corn. Brian Tells Ruth What He Earns--They Plan to Use It to Advantage

CHAPTER XI.

When Ruth asked Brian for the dollar for Mrs. Murphy, she added:

"You better give me a little more; she is coming up to do the dishes."

"How much?"

"Oh, I guess twenty-five cents will be enough for her. There arn't many"

Brian counted out twenty-five cents and added it to the dollar, then handed it to Ruth. Had she thought he would give her more, so preventing her being placed where she would have to borrow from Mrs. Murphy again, she was disappointed.

"Brian," she said after a pause, "don't you think we'd better sit down together and plan to use your salary to the best advantage, like the young couple in the story?"

"Very well, perhaps it will be the best way."

It was late when they finished. Ruth was too amazed to speak when Brian told her what he earned. Why, she had often paid more for a gown than his entire monthly salary. But she hid her surprise from him. She had married him knowing he was a poor man—how poor she never had dreamed—and she would do the best she could. So they apportioned their income. So much for rent, so much for food, ice, lights; so much for rough help. The rest they divided in half. Ruth to do as she pleased with her half, Brian to have the same privilege.

"But, dear, we haven't counted a penny for outing or theatres," she said, when finally they got up to retire.

"No, I guess we'll have to do without many theatres for a while. We'll go to the movies occasionally, and if we DO go to the theatre, we will each pay for our own ticket."

"Oh, how funny!" and Ruth laughed hysterically. Not that she really thought it funny, but that it seemed so utterly uncongruous. The idea that she should buy her own ticket, and he his, out of their own part of the meagre amount left for clothes, etc., made her hysterical.

"How long do you think it will be, Brian, before you can earn more?" she asked soberly, the next morning at breakfast. She had eaten nothing, neither had she slept. She was beginning to realize that even though she loved him and was willing to economize, that unless he quickly brought in more money they could scarcely afford to live, even in the, to her, mean little place they now occupied. "Oh, very soon I shall get some paying cases before long. There's a man down on Long Island owes me a little money. I'll try to collect that. Is there anything particular you want right away?"

"No, dear, but I've been thinking. You see, our clothes will be shabby and out of style. We will have to have new ones. We can't possibly buy clothes on what you earn now"

Don't cross bridges until you come to them. I don't see but what we are pretty well fixed. By the time we need clothes, we'll be able to have them."

Ruth bit her lip and said no more. And not even Brian's compliment, because of her improved breakfast, could bring a smile to her face.

Brian really meant what he said. He didn't see but what they were pretty well fixed. He never had been accustomed to luxury, and the neat, simply-furnished rooms; with the dainty muslin curtains at the windows and soft-toned rag rugs on the floor, the comfortable chairs, big table—which, after dinner was cleared away, they used as a reading table—seemed to him all that was necessary for comfort. Brian thought a great deal of that: his comfort. Had he not, he might have been more successful in a business way. But "manana" was always on his lips. Never was he in a hurry to accomplish anything; another day was coming, he would do it then.

He had a very optimistic nature, and a way of impressing people who did not know him, fostering in them the belief that he would accomplish great things. But Mrs. Clayborne had seen the weakness in his character, and had feared for Ruth's happiness because of it.

Had Brian been, or had Mrs. Clayborne thought him, more stable, she would not so much have minded his poverty, and she would have asssisted him and Ruth until such time as they could get along alone. But she sensed his weakness, and felt sure that sooner or later Ruth would wake up to the sort of man she had married and come back home. Not that Mrs. Clayborne thought Brian a bad man. She didn't. And he wasn't! but she did sense his limitations. He was, he always would be a financial failure—so she thought. And so after a month or two of life in New York, had Ruth begun to think.

It was so belittling, Ruth thought, to count every penny. Yet, never did she voice a compaint. She went to market in all the bravery of her expensive gowns, carried a basket and bought a little of this, and a little of that, and Mrs. Murphy said "lugged it home"

To say Ruth was happy would not be true. It would be equally untrue to say she was unhappy at this time. She was still very much in love with Brian; yet she often spent nearly the entire day weeping. Her surroundings, in spite of all she could do, depressed her. She longed for the dainty, beatuiful things to which she all her life had been accustomed.

Ladies! Salute Him!
Discovers drug that loosens sore, touchy corns so they lift out

A noted Cincinnati chemist discovered a new ether compound and called it freezone and little quarter ounce bottles can now be obtained from any drug store for a few cents.

You simply apply several drops of freezone upon a tender corn or painful callus and instantly the soreness disappears, then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can just lift it off with the fingers.

No pain, not a bit of soreness, either when applying freezone or afterwards, and it does not even irritate the skin.

Hard corns, soft corns, or corns between the toes, also toughened calluses, just shrivel up and lift off so easily. It is wonderful! Seems magical. It works like a charm. Millions of women will hereafter keep a little bottle of the wonderful freezone handy and never let a corn ache twice.

A New Word.

A peculiar expression has arisen in Vancouver. If one lives in that Canadian Pacific port, and has not heard the term "jaywalker," then he or she can claim a particular merit as a law-abiding citizen. To be a "jaywalker" is to be a person who, when crossing a street, does so at some point other than a street intersection, and thereby ignores the by law which, in his defence let it be said, has fallen into what a politician once termed "innocuous desuetude." It used to be said in this country of anyone who crossed a street at a point other than the intersections that he thereby proclaimed himself to be a foreigner.

ESKIMO WHALE DANCE.

When Arctic Natives Feast and Pick Their Life Mates.

A very primitive custom of the natives of the Bering and arctic coasts of Siberia, a custom that has come down from generations of savage ancestors, is the annual celebration of the whale dance, when the Eskimos select their wives.

When the sun moves southward at the end of the short summer season and the ice closes up the northern seas the whales come down to open water. Then, in celebration of the season's catch, the ice dwellers assemble for the whale dance, which lasts twenty-one days.

The great dance circle is prepared, and in the center the dancers, both male and female, perform the most savage of evolutions and motions to the accompaniment of rhythmless beating of the tomtoms and weird chanting. The dance songs tell of the prowess of the hunters and of the history of the tribe. The movements of the women are surprisingly graceful, and they mean to show in their dance that, as daughters of a great people, they are possessed of all the qualities such women should have. The men execute pantomimic scenes of the hunt and go through all the motions of the kill. They spear the ice bear, slay the walrus and seal and finally, with extraordinary contortions, vanquish the mighty whale.

During the last days of the feast, when the time arrives for the selection of husbands and wives, the man performs his mate dance before the woman he has picked out. In pantomime he promises to provide her generously with the fruit of the hunt, both food and fur. If she is pleased with him she walks out and dances her acceptance and shows how she will look after the igloo. When they have danced before each other they are married after the custom of the tribe, and he leads her off to his walrus hide lodge.

During the dance they feast on whale. The skin of the baleen whale is about an inch thick and looks like rubber. The solid blubber between it and the true flesh is usually about fourteen inches thick. The black skin and the blubber, the latter cut to the thickness of the former, is called moktuk and is considered a great delicacy. It is eaten raw and, although it sounds repulsive to the civilized ear, is most palatable. It has a flavor something like that of chestnuts.—Youth's Companion.

Prime Numbers.

It might appear at first that every number can be divided by some number besides itself and one; but many numbers cannot, and if they cannot they are known as prime numbers. Of all the numbers having a value of less than 1,000, there are 169 that are prime. Of these twenty-six are smaller than 100, twenty-one appear between 100 and 200, sixteen between 200 and 300, sixteen between 300 and 400, seventeen between 400 and 500, fourteen between 500 and 600, sixteen between 600 and 700, fourteen between 700 and 800, fifteen between 800 and 900 and fourteen between 900 and 1,000.

His Vacation.

A woman and a negro cleaning the yard for her. His wife had been dead for several years. So his employer seized a favorable moment and proceeded to sound him.

"John," she said, "you're a good, steady man. Lots of women would be glad to have you. Why don't you get a wife?"

John leaned on his rake and scratched his head reflectively.

"Well, I tell you," he replied. "You know I was married seven years, an' I've got to have a rest."—Indianapolis News.

Trucks Relieve Freight Congestion

THE interurban highway and the motor truck make a useful combination for solving the short haul transportation problem.

Many business houses have derived material benefits from this method of distribution. Delays through railway car shortage and terminal congestion have been reduced. Delivery costs have been reduced and customers have been served more promptly.

The highway and the motor truck have brought the city nearer the farm and the farmer's products nearer the city. Larger profits have accrued to farmers, and merchants who utilize the motor truck on the highway. The Ford One-Ton Truck Chassis is built for this particular service.

WHEN WILL THE WAR BE OVER?

CAN you answer this question—When will the war be over? Every boy and girl wants to know. You can, if you are able to read this puzzle. The answer is contained within the 48 squares above. What is this answer? Solve it, and valuable prizes await you.

HOW TO SOLVE IT

The above squares hold the answer. It is in one sentence of nine words, containing forty letters. Each letter is represented by a number, and that number is the position of the letters in the alphabet. For instance, A is represented by the figure 1, as it is first in the alphabet, and so on. Now, to help you get started, we will tell you that the first letter in the puzzle is "W," because W is the 23rd letter in the alphabet. Get to work and figure out the words in the sentence, and try to find the answer to the great question, "When will the war be over?" It is not easy, but it is worth while trying for.

The HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

WHY NOT TODAY, TOO—AND TOMORROW

One of our exchanges under date May 20, 1918, it said yesterday was Mother's Day. We sent mother a letter or a bouquet or a telegram; or we visited with her and talked and talked and, perhaps told her some things that have been in our heart, but which sons and daughters seem to be able to express on only a few occasions.

Mother was happy yesterday. She doesn't ask for attention or consideration and little expressions of appreciation—but she enjoys them and she will remember them long after the donors will have forgotten them. The letter which she received will be put safely, but quietly, away so that she may read it again and again. The flowers will carry fragrance and comfort to her long after the petals have dropped off. The good words will remain in her mind for months, if not years, after the sons and daughters will have forgotten that they had been expressed.

But why not make Mother's Day out of to-day and to-morrow?

Mothers have not reared their families and given the sons and daughters their training and help and comfor and cheer by offering their services on only one ray a year. Mothers work the year round for their children.

So why wouldn't the children work the year round for mothers?

Let all our kindnesses be from a kind heart, and not formal acts for the world to see. Let us not wear two faces—the one in company, the other behind the scenes. But let us be kind, loving and true at home, when the world is not looking on. The home in which love reigns supreme is a heaven on earth. "The bosom which does not feel love is cold; the mind which does not conceive it is dull; the philosophy which does not accept it is false." And the only true religion has pure and reciprocal love for its basis. Be kind and affectionate to mother. Let it be the greatest pleasure to perform the little loving kindnesses that add so much to the brightness of a home. Meet father with a kiss of love. Be a ray of sunshine in your own home.

Happiness ought to be contagious and to make it so the good things of life must be shared. Not merely with our family but with our neighbors and acquaintances, our townsmen, and "the strangers within our gates." We should use our blessings, not put them up in lavender leaves, or camphor balls to keep—but scatter them broadcast, share them with others. If we have blooming roses, share them; if we have fine grapes on our vines, share them; if we have beautiful pictures, invite people to see them; if we have helpful thoughts, give them away. This generous method of living will bear a rich harvest, not perhaps in a like return, but in placing the donor on a higher plane of thought and giving him a broader view of life and its obligations.

We wish that some arrangement could be made to feed the flies that remain in the church buildings during the week, suggests an exchange. It is rather annoying to have to sit there all during the service and fight flies. During the Sunday service, many flies are attracted to the church, possibly by the bald heads of the elders or the sweet singing of the choir. Then at the close of the service, when the janitor hurriedly closes the edifice, many of them are left in the church to remain a prisoner for a week without rations. By the next Sunday they are too weak to get out of the church and consequently attack the congregation with all the vigor their weakened condition will permit. Something should be done to feed them and we would be willing to contribute a reasonable amount to such a fund. Last Sunday we sat there and fought flies all during the service and were thus robbed of a much needed nap. Perhaps some will object to feeding them in the interests of the conservation of food; but something should be done. If we can't feed them, the church should draw on the collection fund and purchase a lo of fly swatters and have the ushers deliver one to each member of the congregation. Perhaps if the sermon was punctuated by a few vigorous swats from some enthusiastic swatter, it would lend encouragement to the minister.

RELIGION AT HOME

Religion, if in heavenly truths attired
Needs only to be seen to be admired.
—Cowper.

Our greatest writers all agree that religion affords home security and happiness, removes family friction, and causes all complicated wheels of the home machinery to move on smoothly. When dark and sad days begin to shadow the home, what can cheer and brighten the sinking heart like turning to one who can make the tears of sorrow to be the seed pearls of the brightest crown. What does a home become with religion as its life and rule? Human nature is checked and moulded by the amiable spirit and loving character of Jesus. The heart is softened, sentiments refined, passions subdued, hopes elevated, purposes ennobled, the would cast into the shade and heaven realized at the first prize. The great want of our intellectual and moral nature is here impregnated with the spirit and elements of preparation for eternity. Like manna it will feed our souls, quench our thirst, sweeten the cup of life and shed a halo of glory and of gladness around the fireside. Let yours, therefore be the religious home and God will delight to dwell therein and his bleesings will descend like the dews of heaven upon it. Yours will be the home of love and harmony, of family hopes and happiness.

GREATEST RULE OF HEALTH

With all their differences in regard to disease, its cause and treatment, doctors are of one mind in regard to the one greatest rule of health, viz: "Daily movement of the Bowels." Unnumbered thousands of people suffer almost continuously as the result of constipation who could be readily cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-

A Hard Job.

When to Stop Advertising.

An English journal requested a number of the largest advertisers to give their opinions concerning the best time to stop advertising, and the following replies were received:

When the population ceases to multiply and the generation that crowded on after you and never heard of you stops coming on.

When you have convinced everybody whose life will touch yours that you have better goods and lower prices than he can get anywhere else.

When you stop making fortunes solely through the direct use of this mighty agent.

When younger and fresher houses in your line cease starting up.

When you would rather have your own way and fail than take advice and win.

A Candid Caller.

A small boy had been coerced into making an afternoon call with his mother. He had rebelled vehemently over the calling business, saying: "Aw, what you want to make me go there for? She hasn't any boys, and it won't be any fun."

But, dressed in his best suit, he had put on his company manners and had behaved very well indeed, and when their hostess served refreshments he began to feel glad that he had come.

When it came time to leave he held out his hand, saying gallantly:

"Goodby; I've had a good time"—and then, right while his young mother was beaming her approval, he added honestly—"a whole lot better time than I expected to have."

A Benevolent Refusal.

"Senator, I wish you would give me a job as your private secretary."

"Oh, my boy," responded the oily senator, "don't get mixed up with the government service. Nothing to it. Ruins a young man. Besides, I have promised that position to my son."

Cynical.

"Is he a good after dinner speaker?"

"If there is such a thing as a good after dinner speaker I presume you'd call him one."—Detroit Free Press.

LEMON JUICE TAKES OFF TAN

Girls! Make bleaching lotion if skin is sunburned, tanned or freckled

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle, sunburn and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very, small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons, and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of Orchard White for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles, sunburn, windburn and tan disappear, and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

The Red Squirrel.

When the red squirrel begins tapping maple trees for the sap the animal makes an incision in the bark and waits until the sap has trickled a short distance down the trunk of the tree. He then begins at the bottom of the stream and licks up until he has reached the source of the flow, when he again waits and repeats the performance until satisfied.

Difficult Dentistry.

Pulling a lion's tooth is not easy. Ordinarily the beast is tied to the floor of his cage. Then a board is removed from directly under his head. Through this the doctor reaches up with huge forceps and performs the operation.

Right to the Point.

Magician—I can read minds. Engineer—Yuh ken? Ken yuh read mine, magician—Certainly. Engineer—Why don't yuh hit me, then?

A lie always has a certain amount of weight with those who wish to believe it.—Disraeli.

THE ROPES OF MAUI.

An Ancient Legend of the Sun From the South Seas.

One of the most picturesque legends connected with the solar beams is that told in the islands of the south Pacific, where sunbeams are known as "the ropes of Maui." It is related that in former times the sun god Ra was not so regular in his habits as he is today. In fact, he caused the south sea islanders much annoyance by setting in the morning or at noon or at other inopportune times, just when his light was needed for the daily tasks of mankind.

The great hero Maui undertook to cure him of these erratic habits, and the first step was to make the sun god prisoner. This was accomplished by laying a series of six snares made of strong cocoanut fiber along the sun's path in the sky. When the deity next rost from Avaiki, or the land of ghosts, the first noose encircled him, but slipped down and only caught his feet; the second slipped, too, but caught the sun god's knees; the third caught around his hips.

Still Ra pressed on, scarcely hampered by these contrivances. The fourth noose tightened around his waist, the fifth under his arms, and finally the sixth and last caught him around the neck and almost strangled him. Then the sun god confessed himself vanquished and in fear of his life promised Maui that he would in future adjust his daily journeys more in accordance with the comfort and convenience of mortal men.

Ra was then allowed to proceed on his way, but Maui prudently declined to take off the ropes, which may still be seen hanging from the sun at dawn and when he descends into the ocean at night. Hence the islanders say, when they behold the beams radiating from the sun, "Tena te Taura a Maui"—"See the ropes of Maui."

Ancient Trade Unions.

Seven thousand years ago there were trade unions in Nineveh and Babylon, and so strict were their rules that in some cases the penalty of death was inflicted for infringing them. Each man's work was strictly defined, and even the number of hours that he was allowed to work was stated in the charter of his guild or union. Later exactly the same state of affairs existed in Pompeii, and inscriptions have been discovered stating specific appointments of officials to trade unions.

Bees and Ants.

Bees will place their honeycombs in any place regularly or irregularly shaped, and when they come to corners and angles they seem to stop and consider. Then they vary the shape of the cell, so that the space is exactly filled. It could not be done more satisfactorily if the whole thing had been worked out on paper beforehand. Ants make hard and smooth roads and drive tunnels compared to which man's efforts in making such things are insignificant.

Teeth on Their Tongues.

The biggest of fresh water fishes, the "arapaima" of the Amazon, in South America, which grows to six feet in length, has teeth on its tongue, so that the latter resembles the file and is used as such. Some kinds of trout also have the same peculiarity. Fishes that swallow their prey entire have their teeth so supported on flexible bases as to bend backward, but not forward, in order that their victims shall not escape after they have been once seized.

The Siamese Topknot.

A Siamese child, whether boy or girl, wears its hair in a little topknot until it has attained the age of eleven or twelve years. On reaching this age the topknot cutting ceremony takes place. The child is dressed in its best, and amid much rejoicing of relatives and friends the topknot is cut, one lock at a time. The head is then completely shaved by the priests. All guests invited to the ceremony bring presents, usually money, which is carefully invested for the child by its parents or guardians. A young prince or princess will sometimes receive as much as $25,000 in presents at his or her topknot cutting ceremony, while a poor child may get $10 or $15.—Wide World Magazine.

PESTS OF THE TROPICS.

Insects Whose Bite Is Like the Touch of Redhot Iron.

The pestiferous insects that infest the region tributary to the headwaters of the Amazon make life miserable for any one who may venture into the region. Commander H. A. Edwards of the Bolivia-Brazil boundary commission declares that there is no escaping them and that you are always scratching or slapping your body, except when you are under your mosquito net—and even then if you are not asleep.

In camp ants are a continual nuisance. They eat your clothes, gnaw the softer parts of your boots and ravage the food. Many kinds bite savagely. One kind, which the natives call itashi, lives in palosantos or holy posts—trees that they hollow out themselves. Their bite is like the touch of a redhot iron, and if any one inadvertently leans against a palosanto the little red demons swarm out upon him instantly, and so bite him that for an hour afterward his life is almost unbearable.

Most dreaded of all are the tucanderas—black ants with bodies one and a half inches long that live in the forks of trees, but that often invade your tent. They bite very hard and probably inject some sort of poison into their victims, for the part bitten swells and pains excruciatingly. The sauba or leaf carrying ants, black ants that make broad, straight roads of their own and move about in armies with scouts and flanking parties; gray ants that live in mounds of red earth six feet high, yellow ants that dwell in rotten wood—all make the traveler unwelcome, either by damaging his belongings or by inflicting pain on his person.

Mosquitoes, the bite of which is not only painful and irritating, but imparts malaria and yellow fever; various phlebotomous flies that inject the germs of what is called three day fever; wasps of all kinds; bees of all sizes; hornets as large as the smaller humming birds; the matoucha and the tabana, a sort of mangrove fly with a taste for bloodsucking—each and every one of them does its share toward making the life of the explorer in those regions almost unbearable. There are flies that lay their eggs in your flesh or in your clothes.

Where there is any sort of grass you cannot guard against the attack of the muquim, a microscopic tick whose sojourn on your body causes a most tantalizing itch that you can alleviate only by sponging your body night and morning with alcohol. And in many places the pium, a small black fly that looks like a speck of dust, drives you half crazy by its bite. Although those regions are a paradise for the entomologist, the ordinary traveler will hardly regard them in that light.

She Was Ready.

Former Mistress — I would like to give you a good recommendation, Delia, but my conscience compels me to state that you never got the meals on time. I wonder how I can put that in a nice sort of way? Delia—Yez moight jist say that Oi got the meals the same way as Oi got me pay.—Puck.

VALUABLE RUBBISH.

Fortunes Made Now in What Was Once Looked Upon as Refuse.

A gold mine in a refuse heap may sound strange, but it is a fact, for many things once considered mere waste are now a source of more wealth than an ordinary gold mine would yield.

In the earlier days of gas lighting the coal tar was regarded as a horrible nuisance and surreptitiously got rid of. Then the great discovery was made that all the hues of the rainbow dwelt in this dirty looking stuff which men despised and threw away. Today the byproducts of coal tar are counted by the scores.

In Lancashire alone cotton waste, once considered rubbish, has an annual value of £15,000,000! It consists of fag ends and sweepings and pickings and combings. Thousands of women are employed to divide this stuff into good, middling and bad, and it is sold at various prices for different purposes—papermaking, matting, surgical wadding and, most of all, the making of shoddy.

Soap boilers used to have great difficulty in getting rid of a thick, evil smelling liquid, which was the chief byproduct of their industry. They ran it into streams and sewers. Presently some one began collecting it and refining it. The result was pure glycerin.—London Answers.

INDIA'S GREAT POET.

Plain Living and High Thinking Rule His Existence.

In "Rabindranath Tagore," by Basanta Koomar Roy, is this picture of the simple life of the great poet and seer of India, who won the Nobel prize for literature:

"Tagore himself lives alone in a house. He gets up with the morning bell, sometimes before, and takes his morning bath, goes on the roof and loses himself in meditation for hours at a time. In this house he quite often cooks his own meals in an 'economic cooker.' He does not eat much. Boiled rice, boiled potatoes, cauliflower or beans, enough of butter are all that he cares to eat. He is not fond of milk or sweets. He takes long walks for exercise and is fond of gardening.

"Plain living and high thinking is the keynote of his life at Bolpur. He preaches to the boys and to the teachers twice a week in the temple. His love for the children is of an idealistic nature. At times one of them will steal into his room and watch him smile and move his head to and fro as he writes or thinks over a poem. One such boy startled him by exclaiming, 'That's how the madmen do.'

"'Yes, my child, poets are worse than madmen. When did you come into the room?'"

Testing an Explosive.

One of the most dangerous of explosives is iodide of nitrogen, a black powder which the slightest touch will often cause to explode when dry with great violence. In experiments to determine the cause of its extreme explosiveness some damp iodide of nitrogen was rubbed on the strings of a bass viol. It is known that the strings of such an instrument will vibrate when those of a similar instrument having an equal tension are played upon. In this case, after the explosive had become thoroughly dry upon the strings, another bass viol was brought near and the strings sounded. At a certain note the iodide of nitrogen on the prepared instrument exploded. It was found that the explosion occurred only when a rate of vibration of sixty a second was communicated to the prepared strings. Vibration of the G string caused an explosion, while that of the E string had no effect.

THE SECRETARY BIRD.

It Kicks Like a Mule and Can Swallow a Snake Whole.

The rarest and most valuable birds in the New York zoological garden are the strange pair of secretary birds quartered in the ostrich house. "Secretary birds" they are called because of the crest of long dark plumes that rises from the back of their heads, giving them the appearance of a clerk with a bunch of quill feathers behind his ear. It's an aristocratic name, but the thing that makes the secretary bird valuable is not his looks. The natives of South Africa love him because he can kick like a mule.

Toss into his cage a snake, no matter how vicious, and the fight begins immediately. The bird cautiously approaches the snake with wings widespread to escape the sudden lunges by flight if necessary. Once, twice, three times perhaps the snake lunges. The bird darts back, waiting his chance. At last it comes, and one of those long, hard legs shoots out like the hoof of a mule, landing squarely on the snake's head. It reels and falls back stunned to be knocked out completely by a second blow. And then its victor proceeds to swallow it whole.

In South Africa the birds are regarded as a great protection. They are affectionate mates and always travel together. When pursued they spread their wings and make off over the ground with the speed of a running horse.—Every Week.

INDIAN SUMMER.

The Term May Have Had Its Origin in the Far East.

The origin of the term "Indian summer," like that of the word "blizzard," has been the subject of much research. It has been traced back only as far as the latter part of the eighteenth century, and it did not become common until after the first decade of the nineteenth.

Many explanations of the name have been offered, all of which assume that the term "Indian" used in this connection refers to the American Indians.

A recent note in the Monthly Weather Review calls attention to a totally different use of this term, in which the reference is not to the American Indians, but to East India.

Under the British board of trade regulations one of the load lines marked on ships bears the initials "I. S.," this being the maximum depth to which vessels can be loaded for voyages during the "Indian summer"—i. e., the fine season in the Indian seas.

How long has the term "Indian summer" been used in this sense? It is not recorded in any dictionary nor apparently in any work on meteorology. Is it possible that our autumnal Indian summer was so named by sailors or travelers who saw in it a resemblance to the fine weather attending the northeast monsoon in India?

LIKE A MONEY TREE.

Simple and Profitable Scheme of a Kongo Trading Company.

The possibilities of a really enterprising trading company are realized at Kiniku, central Africa, where the Kongo Oriental company owns all stores, where money can be spent and fixes its own prices for ivory, rubber, labor and trade goods. "It was as if by planting a few francs in the ground money bearing trees had sprung into existence." The lucrative procedure is explained in James Barnes' "Through Central Africa."

"As soon as a native was paid cash for anything, either as an advance or for services rendered, he hastened hot foot to the company's stores and bought anything from a harmonicon to a secondhand gold braided uniform, and as the profit in these articles ran from 100 to 250 per cent it can easily be seen where the money trees come in.

"The man who had brought in ivory was paid for it in cash at a rate that insured a profit of about 150 per cent, and immediately he repaired to the store, where he bought things he had no use for, giving another profit of cent per cent at least. The money was sent from the store to the company's offices, where the native was paid for carrying the ivory on the first stage of its long journey to the coast. The money received was the same that had been paid for the ivory in the first place, and the bearer would surely come back and spend his wages at the store again.

"It was a lovely system, and the only real chance for loss was the wear and tear on the money itself and the expense of bookkeeping. If the native demanded an extra price for ivory or labor there was very little trouble made over it—the extra cost was added to the articles in the store."

The Mistletoe.

The mistletoe is a Druidical contribution to Christmas. It was held in great veneration by the Druids in ancient England, and the cutting of it was attended by sacrificing and feasting.

With weird incantations the priest climbed the tree on which the mistletoe grew and cut it away with a knife of purest gold, no base metal being allowed to touch it. As the twigs fell they were received below in a mantle of spotless whiteness.

Great Orchestra Coming.

The Paris Symphony Orchestra, it is announced, is to give fifty concerts in leading American and Canadian cities, beginning in October. Perhaps there are music lovers to whom music is the same whether it is produced by an enemy or a friend, but it is fair to presume that the great majority feel otherwise about it. It has not been possible for Canadians generally, during the last year or so, to extract real satisfaction from a symphony orchestra concert while keeping one suspicious eye on the leader and another on the bass viol player, and at the same time wondering whether the clarinetist and the first cornetist were not exchanging signals while pretending to be rapt in the ecstasies of German melody.

The High Cost of Whims

THE United States Government has found it necessary to issue strict orders regulating the styles of shoes. Why? Because the high cost of fads imposes a burden all along the line—upon manufacturer, dealer and consumer, and upon the Government itself.

Such action may be avoided in Canada, if you—the consumer—will co-operate with the manufacturer in reducing the demand for extravagant styles—if you will buy prudently, for service rather than for effect.

To do this will be a direct benefit to you. You will get better and longer service, more comfort, and your shoes will be quite as neat and attractive. You will need fewer pairs of shoes in the course of a year.

More than that: you will help to cut down needless extravagance, to reduce superfluous stocks on the dealers' shelves, to keep prices down, and to release essential supplies of leather for our forces overseas.

Growing Old Together

THIS aged couple, mellowed by time and the experiences of life, are happily growing old together.

They are happy because they are healthy. Life is still full of interest to them, and they are wide awake to new ideas.

These are the kind of old people that everybody likes. For, in spite of the years, they are cheerful and optimistic.

It is only natural that the blood should get thin and vitality wane as age advances, but there are ways of keeping up the quality of the blood and maintaining health and vigor.

Very many men and women have found in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food exactly what they need to restore energy and strength and keep them healthy and happy.

As an example Mr. Stephen J. Leard, North Tryon, P.E.I., writes: "At seventy-five years of age my heart gave out and became very irregular and weak in action and would palpitate. My nerves also became weak, and I could do nothing but lie in bed in a languishing condition, losing strength and weight. In that condition I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and am cured. Had I not obtained this treatment I would now be in the box with the roof over my nose. At eighty-one I have an energy which means go, and I am writing this letter so that old people like myself may prolong their health and strength by using this great medicine."

There can be no doubt that this treatment contained exactly what was required to build up Mr. Leard's system.

We are constantly receiving so many letters of this kind that we can, with the greatest confidence, recommend people of advanced years to put Dr. Chase's Nerve Food on trial, as a means of restoring and maintaining health and vigor.

Here is another interesting letter. This time from a lady:

Mrs. Joseph Lalonde, Hydro Glen, Ont., writes: "I have to thank you very much for what your medicines have done for me, especially the Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills. I was so run down and nervous last summer that I was in bed most of the time, unable to do any work. I have also been troubled with my kidneys for over twenty years, and tried every doctor I knew of without any permanent results, but I can say that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills have made me feel quite different. Since taking this combined treatment I have been able to do my housework, and although I am now 76 years old, I feel better than I have for years."

("I know Mrs. Joseph Lalonde, and believe her statement regarding Dr. Chase's medicines to be true."—W. P. Flannery, Postmaster.)

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Rose of Vishti

By ALVAH JORDAN GARTH

Bardsville was all agog when it was known that the old Baythorne place had been purchased by one Alan Tresham and that he and his sister, Mrs. Eunice Woods, a widow, were about to restore to the quiet little town some of its ancient social prestige.

Rumor had it that an uncle of the pair, who had made a vast fortune in India, had left them not only an incomparable collection of Eastern treasures and curiosities, but also a large cash fortune. "The uncle was a regular rajah they say," a village wiseacre announced. "He sent this fortune over by an old family servant, one Singh, who is a model of loyalty to the family. They're high jinks, I tell you, and they won't mix much with us common folks, I'm thinking," declared the old gossip.

But never were caviling critics more agreeably disappointed. It seemed as if a typical spirit of youth and beauty came to the community with the advent of Alan Tresham and his sister. Marvelous stories were told of the unique oriental furnishings of the new home. Marion Deane was the first to be invited as a visitor. The Deanes lived next door to the beautiful old mansion. Marion was hanging out some strips of lace and ribbon to dry near the dividing wall, when a sweet voice hailed her and a sweet face smiled over at her.

"Could you come over for a little chat and bring a basket with you, please?" suggested Eunice Woods, and went on to explain that the strawberries were rotting away and were too delicious to thus neglect.

Marion was started for home with a four-quart basket filled to the brim with the luscious fruit and an invitation to come over again later in the day. It was then that she met Alan Tresham. It was then, too, that he took her through the downstairs rooms of the house, showing her the curiosities in the cabinets, the collections of rarities and curiosities which his uncle had acquired.

Within a week Marion was the chosen friend of brother and sister. The newcomers encouraged local trade generously and programs were outlined for various fetes at the grand old place, to which everybody was invited.

Then one day the whole town was startled by the report that burglars had made a raid on the mansion. During the temporary absence of its inmates every cabinet had been ransacked.

"But not a single article taken away," Alan explained to Marion. "See, even this basket filled with precious stones has not one missing."

"I have discovered something," at that moment reported old Singh, and he handed to his young master an oblong piece composed of bamboo fiber and rice paper. Across its face were a number of hieroglyphics.

"What does this signify?" inquired Alan.

"It is a warning."

"From whom?"

"From some emissary of a secret order of the hill tribes of the upper Ganges."

"But why should I be warned?"

"Because these tireless fanatics believe your uncle has sent you some sacred memento, which they have been deputized to recover at all hazards."

"I wish they would simply come out from under cover and tell what they want. They are welcome to it," observed Alan in his generous, light-spirited way.

"They did not visit my room," Mrs. Woods told Marion. There was a chest there holding some rare costumes belonging to his uncle's collection. "Oh, you must see some of them. The very thing!" added the lady with animation. "We are all invited to the fancy dress ball and you and I will select some unique dress for the occasion."

She selected for Marion a beautiful white robe made of the finest silk, with curious patterns worked in it in pearls and many colored gems. It was a delightful occasion, the function they attended. Alan was devoted in his service to Marion. She had never been so happy and his sister seemed to smile on the budding hopes of these two lovers.

Marion had strolled into the lantern-lit garden for coolness after a waltz. Suddenly she was seized by two tawny-skinned, strange-looking men, and a handkerchief saturated with some pungent liquid pressed over her face. She came back to consciousness to find herself in a lighted unfurnished room, lying on a pallet of straw. As she opened her eyes one of the men approached her. He made a low obeisance with a gesture of deep respect.

"The dress," he said, pointing to the one Marion wore. "The sacred robe of Vishti. Lady, you will remove from our people far away in India a curse, you will save the peace of mind, perhaps the life of Sahib Tresham and his uncle, by giving it over to us. It was taken from our looted temple, a precious relic for centuries. We traced it here. See, here is a long cloak. We will retire. Deliver to us the dress and all will be well."

Alan Tresham was frantically scouring the country until he came upon Marion returning from her strange adventure. She told him her story. In return he told her one—love's own sweet story, never old, always the scene of life's fondest romance.

PEARL HARBOR.

Uncle Sam's Formidable Naval Base In the Pacific Ocean.

When it was seen that Manila was useless as a defense for this country and would be a handicap instead of a help in war Pearl Harbor, on one of the Hawaiian islands, nine miles from Honolulu, was selected, and $13,000,000 was appropriated by congress for its fortification. It has a better harbor than either Gibraltar or Helgoland. A concave sweep of land makes the harbor, which is crowned by a long ridge of gigantic trees and rugged and tumbled rock that terminates in an extinct volcano, known as Diamond Head. A frowning mountain side hides a beautiful lake that is reached from the sea by an inlet like the neck of a bottle. It covers eleven square miles, with a depth of about sixty feet over nearly all of it. The neck that leads to the sea is three miles long and hardly wider than necessary for vessels to pass. Parallel with the coast is a coral reef a mile wide. Through this a channel a thousand feet wide has been cut.

It has been equipped with one of the most complete naval stations in the world, a mile square in extent. It has a drydock, which is the largest in the world, a $400,000 ammunition plant and oil tanks for vessels. The fortifications, extending for fifteen miles to Honolulu, consist of powerful batteries, with cement emplacements below the ground level. The ends are guarded by two forts, neither of which can be seen from the ocean. On the land the guns are defended by a series of earth works that form a crescent from the harbor to Honolulu. In the extinct volcano is a mortar battery. The four mortars of this battery have an extreme coast range of nine miles, throwing twelve inch shells weighing 700 pounds. The seacoast defenses have fourteen inch guns, and the forts are supplemented with submarine mines, controlled by electricity.

Pearl harbor is about 2,000 miles from Unalaska and from Samoa at opposite ends and a little less from San Francisco. So with this impregnable base a fleet can guard the whole range of the Pacific for this distance and have this safe retreat for refitting and fresh supplies.—Technical World Magazine.

Why Canada must borrow money to carry on

Because Canada has put her hand to the plow and will not turn back:—

—our country is in the war on the side of liberty and justice and will stay in it till complete victory is won and the unspeakable Hun is smashed and beaten to the ground;

—a nation at war must make tremendous expenditures in cash to keep up her armies and supply them with munitions, food and clothing;

—Canada must finance many millions of dollars of export trade in food, munitions and supplies which Britain and our allies must have on credit;

—for these purposes Canada must borrow hundreds of millions of dollars—

And, this money must be borrowed from the people of Canada:—

Therefore, Canada will presently come to her people for a new Victory Loan to carry on.

✦ ✦ ✦

Canadians will loan the money by again buying Victory Bonds.

The national safety, the national honor and the national well-being require that each and every Canadian shall do his duty by lending to the nation every cent he can spare for this purpose.

Be ready when the call comes to see your country through in its great war work.

Issued by Canada's Victory Loan Committee in co-operation with the Minister of Finance of the Dominion of Canada.

CARE OF GOOD CLOTHES.

The Finer the Stuff the More Watchful One Should Be.

It is a very common mistake to believe that good materials, whether of cotton, silk or wool, need less care than cheap ones. How often does one complain of the lack of wearing quality in a garment for which a big price has been paid. Yet, most frequently, what has worn out the fabric has not been actual use, but the neglect it has suffered.

One of the principal differences between good and cheap materials is that the better grades are finer spun. This may mean that the fabric is stronger and, in proportion to the uses to which it is put, may wear longer, but it also means that each tiny thread by itself is weaker and more apt to injury. Anything which may attack the threads one by one, therefore, does more harm with fine goods than with coarse.

No matter how careful one may try to be, clothes that one wears gradually get a trifle of the grease from the perspiration of the body. In spite of constant watching clothes will become dusty. This combination of dust and body moisture forms a regular breeding ground for tiny little vegetable growths. These are so small that it takes the most powerful microscope even to see them.

In themselves these bacteria do but little harm, but many of them set free an acid which eats into the fiber of the material. If the individual fiber is coarse the deposit of the acid upon it is not enough to eat all the way through, but if it is sheer or woven of fine threads one by one the threads are eaten through and the texture weakened.

Good clothing, instead of being kept shut away in boxes and drawers, should be constantly aired and shaken. The finer the material the more often should it be looked after. A coarse piece of goods will wear out by using, a fine piece by being laid away.

MILITARY STRATEGY.

Retreating Through a City is Disastrous to an Army.

If you suffer defeat in front of a great town and have to retreat through it under the blows of the victorious enemy you are in the worst possible position for conducting that retreat. The streets of the town (but few of which will run parallel to your course and can, therefore, serve as avenues of escape for your army) are so many defiles in which your columns will get hopelessly congested. The operation may be compared to the pouring of too much liquid into a funnel which has too small an orifice. Masses of your transport will remain clogged outside the place. You will run the risk of a partial and perhaps of a complete disaster as the enemy presses on.

There is very much more than this. A great town cannot but contain, if you have long occupied it, the material of your organization. You will probably abandon documents which the enemy should not see. You will certainly, in the pressure of such a fight, lose accumulated stores. Again, the transverse streets are so many points of "leakage" into which your congested columns will bulge out and get confused. Again, you will be almost necessarily dealing with the complications of a mass of civilian conditions which should never be allowed to interrupt a military operation.

In general, to fight in front of a great town when the chances are against you is as great an error as to fight in front of a marsh with few causeways. So far as mere topography is concerned, it is a greater error still.—From "The Elements of the Great War," by Hilaire Belloc.

Seville Nights.

In all the principal places and gardens of Seville moving picture screens are erected and small tables and chairs set out, the exhibitors either making their profits from the drinks sold or by rental of chairs at 2 cents each. Thousands of people go nightly to the different plazas and gardens, and the entire life of the city for about four months centers around these moving picture shows.

Leakage in Steam Pipes.

To make a permanent cement for stopping leakage in steam pipes where caulking or plugging is impossible, mix black oxide of manganese and raw linseed oil, using enough oil with the manganese to bring it to a thick paste. Apply to the pipe or joint at leak. If the pipe be kept sufficiently warm to absorb the oil from the manganese, in twenty-four hours the cement will be as hard as the iron pipe.

The Happy Mean.

"Why does Miss Oldgirl wear such exceedingly youthful costumes? She doesn't expect, does she, any one will believe her as young as all that?"

"Oh, no, but she hopes the observer will strike an average between her age and that of her apparel."

AN ESKIMO SOLDIER.

Gave His Life In France for Cause of Liberty.

In the Wide World Magazine Lacey Amy tells the story of how Great Britain's only Eskimo soldier fell in France. John Shiwak was the hero's name and when the Great War started he heard the call in far-off Labrador and before many months had gone by he was in an English training camp. Some weeks later he was on his way to France, full of ardour. His death occurred in the Cambrai tank drive. The tanks were held up by the canal before Masnieres, and John's company was ordered to rush a narrow bridge that had unaccountably been left standing. John, chief sniper for the battalion, lately promoted to lance-corporal, the muscular man of the wilds, outpaced his comrades. The battalion still argue which was the first to reach the bridge, John or another. But John reached the heights of the little arch and turned to wave his companions on.

It was a deadly corner of the battle front. The Germans, granted a breathing space by the obstacle of the canal, were rallying. Big shells were dropping everywhere, scores of machine-guns were barking across the narrow line of protecting water. And just beyond the bridge-head, in among the trees, the enemy had erected platforms in tiers, bearing machine-guns. As John stood, his helmet awry, his mouth open in shouts of encouragement unheard amid the din, the deadly group of guns broke loose. That was why the bridge had been left.

The Eskimo swayed, bent a little, then slowly sank. But even as he lay they saw his hand point ahead. And then he lay still. And they passed him on the bridge, lying straight and peaceful, gone to a better hunting ground than he had ever anticipated.

HARD ON HUN TANKS

(By United Press.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 12. (By Mail.)—In a certain division they never get through telling about their artillery They are proud of the artillery and the artillery is proud of its work.

Down in Lorraine the artillery had a sport which turned out to be something better than a game when the division took its stand east of Rheims. The artillerymen used to shoot at German "goulash wagons" and trucks coming down the roads behind the Lorraine lines. The Americans got quite expert at upsetting tra c as it rolled toward the front.

Near Rheims the artillery found bigger game. It was tanks. Out in front of the positions held by the allies were some sandy, low hills over which the Germans sent their tanks to harrass the American possitions. When the first tank crawled over the brow of the hill, an artilleryman applying the "goulash wagon" tactics, planted a shell squarely in the middle of the tank.

Meantime, other batteries got four more Hun tanks one by one as they crawled to a crossroad just behind the advanced German positions. The Germans were amazed at the accuracy of the fire, and found tanks a costly proposition when the better part of their fleet of more than twenty-five was damaged beyond use by the artillery, before the tanks could fire a shot.

The Allies Continue to Advance at All Points On the Western Front

The Important Town of Vouzieres Has Been Captured by the French—Burning Villages.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

Special to The Examiner

PARIS, Oct. 12.— Continuing their progress on the whole Champigne front, French troops this morning entered the town of Vouziers, on the western edge of the Argonne Forest, (the War Office last night's communique reported them within a mile and three-quarters of Vouziers.)

Burning Villages.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Oct. 12.— Vouzieres, Guise and all of the villages in the whole region south of Laon are burning. Americans are closing in on Dun Sur Meuse, while their left wing is within five miles of Buzancy. Important events which will change the entire front may be forthcoming in this part of of the Woevers front.

LONDON, Oct. 12. — (Official.) — British forces last night continued their advance north of the Sensee river. The advance is in the direction of Douai. The villages of Vamel, Drebieres, less than three miles from Douai, and Cuincy, less than two miles from Douai, have been captured.

Deserter's Beard Complete Disguise

Guy Cowan, arrested in his father's hay mow at Port Hope, was effectively disguised behind a black beard, three inches long, which he had cultivated from the time the first depot battalion was called together one year ago. To the Dominion Police officers, who brought him to Peterborough, he at first glance looked like an old man of seventy, and they would have passed him up but for the tip that he had been evading his barber as sedulously as he had avoided the military authorities.

At the police court this morning he appeared clean shaven, and penitent. He was called out in Toronto, and reported at Kingston 12 months ago, and returning home for a visit, stayed there.

Break in the Fine Weather

Spanish Influenza in Peterboro Gets a New Lease of Life.

The fine weather of the past few days came to an untimely end through the night and this morning the change manifested itself in the form of rain. Had the fine weather continued the Spanish influenza epidemic would have been exterminted as it usually follows in the wake of damp weather such as we had up until a few days ago. The change in the weather will also effect the farmers who were beginning to make great inroads on their fall ploughing and the harvesting of the fall crop of roots. The silo filling epidemic which has been sweeping the county of Peterborough is nearing the end of its course much to the gratification of the farmer and his hired man.

CROSSED GORGE ON FOUR INCH ROPE

Niagara Falls, Ont Oct. 11.—Old timers have recalled today as the 58th anniversary of Blondin's exploit of traversing Niagara Gorge on a four inch tight rope, one of the thousands of spectators being the Prince of Wales, the late King Edward This was the first time anyone had crossed the Niagara Gorge on a rope. He carried a man on his shoulders on one trip, wheeled a wheelbarrow over on the second trip, and on the third trip carried a stove on his ballancing rope and fixing it on the rope, cooked cakes and threw them to the people in the numerous small boats below on the river Blondin was afterwards killed in Paris.

He made a test in 1859 and in the following year successfully carried out his feat on October 10, 1860

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The Associated Press this morning issued the following summary:

The German lines along the Suippe River in the Champagne sector in France have collapsed. Progress made by the French during the past day in this part of the battle front would seem to indicate that the enemy's retreat northward is more of a flight than an orderly retreat. The French forces are reported to have reached the Recutne River between Houdilecourt and Sault-St.-Remy. Houdilecourt is less than four miles east of Neufchatel, one of the principal German bases back of the Champagne front. This advance brings the French up nearer the Aisne River and threatens the railroad line that parallels that stream. Further east the French have not advanced so swiftly ,but have made good progress. East of St. Quentin and Cambrai the French, British and Americans are still moving eastward, but their advance is being retarded by German rear-guards, left for the purpose of covering the retreat of the main bodies of troops. The Allied progress, however, appears to be rapid enough to threaten serious results to the German armies to the south.

To-day's Market Was Very Light

Buyers Were Afraid of the Spanish Influenza—The Prevailing Prices.

The Thanksgiving market was unusually small this morning, due, some of the farmers said, to the fact that the people were afraid of "Spanish Flu" in the city, which they claim has not reached the country.

Public Set Prices.

Prices were as usual set by the public. Starting out at 52 cents a pound, some of the farmers found others were getting 55 cents, and raised their price accordingly, until slow sales forced the prices down to 50 and 52 cents a pound. One concrete case of the fact that the farmers set their prices not by value but by what some one else gets might be quoted. A shopper got some butter at 52 cents; while waiting for change the vendor found some one else had got 55 cents, and immediately disputed the right for the purchaser to take away what he had bought.

Few Turkeys.

For the first time in many years there were very few turkeys at very large prices. Thirty-five cents a pound was the prevailing price, and the birds ran as high as $6.00. Chickens, ducks and geese brought 30 cents a pound. Eggs were higher to-day, selling at 52 and 55 cents a dozen.

Potatoes sold at $2.25 to $2.30 a bag.

Apples, $1.50 a bag, 25c a peck.

Carrots, beets, etc., 5c a bunch.

SIGNALLER COON SERIOUSLY WOUNDED

Rev. Charles H. Coon, of Lindsay, and formerly of Peterborough, received the sad message on Wednesday that his second son, Signaller Arthur Willard Coon hod been seriously wounded, (gunshot wound).

Signaller Coon went overseas last December from Ottawa with the Divisional Signallers. His brother is in the artillery and in his last letter stated he was well behind the Hindenburg line.

ASSESSMENT ACT UNFAIR.

Largest Per Capita Assessment of Any Municipality is in Town of But 5,000 People.

In a bulletin criticizing the unfairness of the Provincial Assessment Act, the Bureau of Municipal Research points out that the largest per capita assessment of any municipality on the list is in a town of 5,000 people.

"It might be thought," it continues, "that the largest municipalities would raise a larger portion of their net per capita assessment on buildings than would small cities. It is true that out of 10 smaller cities two have a smaller proportion of the net assessment on buildings than on land. But, on the other hand, the municipality which has the highest proportion of its net assessment on buildings is one of 5,000 population, and the city with the next to the lowest proportion of the net assessment on buildings is one of over 100,000 population."

WAS DASHED TO PIECES

Three Hundred and Sixty-five Soldiers Lost Their Lives When Transport Collided with Another Vessel.

THE RESCUED

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 12. — Conservative estimates early to-day placed the number of soldiers lost when the British steamship Otranto, acting as an American transport, was sunk in a collision with the Nashmir, at 150. The Otranto was dashed to pieces on the rocks off the Scottish coast early Sunday morning after she had been rammed by the Kashmir during a fierce storm.

Captain F. S. Heimer, Army Medical Corps, unattached, whose home is at Hamdon, N.Y., arrived here to-day with 250 survivors of the crash. Three hundred and seventeen soldiers and 150 members of the Otranto's crew were rescued by a British destroyer, he said.

A LATER DESPATCH FROM OFFICIAL SOURCES SAYS

LONDON, Oct. 12.—It is officially stated this morning that the number of American soldiers in the collision of the transport Otranto with the steamer Kashmir was 365. More than 200 bodies have been recovered and identified.

Turkey May Surrender

Her Position as a Belligerent is Becoming Very Dangerous.

(By Raymond Clapper.)
(United Press Service.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—With the Allied armies driving ahead in the near east to re-establish their front on the Danube Ricer, Turkey is accelerating her efforts to withdraw from the war.

Following tentative negotiations with the Allies, reported for the last few days, Turkey is now said to be sending an appeal to President Wilson—probably similar to that of Bulgaria—urging his aid in securing for Turkey an armistice and her retirement as a Teutonic ally.

Her position as a belligerent is becoming more and more dangerous and her surrender is expected momentarily.

Gen. Allenby has wrecked the Turkish armies, and once the Allies re-establish the Danuke front, Turkey will be cut off from all hope of aid from Germany. When the Allies get this waterway under the fire of their guns barges bearing munitions to Turkey via the Black Sea must cease their operations and the Ottoman Empire will be wiped out of the war.

Tag Day Promises To be a Success

Weather Was Anything But Favourable for the Occasion.

Report from the Tag Day Headquarters in the Bank of Montreal Chambers say that the morning collections were very saisfactory considering the brand of weather served up for the occasion The annual campaign for funds is in aid of the Children's Aid Society got away to a good start early in the week, when over two thousand tags were sold among the school children throughout the city. The collection in the schools was made on Wednesday Today's receipts should bring in etotal well over the one thousand dollar mark The threatening rain did not damper the enthusiasm of the taggers and the patrols were out in all parts of the city.

When interviewed this morning, Mr. G. W. Powell agent for the Children's Aid Society spoke optimistically of the prospects.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE FOR MISS L. HILL.

One of Peterborough's popular young ladies, Miss Lillian Hill, 621 Union Street, was the recipient of a pleasant surprise last evening when a "shower" was given in her honour. About 25 girl friends gathered at her home and presented her with a miscellaneous shower in view of her approaching marriage. The shower scheme was quite unique. The little daughter of Dr. Preston was the leading lady of the occasion, being dressed as a bride, and drew a prettily decorated wagon filled with gifts. The beautiful gifts and the good wishes which went along with them, were ample testimony of the warm friendship that exists between Miss Hill and her many friends.

This shows the country to the east of Cambrai and St. Quentin from which the Germans have retreat ed rapidly. The British have reached Le Cateau (near the upper right of the map) and are pressing on. Practically all the territory show n on this map has been taken from the enemy.

Will the Election by General Vote Bring in a New Council?

When the chimes ring in the new year, what members of the Council will they ring out? Not long ago a member of the Trades and Labour Council ventured the prediction that the next municipal elections would completely change the personnel of the city fathers. "You won't know next year's Council," he said, implying a profound dissatisfaction with the present administration, and importing that the general vote would put a new broom in the hands of the ratepayers inviting them to sweep the old aldermen into a neat little heap for the janitor.

There have been other criticisms of late, some just as broad and uncompromising, others reserved but generally expressing a wish for new wine in the old bottles, or at least a more copious infusion than there has been in recent years.

If from these intimations the inference were drawn that the ratepayers were already beginning to concern themselves seriously about their representatives for 1919 the impression would surely be wide of the fact. About this time every year, the future begins cautiously to manifest itself in faint shadows reaching far ahead. The aldermen themselves reveal their inner councils by familiar and unmistakable signs. Some set about trimming their sails to catch the new election wind that will carry them again out on to the deep; others plainly turn their course to the haven of inconspicuous citizenship. On the other hand the electors seized with their perennial complaint, look about them for new recruits, with vague resolves of change, new blood and supposedly attending progressiveness.

The Aldermen feel these rumblings, but react to them differently than in the days before they were selected for the honour which eventually betrayed them to the crowd bent on a Roman holiday. It was with some such feeling that one of them cynically remarked the other day that the people declare that each Council is worse than all its predecessors. He was ready for the hemlock that had been recently held out by the hand of an old associate, but he scornfully asserted that he could drink it, if need be, with less of a grimace of distaste than that conspicuous victim of a few short years ago.

Too Many Anxieties Now.

However, the citizens have been too preoccupied with present worries to reach out to the problem three months distant of electing a new Council. They are harassed by so many cares that they have just now very little enthusiasm for a matter that can keep until the epidemic of influenza has been routed, and all the citizens have obtained some coal. But those who can find momentary escape from the multiplying vicissitudes of the day to consider the probabilities of next year's Council will have to reckon with most of the present Aldermen who, if they were to defend their stewardship, might affirm that they had few regrets for their year's work. They had marked time as directed, but not without thought of the reconstruction demanded for the future. They would perhaps say that their chief difficulties had arisen from the numerous, insistent and doubtless well warranted demands by the civic employees for increased salaries. Roads, sidewalks, sewers and lights had not been neglected, in fact all the routine had been nursed along as wisely as possible under the circumstances, and in some departments there was initiative that commanded approval. All these details required frequent meetings that could not be dispensed with so easily as some critics have suggested. The fuel problem might not present the strongest defence, but there had been the best effort under the existing machinery. The new bridges, street railway extensions and other problems have received attention with all the advancement possible. Some citizens will declare that there should be the plus, indefinable "pep" or signs of progressiveness which they maintain they have failed thus far to put into and get out of the Council.

Not Enough Enthusiasm.

That some members of the Council would probably agree with this opinion may be affirmed from the statement of an Alderman who recently remarked that he had been disappointed by the lack of "enthusiasm" which he had found in the Council, and enthusiasm is surely the closest synonym for that expressive term "pep." This member admitted that the routine work sapped whatever enthusiasm a new Alderman might bring to the Board, and the petty details could not be neglected. They could, he believed, be disposed of without squandering time on them.

This Alderman, who deserves to be classed as one of the progressives, refused to detract from the work this year's Council had done. Admitting that there were opportunities for improvement, as with all Councils, he gave his colleagues the fullest credit for their fidelity to a thankless task. And it is this same knowledge of having given whatever abilities they possessed for the public's service that will bring most of the Council back for a renewal of their confidence. For there is a fascination about the work that offsets its annoyances, and when new candidates present themselves next January they will find many of the veterans alongside them in the lists.

Peterboro Casualties

Pte. F. Meeks Wounded the Second Time.

Mrs. Frederick Meeks, 414½ George Street, has been officially notified that her husband, Pte. Fred. Meeks, was on September 29th admitted to a casualty clearing hospital, suffering from a gunshot wound in the head. Pte. Meeks was a member of the 93rd Battalion, but was with the 2nd Battalion when he was wounded. He was also wounded in November last.

Getting Better.

The many friends of Lieut. D. J. Lawrie will be pleased to learn that while wounded by gunshot in the head, he has been admitted to hospital in London, Eng., and is reported as progressing satisfactorily.

MISTAKES IN PRICES

Several errors occurred in the special reduced list of prices advertised by the Peterborough Bargain House for Saturday. These errors have been corrected to-day in the advertisement which is repeated to-day on page 12 of the Examiner.

TORONTO FAT STOCK SHOW.

Every show a better one is the slogan of the Toronto Fat Stock Show, and the 1918 Show promises to be no exception. The sale which follows the show is attended by buyers from all over the continent and each year the prices paid are better than previous. There is always a demand for choice meat at Christmas time, and farmers are realizing the big advantage of marketing their stock this way.

MEETING POSTPONED.

The Auxiliary of the Great War Veterans' Association will not meet on Monday evening as previously announced on account of the Medical Health Officer's request for a suspension of all public gatherings.

THE PEACE DISCUSSION

Germany's Reply Is Said to be on the Way—Will Accept Wilson's Terms.

WANTS "DURABLE PEACE"

Canadian Press:

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 12.—The Nord Deutche "Allgemeine Zeitung" says that the German answer to President Wilson's note of inquiry is ready and believes that it was handed to the Swiss government to-day. The newspaper understands that "the answer will make far reaching advances, and it is hoped that the discussion between Germany and President Wilson will bring forth a durable peace for the whole world."

An Acceptance.

Canadian Press:

BERNE, Oct. 12.—Wolff Bureau, the official German news agency, has circulated a Frankfurter Zeitung despatch from Berlin, stating that the German reply to President Wilson's note was sent last night, and that it is in a sense an acceptance.

Changes in the Hardware Market

Linseed Oil Shows Decline of Eight Cents a Gallon.

Linseed oil again features the markets this week in a decline of 8c per gallon in some quarters. This is the second decline in a week's time, late advices last week providing for a 10c drop, which means a total decline of 18c. The improved crop harvesting conditions, along with better war news and peace talk, have influenced the cash flax seed market to a level 39c below that of last Wednesday. Even lower prices would not come as any surprise.

The first change in many months on leather belting has been made this week. New discounts issued provide for an advance of about five per cent. The question of supplies is assuming uncertain proportions, and no guarantee as to the future is held out in respect to getting materials.

Lower prices which have resulted in a narrowing of the range of quotations on solder have been issued this week. The tin situation seems somewhat better, though the metal is unchanged. Lead is very scarce, and the result on manufactured lead products, as supplied for commercial requirements, may be a revision in prices to higher levels.

Higher Price Levels.

Higher levels of prices on cotton waste are looked for on completion of present contracts about December 1. Difficulty in securing raw materials is manifest, one firm reporting that they have to use all white cotton thread to complete some of their orders for coloured waste, due to shortage of the coloured thread. In wool waste a Government standard has been adopted and there will be one grade only. Manufacturers are required now to put in at least 40 per cent. cotton in their wool waste, 60 per cent. being maximum wool permissible.

Many important lines in the hardware merchant's stock have come under revision, providing for advances in practically every instance. An advance of 25c per 100 pounds in cut nails is now effective. Barb wire is up 25c per 100 pounds in some quarters, while others report all quotations on both barb wire and galvanized wire withdrawn.

A change to higher levels has been made through a revision in the discount on some makes of files. Jack screws are higher, and glass lamps show an increased price of about 20 per cent. Sweat pads have followed the upward trend along with wrapping paper, door checks, food choppers, spark plugs, cold chisels and some lines of table cutlery. Business in all fall lines has been remarkably good, and shipments of skates, hockey sticks, snowshoes, etc., are now being made.—Hardware and Metal.

WANT A VERSAILLES PEACE.

French Hope Final Parley Will Wipe Out Memory of 1871.

PARIS—The Austrian request for the use of one of The Hague palaces for a peace conference has caused much amusement in Paris, where the very idea that the congress which will settle Germany's future status in the world can be held in any neutral country is scouted by all classes.

One of the dearest wishes of the French Nation is that the peace congress shall take place at Versailles, where, in 1871, the salons of the French Kings, the insolent empire of the Kaiser was founded, and where, as Louis Forest expresses it in the Matin this morning "It is only symbolically fitting that the German Empire should come to its end." As Forest recognizes, "it is no doubt premature to think of these details, but it is never premature to lay out one's programme and know what one wants."

POWER IS TRANSFERRED

Germany Claims Military Power Has Been Placed Under Civil Control.

BY ENEMY WIRELESS

LONDON, Oct. 12.—The German military power has already been placed under civil control in complete and permanent fashion, so far as politics is concerned, according to an interview with Mathias Erzberger, the Centrist leader of the Reichstag, sent out by the German Government wireless service. This interview is being published with the evident intention of influencing public opinion abroad. Thus General Von Stein, Prussian War Minister, had to be eliminated because he had always worked against peace by understanding, the interview says. Gen. Scheuch, his successor, is said to be a man of liberal views, and the first known Prussian ever to occupy the position. Two commanding generals, Von Vietinghoff and Von Haehmiset, have been removed because they were considered the embodiment of militarism. All decisions of commanding generals in the centre of Germany, considering the administrative functions, are made dependent on the approval of the presidents of the provinces, with an appeal to General Scheuch, and finally to the Chancellor, who is legally responsible, according to the "Erzberger."

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 12TH, 1918.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

Canadians have abundant reasons to celebrate Thanksgiving Day. The material prosperity at home, the wonderful record of the Canadian troops at the front, the prospects of an early peace, the series of victories that have been won by the Allies in many fields, the elimination of Bulgaria from the war, each of these is a cause for gratitude and rejoicing. Canadians should be especially thankful because their country has been spared the ravages of war.

IS ABSOLUTELY NEEDED.

Some people seem to have an idea that with the prospects of peace growing brighter there will be no need of Canada's new Victory Loan. Such an impression is an utterly mistaken one. If the war were to end today the second Victory Loan would be imperatively needed because the already heavy demands of the war would have to be met and provision would also have to be made for the financing of the sale of our exportable surplus of agricultural and manufactured products to Great Britain.

Unfortunately the coming of peace will not mean the end of war expenditure. There are hundreds of thousands of Canadian soldiers overseas whom it would take many months after the signing of peace terms to bring home. In the meantime they would have to be paid and fed as usual. When it is understood that the pay and allowances of Canada's army amount to over $14,000,000 a month one weighty reason for the Victory Loan will be readily grasped.

A huge amount of money will have to be advanced to finance the sale of products to Great Britain. This will be necessary whether peace comes soon or not. Last year $100,000,000 was supplied to finance the wheat crop and with this year's crop surplus being entirely taken over by the Old Country, it is apparent that an even bigger advance will be necessary this year. The same conditions apply to the export of beef and pork products which will require at least $100,000,000 during the coming year. Sales of cheese, butter, eggs, etc., mean another heavy advance while it is estimated that at least $9,000,000 will be required to take care of the sale of the British Columbia salmon catch to Great Britain.

As a matter of fact every dollar of the $500,000,000 asked for from the people of Canada will be absolutely needed and would be needed if the war were over.

But the war is not over. Our brave armies at the front are driving the enemy back with blow after blow. This means more money will be needed. And the money that Canada needs for her war work must come from the people of Canada.

THE HIGHER APPEAL.

The campaign for the new Canadian war loan is getting under way and already there are ample evidences of the nature of the appeals to be made in its behalf by the canvassers representing the treasury department. If there is any criticism to be made of former methods this would apply likewise to the coming campaign, for the signs all point to a continuation of the same arguments and methods to induce the public to take up the bonds. And "The Citizen" thinks that in the past there has been rather too much of an appeal to the material advantages of the bonds, and too little to the patriotic and sentimental side of the Canadian people. The average canvasser cannot be expected to be possessed of oratorical powers sufficient to make an individual appeal to each prospective subscriber, but the leaders, the chief speakers and the administration heads should not miss the opportunity of impressing upon the people of Canada the part played by the men who have faced death for an ideal in foreign lands, and of detailing the agony and heroism of the British and Canadian troops who have helped save the world for those who are to come after them. We are of opinion that a few passages from such an author as John Masefield would do more for the cause than all the calculations and enumerations of saved farthings and fractions of farthings that could ever be marshalled by the most skilled accountant in the country. Read, in language whose simplicity is its greatest charm, what Masefield says of the British troops who went to Belgium:

"St. George did not go out against the dragon like that divine calm youth in Carpaccio's picture, nor like that divine calm man in Donatello's statue. He went out, I think, after some taste of defeat, knowing that it was going to be bad, and that the dragon would breathe fire, and that very likely his speak would break and that he wouldn't see his children again, and people would call him a fool. He went out, I think, as the battalions of our men went out, a little trembling and a little sick and not knowing much about it, except that it had to be done, and then stood up to the dragon in the mud of that far land, and waited for him to come on.

"I know my nation's faults as well as I know my own. They are the faults of a set and a system. They are faults of head, nto faults of heart. When I think of those faults I think of a long graveyard in France, a hundred miles long, where simple, good, kind, ignorant Englishmen by the thousand and the hundred thousand lie in every attiude of rest and agony, for ever and ever. They did not know where Belgium is, nor what Germany is, nor eve nwhat England is. They were told that a great country had taken a little country by the throat, and that it was up to them to help, and they went out by the hundred and the hundred thousand and the million, on that word alone, and they stayed there, in the mud, to help the little country, till they were killed."

The story of world sacrifice is told in these few lines. What audience, what reader, can hear them unmoved? "When I think of those faults I think of a long graveyard in France, a hundred miles long, where simple, good, kind, ignorant Englishmen by the thousand and the hundred thousand lie in every attitude of rest and agony, for ever and for ever." That sentence should be at the head of every appeal for warfor war bonds, for it tells, too, the story of our Canadians lads, who faced poison gas and the horrors of Ypres with their British comrades.

What, alongside such language as this, are figures and appeals to the material side of war bonds? Why not discard altogether the tactics and practises of the counting house, so foreign to such a cause as that in which we are engaged to the death, and stand upon the higher platform of patriotism?—Ottawa Citizen.

SUPPORT THE FIGHTERS.

The exploits of Canada's Corps are on all lips. Wherever there was hard fighting to be done Canadians have been in the forefront of it since the 8th of August. At the second battle of Ypres, at Fresnoy, on the Somme, at Vimy Ridge, and on many other fields before they were called to take part in this great offensive they had covered themselves with unfading glory. But the hard fighting they did in 1915, 1916 and 1917 has been followed by still harder and more sustained fighting in the present year. It was soon recognized that there were no troops stouter in battle, none better fitted to face a strong position or bear the brunt of a fierce attack. British, French, Belgian and American troops on the Western front know our men, and grant that there are none more deserving of the palm And the Germans know it. They recognize the Canadians as the very best of shock troops. To the section of the front on which the Canadians are known to be placed, the enemy usually gives a wide berth. The cablegram from Sir Arthur Currie which Sir Thomas White read to his Winnipeg audience on Tuesday night, naturally set the crowd cheering. This is the message: "We have just won our third great "battle since Aug. 8, in which the "Canadian Corps has met and de-"feated 47 of Germany's best divi-"tions has captured 23,000 prisoners "and more than 500 field and heavy "gun and has liberated 60 towns and "villages." What a record! Practically one-fourth of the whole German forces on the Western front was encountered by our Canadian Corps. Here in Canada we do not realize what a tremendous part our men are playing in this mighty drama of war. To Canadian troops was given the honor of first entering the town of Cambrai, that stronghold on the Hindenburg line. General Sir Francis Horne, commanding the first army of which the Canadian Corps is a constituent, has given special praise to our men for their fighting, mentioning in particular the forcing of the Canal du Nord, and the taking of Bourlon Wood.

What can we do to show ourselves worthy of such heroic defenders, such lifters up of the name of Canada for all time among the nations? We must simply do our home part, which is to make the lot of our returned soldiers and the lot of the dependents of those who have fallen as happy as we can make it, and to support the men at the front with all our resources. There must be no failure or delay in the matter of reinforcing them, or forwarding sustenance and all kinds of supplies to them and of raising the money to finance the war to the end Let every Canadian who has come to manhood now take upon himself an obligation to furnish some of the money, howsoever little may be his means, to support our valient soldiers in this war The victory Loan of 1918 will be open for subscription in about a fortnight Everybody at home should have a part in that Loan. The individual citizen may need all his money but the Canadians at the front need it more. Canada expects every man to do his duty, and the fresh renown and wonderful deeds of Canada's army should start a wave of enthusiastic subscribing that will sweep in the whole $500,000,000 that Sir Thomas White hopes to get.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

German submarines are at their old game of murdering women and children on the high seas.

Victory Bonds not only keep the Canadian army going; they also keep the wheels of Canadian industry humming.

Canada will be judged not only by what her soldiers do over there, but by what the people at home do over here. The second Victory Loan campaign will be a test.

Get out in the open air as much as possible to-morrow and Monday, but go on foot. You don't need a motor car to dodge the influenza.

You can save money, health and gasoline by taking a walk in the open air on the holiday.

The British are now fighting over the ground where the Old Contemptibles made such a wonderful stand during the retreat from Mons.

The Industrious Chinaman.

Of all oriental workmen the Chinese are undoubtedly the best, though there may be some with experience of both races who may be disposed to give the palm to the Japanese. A European who thoroughly understands his business, and who is able to impart his knowledge and his instructions in a clear manner to his Chinese subordinate, and who moreover is blessed with a little patience and tact, will find little difficulty in the management and control of Chinese labor of whatever kind Speaking generally, they are good and conscientious workmen, and many indeed are very clever fellows. The quality of the work turned out by a good Chinese fitter, turner, or machine man varies little from that of the average good British workman of the same class, but the latter would beat him in point of time.—London Express.

The Fly's Stabilizers.

"On either side of the waist line of a fly is a stabilizer," says Dr. Bellesme, a famous entomologist. "This looks something like a base drum stick. These are extremely small, not more than one-fifteenth as long as the fly's wings, and while in flight they may be moved about, much as a tight rope walker uses a long pole for balancing himself.

"In experimenting with flies these little stabilizers have been removed. When released the fly begins his flight but without these stabilizers he describes a sort of semicircle and invariably lands on his back.

"Wasps and bees keep their balance while in flight by shifting the center of inflection of the abdomen and legs."

TO FARMERS

The Government has sent out an appeal to the Canadian people to buy at home. Why? Because when we buy abroad more than we sell we have to pay a premium on the excess, in addition to the price of the goods. This is known as an adverse rate of exchange. We have bought four hundred million dollars' worth more from the United States than we have sold to it. The rate of exchange is 2 per cent. against us. In other words, we are paying 2 per cent. on four hundred millions of dollars, or eight million dollars, which means that if we owe a great deal of money for goods bought we have to pay extra for the privilege. If we keep this up Canada will bleed to death. Please inquire into this matter at once.

An Attraction For Peterboro

A Real Contest Suggested for J. H. Burnham, M.P., and Mr. G. N. Gordon.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Have read several arguments between J. H. Burnham and G. N. Gordon re soldiers' dependents. Now, Mr. Editor, I would suggest that there would be a smoker put on in the old home town in aid of the dependents of soldiers, with the super attraction in the shape of a boxing bout between the aforesaid two gentlemen. I see by the second last issue of your paper, that Mr. Burnham has gallantly signified his intention of entering the fistic arena, if necessary, in defence of his sacred opinions, he intimating as much in the issue of Sept. 29th. All whose sporting instincts are well developed and all lovers of fair play would only be too glad to see the matter settled in some conclusive fashion. Now, when I last saw Mr. Burnham and Mr. Gordon, they were about the same weight, and I am sure they would put on a pretty interesting bout. I would suggest Chris Graham to be referee, all proceeds to be donated to the soldiers' dependents. — Yours truly,

An Edmonton, Alta., Subscriber.

ONTARIO'S PROJECT TO TAKE OVER TELEPHONES CONSIDERED AMUSING

And now we hear of a movement in Ontario toward a publicly-owned and operated telephone system to be run in connection with the Hydro.

Thomas L. Church, the irrepressible Mayor of Toronto, is enthusiastic over the proposal. "It would put a telephone in every workingman's house in Toronto at half the present rates," the Mayor asserts.

The Mayor's declaration has a familiar sound. He uses almost the identical words of the late Premier of Manitoba, Sir Rodmond Roblin, when, in 1906, he launched his campaign for a provincial telephone system in that province. "Half the Bell rates and better service"—that was the guarantee given by the Premier and his leading ministers on a score of platforms.

Manitoba has its publicly-owned and operated telephone system—has had it for ten years now. But the rates, so far from showing a decrease from the former Bell charges, show an all-round advance. Indeed, it is to the credit of the Provincial authorities in Manitoba, that when it was found, as was inevitable, that the rates prevailing under private operation could not be cut but must be raised, they faced the situation fairly and refrained from shifting the burden to the general tax-payer. Of course it was a little rough on Sir Rodmond's "reputation as a prophet, but the prophecy had served its purpose—it was a first rate election slogan, and the genial R. P. was not captious.

Even so stout a champion of unrestricted public ownership as the Toronto World is inclined to doubt the wisdom of an immediate invasion of the telephone salient. In commenting on the announcement of Mayor Church it says, "All very good, Mister Mayor, but dispose of things on hand first. Why not get hold of the radials and power lines? Let the mayor go up and see Sir Wm. Hearst and Sir Adam Beck about a clean up in this direction before other things are attempted. Telephones will be easy after the radials are running."

Unquestionably there is some merit in the World's suggestion that the present numerous and costly projects of the Hydro movement, all of which require the financial backing of the Provincial treasury, should be disposed of before a fresh enterprise is taken on. Incidentally, the Clarkson report on Hydro financing might help all parties in arriving at the true inwardness of the situation.—Financial Times.

For You and Your Friends

"I beg you to publish my letter."

It is only natural that people write us enthusiastic letters about Gin Pills. Wouldn't you do the same, if, after suffering from backache for years, you found relief? Wouldn't you wish your friends and others to know what Gin Pills had done for you, and what they will do for them? Of course, you would, and that is the only reason that prompts people to write us praising this great remedy.

Read what Isidore Thomas says in part:

"My case was very serious, and I was so sick everybody expected my death any day. No suffering could be worse than what I had to endure. Eight boxes of Gin Pills were sufficient to cure me entirely. I beg you to publish my letter and tell all sufferers of Kidney Trouble not to despair nor wait, as Gin Pills will cure them. I have to be very thankful to you, and I recommend Gin Pills to all my friends suffering from kidney trouble."

Take the advice of those who have tried most remedies and found that Gin Pills cure.

Gin Pills are not a cure-all—but a scientific remedy for Kidney or Bladder Troubles. They contain the beneficial ingredient of gin, without the alcohol, and gin has been recognized for years as the most perfect agent for toning up the kidneys and restoring these organs to perform their natural functions.

Spanish Influenza Epidemic in Peterboro About Over

Local Doctors Agree That the Situation Is Well in Hand—Few New Cases.

The action of Dr. C. H. Amys, M. O.H., in closing the theatres has in the opinion of the doctors of the city pretty well stopped the spread of so-called Spanish influenza, and this morning very few new cases were reported. All the doctors agreed that the picture houses and theatres are the centres for spread of an epidemic. Dr. D. W. Scott said that while he has some new cases they are all of a very mild nature and closely resemble old-fashioned grippe.

Look Like Grippe.

Dr. J. G. Galliyan said he had a few cases which look very much like the regular grippe of a specially contagious nature. In one family he has four cases. So far no bad cases in complications have developed with him.

Colds and Coughs.

Dr. E. A. Hammond said that in his opinion the epidemic is practically one of colds, coughs and ordinary grippe, which the bright weather of this week has gone a long way to cure.

Has Been Checked.

Dr. F. P. McNulty thinks that the spread of the disease has practically been checked with the closing of the public gatherings, and what he has seen is much like the ordinary grippe.

Evening Services Closed.

There is to be no evening service or Sunday School to-morrow in the city churches as a precautionary measure against the spread of Spanish influenza.

Thanks Citizens.

Dr. Amys wishes to heartily thank the citizens in general for their hearty co-operation and endorsation of his efforts to stamp out the spread of the disease. Asked this morning if there is any indication of the mare cases he said that he has a few new ones on hand.

Editors Meet in Belleville

Victory Loan Was Discussed by the Writers.

A meeting of the county chairmen of the Ontario Press news and feature committee in connection with the Victory Loan for 1918 was held yesterday at the Hotel Quinte, Belleville. The territory represented at the meeting includes the division from Brockville to Oshawa, and the gathering yesterday was representative of this district. Mr. J. G. Elliott, of the Kingston Whig, who is divisional chairman, presided.

The editors present spent over four hours in discussing ways and means for getting the necessity for the sale of these bonds before the public, and listened to a pratcical address by Mr. E. B. Thompson, the divisional organizer. Mr. Walter B. Evans, manager of the bond department of the firm of John Stark & Co., of Toronto, was also present and offered some timely counsel.

Mr. Thompson urged that each newspaper pay particular attention to the canvass in its immediate field. The difficulty of interesting the country weeklies was recognized, and a special effort will be made to reach these. It is likely that the editors of all papers in every county will be called together next week for a conference.

The editors adopted a resolution which will be forwarded to headquarters in Toronto, recommending that a prize be offered for the best editorial on the Victory Loan published in a country weekly, the terms of the contest to be decided upon by the Toronto committee.

YES, HE'D TAKE THE JOB

(By United Press.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept 13. (By Mail)—He was a private and he looked the part. But he hesitated when some war workers who wanted to establish a billet in some ruins offered him and his bunkie $2 apiece to help sweep out the place He wasn't busy just then.

Finally he followed the example of his bunkie and accepted the job. "If anybody 'd offered me money to sweep out a house over in the States, I'd have turned up my nose," he told his friend. "You see, I own a couple factories over there, and got a pretty good fortune beside that. But over here when you can't write a check and get it cashed, you'd do almost anything for a couple dollars, for its about the end of the month, and you haven't drawn your $30 per for two months. War sure makes a fellow democratic."

Strong People Needed

The need for people to be healthy is urgent. Those whom illness has put outside the ranks of robust men and women feel their position keenly. They are handicapped in every walk of life and weak men and nerve-worn women need more earnestly than ever to put their health right and become active and strong. Many who began "patching" months ago are as ill now as on the day they began vainly tinkering with common drugs. Every ailing man and woman should remember that the ills of debility, nerve exhaustion, indigestion, sleeplessness, neuralgia, and depression come from a faulty blood supply Worry, over work or other causes have impoverised he blood and left the life-stream impure. The nerves thereby are starving and the whole system is languishing for new blood. In this condition many thousands have won back strong nerves and new health and strength through the new rich blood Dr. Williams Pink Pills actually makes. In a weak or bloodless condition it is not only a waste of time and money, but also a further menace to your health to tinker with common drugs. Follow the example of so many thousands by giving Dr. Williams Pink Pills a fair trial, and they will transform you into healthy, active, men and women.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DRINK DALLEY COFFEE

"The Most Delicious Drink"

Food Board Flashes

Are Canadians as a whole eating at the Allied table—the common table of self-restraint and carefulness?

Are they remembering that it is necessary for the North American continent to ship abroad, 17,550,000 tons of meats, fats, breadstuks, sugar and feed grain for the year ending July 1, 1919?

This does not sound like relaxation of effort but rather like acceleration in production and conservation. The figure aimed at for the coming year represents 5,780,000 tons more than was shipped in the year ending July 1, 1918. This surplus alone is 197,000 tons greater than the entire annual shipments based upon the average for the three years before the war.

Spanish Influenza May be Prevehted

It is a Duty One Owes to One's Self and to the Community.

The difficulty with this form of influenza is that a very mild case may, by contagion, produce in another individual the very worst form of the disease. That is, a person, who seems to have but a slignt cold, may be the Carrier of the Germs.

Those, who are liable to be exposed to the Contagion, should, both for themselves and the sake of their families, take every precaution to avoid contracting it.

The mouth should be cleansed once or twice a day with an antiseptic wash and the throat gargled with the same.

Also one of Moncur's Capsules for the Prevention of Spanish Influenza should be taken each morning. These Capsules strengthen the system so that the Germs even though the person is frequently exposed to the contagion, are quite unable to gain a foothold.

However, they are not recommended to cure the disease but only to prevent one from taking it; which they will do if they are taken before the person is already infected. If the prevalent Epidemic strikes Peterborough in full force, these Capsules will save a lot of people from sickness and also prove an enemy to the Undertaker.

Sold at Moncur Drug Store, 407 George St. Next the Royal Bank.

THANKSGIVING DAY, 1918

All that June promised us, with flaming eyes,
And lips, whose smiles invoked Hope's sweet desire,
Has come—Assuagement's glory gilds the skies,
And Heaven's Angels tune Fruition's lyre,
Earth's Elves responding from their harvest choir;
And as Time passes down his joy-crowned way,
The gold of Reproduction's deathless fire
He scatters far. Now Life's immortal sway
Is by God's gift of Increase glorified;
That death is but Life's change is proved at harvest tide.

II.

Out of the windows of our souls we look
On Earth's rich picture of her harvest store—
Garnered from breeze kissed fields, where bird and brook
Sang Paeans of enthrallment, o'er and o'er,
All the glad summer long, as, from Hope's door,
Beauty and Rapture, daily, hand in hand,
Came forth with thrilling tales of verdure lore,
As ecstacy and progress blessed the land—
And notwithstanding sin's unconquered pain,
God in his love has brought the harvest once again.

III.

Lord, give us thankful hearts for all Thy care!
Forgive the wanderings of our wayward feet;
Help us to see that Love is everywhere—
In Spring's glad smiles—in Summer's ripening heat,
Then in the harvest fields of golden wheat—
With Life's rich gifts You thrill our sense and sight,
Thy care has never failed to be complete,
Though Life and death are playthings of Thy might,
And so to-day before Thy throne above,
Our nation bows to thank Thee for thy changeless love.

THE HIGH COST OF LIVING AFFECTS FLOWERS IN PETERBORO

Local Florists Report an Increase in Price—Wet Weather Partly Responsible.

Due to the scarcity and high price of coal, the florists have found it necessary to double the price of cut flowers, and it was stated this morning that small chrysanthemums will be the same price this year as the large ones were last year.

The wet weather of the past six weeks has so retarded bloom under the glass that the florists have been quite unable to meet the demand. With the early frost, the outside bloom was killed, rendering the indoor supply the only means of helping out. Those who have not their own glass have to charge extra high prices as out-of-town greenhouses are their only source of supply, and freight and express conditions pile up the expense of bringing them in.

Labour Shortage for War Work

U. S. PLANNING ROUND-UP OF MEN IN NON-ESSENTIAL WORK.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11. — Drastic measures to meet the severe shortages of men and materials for directly essential war work, are planned by the War Industries Board in co-operation with the Department of Labor.

Chairman Baruch said to-day that 250,000 travelling salesmen, 100,000 business boys, porters and other servants in big hotels, probably will be affected. He also declared that chauffeurs in the employ of private individuals, must work or fight."

Baruch ,together with Secretary Wilson of the Department of Labor, are at present engaged in making a survey of the labor now going into non-essential work.

As soon as this survey is completed a campaign will be launched to bring all available able-bodied men into essential industry.

The shipping programme is short 200,000 men and the Ordnance Department of the Army needs about 100,000 more.

The Quick Way to Stop a Cough

This home-made syrup does the work in a hurry. Easily prepared, and saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a 16-oz. bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make 16 ounces—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

MR. FARMER
Which Field Pays Best?

UNPRODUCTIVE FARM PRODUCTIVE

Land Clearing Made Easy with
C.X.L. Stumping Powder

The above pictures represent the same field before and after using C.X.L. Stumping Powder

With the increased demand for Agricultural Products, caused by the War, which is now devastating the European Countries, Mr. Farmer, can you afford to have unproductive land? Every acre of tillable land will be required to offset the great falling off in agricultural products, and it is up to you, Mr. Farmer, to take advantage of this situation.

C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER will enable you to clear your land quicker and cheaper than by any other method and place you in an immediate position to reap a revenue from land which has heretofore been unproductive.

C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER is an explosive manufactured expressly for the farming trade; it is less dangerous to handle than Dynamite and more effective for agricultural purposes. It has been rightly termed by thousands of satisfied users as "The Farmer's Friend".

To-day time on the farm means money just as it does elsewhere. Therefore, why spend hours digging and pulling at stumps and boulders when a few sticks of C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER will do the trick in a few minutes. The progressive farmer no longer plows and reaps around stumps and boulders; the money spent in repairs on machinery and harness will offset the cost of clearing that field which has meant so much hard work to get under crop and harvest. This is your opportunity now when the markets of the world are pleading with you to produce more.

How about that field that is not producing the crops you expect from it? Have you ever stopped to think that you have been turning over the same depth of soil year after year, coaxing the land with fertilizers, to half a crop? What about the valuable plant food contained underneath the plow line? Try a few pounds of C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER on that field, bore holes to a depth of 2½ to 3 feet, at intervals of from 10 to 20 feet apart, and explode half of a cartridge of C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER in each, thus loosening up that fertile subsoil and giving your seed a chance to get below the worn out top soil to benefit from the valuable volume of plant food stored there.

The leading Agricultural Colleges of the world are now advocating subsoiling with Dynamite. Experiment on an acre this year and note results.

Tree Planting with Dynamite has long since passed the experimental stage. Leading orchadists of Canada to-day are planting fruit trees in holes exploded with C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER instead of in spade dug holes. The subsoil is loosened up and enables the roots of the trees to immediately expand in search of nourishment and not remain cramped up in a limited space.

Dig your ditches with C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER and do in one day the work it would otherwise take you a week to accomplish with pick and shovel.

Now, Mr. Farmer, the above are all common sense facts, and can you afford to continue cultivating land strewn with stumps and boulders, getting only half a crop and spending a portion of your profits on repairs and renewal of equipment, or letting valuable land under stumps and boulders lie idle? Figure this out for yourself and see if you are getting the revenue you are entitled to. Send us a trial order for a 50 lb. Box of C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER and judge for yourself the benefits you will derive from this, the greatest of Labor saving agents for the Farmer to-day.

C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER will enable you to clear your land of Stumps and Boulders,—Subsoil worn out land,—Plant Trees,—Dig Ditches,—Make and Improve Roads,—Rejuvenate Orchards,—Dig Post Holes,—Break up hardpan, etc., etc., cheaper, quicker, and better than by any other method. Makes Subscriptions to War Loans Compulsory Measure Before the House of Representatives in Australia—Classes Exempt.

(Special to The Examiner.)

MELBOURNE, Oct. 12. — A bill, making subscriptions to the Australian war loans compulsory has passed the first reading in the House of Representatives and the Acting Prime Minister W. A. Watts has moved the second reading.

The bill calls for the making up a shortage of voluntary subscriptions to present and future war loans. Two classes of citizens are exempted, those whose taxable income falls below $250 and Australian soldiers and sailors serving abroad.

The amount any individual may be required to subscribe during any year will not exceed six times his average income tax for the three preceding years. An appeal board will have power to exact a penalty from those failing to subscribe a sufficient amount, an amount equal to twice the yearly average income tax for the preceding three years. This penalty, however, will not relieve the individual from the obligations to subscribe.

WALL PAPER
Monstrosities

May be seen on a number of walls, completely marring the artistic appearance of the home and producing an incongruity of colours and figures that physicians have ascribed as responsible for the nervous and irritable condition of their patients. We regulate such defects by prescribing harmonizing colour effects and dainty patterns that are certain to appeal to the esthetic taste of the most fastidious and to transform the home into a pleasing blend of appeasing tones.

Voice of The People

ANOTHER PHASE OF MRS. McINTIRE'S CASE

To The Editor, City.
Dear Sir:

With reference to the prominence given my name in the papers lately, I wish to make an explanation.

My patriotic money having been stopped, I went to Mr. Dobbin and asked why this should be, and he explained that the rule of the patriotic committee was that if a woman had no children and was not keeping house, she was not entitled to patriotic money. This idea I did not grasp, and several people advised me to try and see Mr. Burnham, which I did and found that he was away from town Mr. Guise-Bagley was in his office and he told me to go to Mr. Dobbin, and my words to him were, "I cannot understand his explanation and I do not care to go back to him." Upon the strength of this, Mr. Guise-Bagley wrote a letter to the papers which was quite contrary to any desire of mine. I did not want to have my bills paid, but only desired to get what was rightly mine, as I have had a good deal of illness lately. If I have said anything detrimental to Mr. Dobbin or any of the gentlemen of the patriotic committee I wish to apologize through this letter.

On the 16th of Sept, dept Tdarsh ton called at my house and interviewed me. He explained to me why I was not getting patriotic money, giving the same reason as Mr. Dobbin had given, but this time I understood it. He told me that if I rented rooms or even adopted a child, I should be entitled to the fund I wish to say that I have now rented rooms and am keeping house.

In conclusion, I beg to say that I do not think it necessary to bring my name into the papers. As I said before, I only wanted a fair deal, which I am satisfied I am now getting.

Yours Truly,
Mary McIntyre.

CALGARY FACES STRIKE.

General Walk-out is Threatened, so Ottawa is Informed.

Ottawa, October 12. — The Labor Department has been threatened with a general strike at Calgary. Hon. T. W. Crothers received a wire yesterday from the Secretary of the Trades and Labor Council threatening a sympathetic strike on all trades if the freight handlers strike on the C. P. R. at Calgary, is not settled. Mr. Crothers in reply pointed out that if they called a general strike the men left themselves liable to prosecution under the Industrial Disputes Act, and under the Anti-Loafing Law.

PRINCESS STREET RESIDENTS WANT A NEW SEWER LAID

Deputation Appeared Before the Board of Works Committee Last Evening.

Mr. W. W. Yale and Mr. J. Holmes were present at last night's meeting of the Board of Works in the interests of the Princess Street residents regarding the laying of the sewer on Princess Street. Mr. Yale reminded the Board that some time before it had promised to lay a sewer on Princess Street before it was laid on Romaine Street, yet the steam derrick is now on Romaine Street. Ald. Saunders said that the petition for a sewer had been received from the Romaine Street residents before the Princess Street residents.

Very Indignant.

"The people on Princess Street are very indignant to think that you overlooked Princess Street, where there are 23 residents on one side, and went to Prince Street with only 16 residents, and thence to Romaine Street with only 16 residents. With that 16 houses on Prince Street they put in 70 connections," said Mr. Yale almost in one breath.

Foreman Martin of the sewer gang stated that there was material lying on Prince, Princess and Romaine Streets.

"And we can start any time at any place," said Mr. Martin.

"We should go back to Princess Street, and then back to Romaine Street"—this from Mayor Duncan.

The recommendation was put to the vote, and the deputation went away satisfied after asking for some new electric lights and the re-numbering of Princess Street.

Mr. John Foster, 218 Wolfe Street, asked permission to built a sewer to connect with the sewer of a neighbour, and was willing to pay the expense. He was allowed to build the sewer.

Tree Removed.

Mrs. W. A. Sanderson, 369 Brock Street, wants a tree in front of her residence removed. The matter was referred to the City Engineer, with power to act.

The Bell Telephone Co., in their request to erect poles on the west side of Rogers Street, south of Robinson Street, did not state the number of poles. They will be asked to be more explicit.

10,000 ITALIANS TO REPORT.

OTTAWA, Oct. 12.—A proclamation will shortly be issued, it is expected, calling all friendly aliens, except citizens of the United States, within the Dominion to register for military service. The conventions with the allied Governments have been practically concluded, and the formal call is now understood to be under consideration by the Government.

The conditions will be practically the same as have been provided in the convention with the United States. A Belgian, Frenchman, Italian or any subject of other Allied country resident in Canada will be placed on the same footing in regard to military service as the Canadian at home.

Exactly how many men will be available under the new conventions for service in the Canadian forces has not yet been determined. Italians, it is estimated, will be shown to be the most numerous, and of them it is thought there will be about 10,000 to come within the scope of the Military Service Act.

Some time ago tentative arrangements were made for the return to their own countries of large numbers of friendly aliens resident in Canada, but owing to lack of suitable transportation the arrangements were not put into effect to any considerable extent. The present conventions, it is thought, will meet a situation which has hitherto placed the friendly alien in Canada in a privileged position.

CROSS, FEVERISH CHILD IS BILIOUS OR CONSTIPATED

Look, Mother! See if tongue is coated, breath hot or stomach sour.

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver, bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish, or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When the little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directons for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

Germany's Reply Was Presented This Morning

Some German Papers Assert the Reply to President Wilson Fully Accedes to His Demands.

(United Press.)

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 12—Some German papers assert the reply to President Wilson accedes fully to his demands; others declare that only far reaching advances are made.

Unofficial despatches to the United Press yesterday that the reply had been drawn up, but that this despatch awaited the result of a conference between the Kaiser and German military and political leaders, which was said to be under way. The reply, according to advices received through neutral circles, will accede the evacuation of France and Belgium, providing peace negotiations are begun before the withdrawals are completed, but will maintain that Austria-German troops shall continue to occupy Russian and Roumanain territory until peace is concluded.

Presented This Morning.

Special to The Examiner.

BASLE, Oct. 12.—The National Zenith announces that Germany's reply to President Wilson was presented to the Swiss Minister at Berlin this morning.

German Press Comment.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—(Semi-Official.)—A summary from the comments in the German press, issued last night, indicate that Germany, in answer to the demand for an evacaution of occupied territory, will ask as an offset the evacuation of German colonies and occupied Turkish territory. According to some newspaper comments published in Germany,, Prince Maximilian will have no difficulty in announcing the adoption without restriction of President Wilson's programme. Germany is apparently hurrying, in view of latest ministerial moves, to appear to be a democratic state. Political amnesty will be announced and new government will be appointed for Alsace-Lorraine. Martial law will be modified and a liberal minister of war will be named. The rumour persists that these ministerial government readjustments have been undertaken with a view to causing the Allies to regard Germany as democratic and to welcome her reply.

A TERRIBLE JOURNEY.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 12.—With one arm broken and with severe cuts and bruises on her head and body, Mrs. Paul Chaseman ran five miles here to secure aid for her injured child, after a car, in which she and her husband were riding, had turned turtle and thrown the family into the ditch. The husband, who is a returned soldier, has only one leg and the mother volunteered to get assistance in order to save the child's life. The discomforts of her journey were heightened by the fact that one of the worst thunderstorms of recent years was raging at the time and the desolate road was only lit up by the irregular flashes of lightning.

MEETING IN GEORGE STREET HAS BEEN ABANDONED

Churches Will Hold Only One Service—Sunday Schools Called Off

At the request of Dr. Amys, the Medical Health Officer, it has been decided to abandon the Union Evangelistic Campaign meeting, which it was at first thought it would be possible to hold to-morrow evening in the George street Methodist church. At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Union Evangelistic Campaign held last evening, it was decided that those in charge of these services would co-operate in every way possible in helping to stamp out the spreading of the epidemic in the city. On Monday evening another meeting of the Executive will be held, and if the reports received from the Medical Health Officer warrant it, arrangements will be made to continue the services on Tuesday. Announcements will be made in Tuesday night's papers concerning whatever action is decided upon.

To-morrow all the churches will hold only one service in the morning. There will not be any Sunday school.

The members of the Evangelistic Campaign Party will speak as follows: Dr. Honeywell, in the Gilmour Memorial Church. Mr. Dixon will sing in the Murray street Baptist church, and then proceed to Bethany Tabernacle, where he will speak. Mrs. Dixon will speak in the George street Methodist Church, Mr. Kennedy in the Mark street church, and Mrs. Russell in the Park street Baptist.

Arrangements for holding the shop meetings next week have been progressing very satisfactorily.

THE ALLIES' TASK NOW

By WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT

Courtesy of the Philadelphia Public Ledger

The news which comes to us from abroad is of capital importance and is calculated to cheer us up in the highest degree.

The progress which is being made on the Western front is surpriesingly good. And one who would have prophesied in June or July that the German army flushed with success from their offensives, could be driven back to the Hindenburg line and then forefrom that line back to where the winter season is likely to find them, on the line of the Meuse, would have been a bold prophet. The wonderful feature of the situation is that the enormous preparation for the present offensive of the Allies along the front of two hundred and fifty miles could have been projected and made during a time when the advance of the Germans was so threatening to the Channel ports and to Paris. It reveals a master of the military art in Field Marshall Foch, entitling him to stand with the great military geniuses. His "Principles of War" acquire intense personal interest as we follow his triumphant application of them to the greatest military problem that the General has ever faced.

We have every reason now to think as our gallant forces are tearing away the Hindenburg line from the grip of the Germans that their army will be pressed back with great losses to the Meuse before the snow flies.

The other feature of the situation, which is, even more momentous, is the actual collapse of Bulgaria and the probable collapse of Turkey. Here the policy of England and France in dividing their forces to the extent of maintaining an army at Saloniki and in Palestine has been fully vindicated. The narrow and rigid view of Maurice and the other "Western fronters," so called, in our own staff, has been shown to be unsound, when the great reinforcement of the American troops is considered. To the general military principal that one should not weaken his army by dividing it, no one can offer objection, but rules in the military art, as in law and as in every branch of human action are matters of degree. They do not have exact mathematical application. The succes of the army at Saloniki has struck the combination of the Central Powers a blow under which it is tottering It has made it as clear to the Germans as it has to us that nothing but defeat awaits the in this war. The proximity of Serbia and Bulgaria brings it home to the people of that dual empire with startling emphasis.

It is poetic justice that the first blow against Germany, which is conclusive in the ultimate result, should be struck in Serbia. There the whole bloody conspiracy of the Central Powers, with the Hohenzollerns at the head, had its origin and opportunity.

That the army of Mesopotamia and Allenby's victorious forces in Palestine will now unite and close in on what there is of Turkey is likely. The motives of Turkey and Bulgaria were equally low in joining the Central Powers We shall therefore find no restraint of honor among thieves to prevent the same terms of surrender by Turkey as that which Bulgaria has made When Turkey surrenders the Borphorus and the Black Sea will be open to Allied entrances. Then we shall have Archangel, Vladivostok and the shores of his Ukraine as approaches through which to close the Germans and their Bolshevik allies and to arouse to action the poor Russian people, against the execrable despotism, cruelties and bloody massacres of Lenine an Trotzsky.

The rigid western frontism of our staff must now yield to the argument of events. We must spare from our millions enough to form a formidable nucleus of American troops to be landed in Russia and there to gather about them a new Russian army to strike Germany and Austria on their eastern front

Of course, with the joyful news our people find it difficult to avoid unwarranted optimism as to the time within which complete victory may come. It i well for us to recollect that Vicksburg and Gettysburg settled the defeat of he Confederacy, but that nearly two years of very bloody battles had to elapse before the surrender. Lincoln's despair of his re-election in August, 1864, due to the gloomy feelings of the people of the North over the delay of victory is well known.

We should therefore not abate in the slightest degree our continued preparation of this war. We should go ahead as if we faced a two years' struggle. The retreat of the Germans to the line of the Meuse or the Rhine will narrow their front and enable them to increase theor reserves. The winter, during which the campaign may not be carried on, will enable the Germans to rehabilitate their jaded and defeated decimatee army. The Germans under a dictatorship will fight until there is a mutiny in the army, because we propose to fight them to their knees The Hohenzollerns and their co-conspirators know that their necks are in danger, and that the dynasty is doomed unless they can make a resistance which will secure other terms than unconditional surrender

Unconditional surrender is what we must have, and we must pay the price. Therefore, jubilant over victories, but facing the sacrifices yet to be made on our part, willing and bound to make them, let us gird up

Grocery Markets For the Week Show Number of Changes

Coupon System For Sugar is the Prospect—Soaps on the Up-Grade.

Latest advices from the United States are to the effect that the Government there has commandeered the entire prune crop, sizes 40 to 90 inclusive. That leaves only the smallest and the largest for distribution to civilians, and the entire production of these sizes will not represent any appreciable tonnage. The outlook as far as Canada is concerned is that there will be no new crop prunes for this market.

Coupon System.

Another few days and the coupon system of distribution will be in use. At the present time it looks as though there is an accumulation of these, and if the dealers are able to secure sugar enough to use up the coupons, there will be little hardship felt.

Molasses Advance.

Of prime importance this week is an advance for molasses of ten cents per gallon. Even at this the demand is active, and sales are made promptly as the goods arrive. One jobber expects 2,000 puncheons to arrive in a few days.

Fish Goods Higher.

Various packed fish goods are higher, as are also powdered bath brick, stove dressing and various adjustments by jobbers on tapioca and rice. In a general way the market on prunes is firm, while peaches and apricots are higher and figs are reported very scarce, and will probably advance. Shelled walnuts have attained higher levels.

Honey in Demand.

Some items have declined, and canned tomatoes are easier. Refugee beans, too, are marked down. Pearl tapioca and seed grade also have been readjusted in one quarter.

Honey is in big demand, and the market is firm. Cocoa is very active and teas are beginning to move.

Soaps Dearer.

Advances have been recorded in various items affecting the grocery trade during the week, and at least one important decline. Lobsters, peanut butter, maple butter and marmalade are lines registering an increase in price. Butter plates have also gone to higher levels, and another line of soaps is included in the list to follow the upward trend. A decline of 50c per 100lb. bag of pot and pearl barley has occurred in some quarters.

Coffee Firm.

The coffee market rules very firmly, and no indication of any easing away is noticeable. Supplies on hand are being absorbed quite rapidly under influence of a good demand and a gradual stiffening of prices is looked for.

Cocoa Strong.

Cocoa is also very strong. The output is restricted owing to regulations surrounding manufacturers and whereas no change, up or down, has marked the situation this week, higher levels would not come as any great surprise.

Raisin Sales Heavy.

Brokers intimate that sales of raisins on the market have been exceptionally heavy. Growers have withdrawn all quotations, and last orders sent in are accepted only if able to supply the goods. Recent rains have invaded the raisin belt, but the extent of the damage is not yet known.

Prices on Nuts.

Prices on nuts show some slight variation from week to week, and the general tendency is towards higher levels. Orders are going forward freely, and indications are that sufficient supplies will be available to take care of the holiday trade.

Spices Firm.

All lines of spices rule with a firm undertone. A little weakness was apparent in peppers last week, but the reverse is true now, the market having gained decided strength in the past few days. Sales in all lines are good.—Canadian Grocer.

AD WOLGAST TRIES TO REGAIN HEALTH

Former Champ Says He Plans a Comeback.

Reports from "somewhere in Wisconsin" state that Ad Wolgast, formerly lightweight champion of the world, is acting as hostler to a decrepit motor boat somewhere in the Northern Wisconsin timber country, where he is trying to regain his health. The Michigan bear cat, who leaped into prominence almost overnight, disappeared several months ago, and was not heard from until he communicated recently with friends in Milwaukee, to announce that he had a job.

Wolgast shares with Bat Nelson the distinction of being among the few remaining "fighting champions." Unlike Nelson, who owns half the town of Hegewisch, Ill., and controls the other half—Wolgast is virtually penniless, his fortune—approximately $150,000—being in the custody of his mother and his wife, who are in Cadillac, Mich.

In his letter advising friends of his espousal of industry, Wolgast said he intended to go even further into the woods for the winter and become a lumberjack. He hinted that he hoped through the strenuous life of a timber cutter to regain his health and return to the ring. This, however, is considered unlikely.

As a natural result of his daily sparrings with soldiers at Camp Upton, Benny Leonard has fallen into the habit of pulling his punches, and prior to his recent bout with Ted Lewis devoted considerable time to eradicating that evil. He had succeeded by the time the bout was staged. When the champion boxes with the rookies he doesn't go the limit, refraining from putting all his steam behind the punches aimed at his pupils. He became so accustomed to this that it might seriously have interfered with his professional performances in the ring. He corrected the fault while practicing on Clay Turner, the Indian light heavyweight, who sparred with him every day before the bout with Lewis. The redskin didn't mind, because he can stand being hit hard.

BASEBALL PLAYERS REALLY WORK HARD

ENJOY NO PRIVILEGES IN THEIR SHIPYARD JOBS

Philadelphia, Oct. 11.—The government has investigated the charge made a short time ago by some of the workmen at shipyards in the Philadelphia district, that ball players were holding soft jobs and going to and from their work in automobiles, and the contrary has been found to be the truth. With the assistance of shipyard officials, Government agents looked into the matter, and found that all sorts of unfair charges have been made against the ball-tossers, who are showing themselves unusually willing and competent workmen.

First came the reports that ballplayer bosses at the Cramp yards were unbearable to inexperienced workmen, who were forced to take orders from men knowing nothing about their work. The investigation developed that there are no ballplayer foremen at that plant, although Bill Meyer, Joe Bush, John Watson, Wally Schang, Jim McAvoy, Sherwood Magee, Roy Johnson, Rube Oldring, Charley Jamieson and Jake Muench are employed there. Jamieson and Muench are "ordinary riggers" and the others are reamers who are paid at piecework rates, the same as other men at this job.

EARLY TO LATE

The charge that the ballplayers were wearing fine clothes, using automobiles to and from work, was another canard, it is proved, for they are "wearing the ordinary overalls and jumpers and greasy caps adopted by the other workmen at the various plants." All players showed evidences of being hard at work. Muench gets up at four a. m each morning, walks two miles to get a trolley to his work; Joe Conchger is on his way to work every morning at 6 o'clock and gets home at 7.30 p. m. Other players are almost as badly off.

A newspaper photographer went unannounced to the Cramps yard at the noon hour and snapped all the ball players employed there as they came outside to get their noon lunch, consisting of sandwiches carried wrapped in newspapers, and the players offered copies of this photograph as proof of the falsity of the published statement about working in "fine clothes." Only three former ball players are foremen in the entire Philadelphia district—Chief Bender and Hans Lobert, who went to work at Hog Island last spring, and Erskine Mayer, a graduate of the Georgia School of Technology, well fitted for this particular work, and given the boss job when he joined the plant force.

NO JOY FEST

Neither could get away to play in the most important ball games of the Hog Island team during the pennant race of the Shipyard League because they were needed in preparing the first ships to be launched at Hog Island. Both have worked holidays and Sundays throughout the summer when working men are supposed to be resting. When the Shipyard League season ended in a tie for first place between the Hog Island team and the Chester Shipbuilding Company, and the special game to decide the pennant between these two teams was played on a Saturday afternoon, a half holiday, at Chester, though Bender and Lobert were at that time the best ball players on the Hog Island team, neither could get away from his essential employment to take part in the pennant deciding contest even on a half-holiday, and Hog Island lost the pennant.

At the Taylor plant near Philadelphia, Bradly Hogg, Jack Adams, Mike Prendergast, Mule Watson, Dave Bancroft and Ed. Hemingway, of the Phillies, and Taggart of the Boston Braves, are working.

GIVE THANKS!

Thanksgiving in Canada should most certainly not be limited to one day. We have only to think of the splendid record of our soldiers, of the sure defeat of Prussian militarism and of the assured welfare of the Dominion, and we will give thanks every day and all day.

As individuals, too, we should "count our blessings". Here in the midst of the most terrible struggle the world has witnessed, we are enjoying comforts unthought of 20 years ago.

No one, 20 years ago, even dreamed of a razor where you could replace in a few seconds an edge that had been slightly dulled by hard service with another edge of perfect keenness—

Gillette Safety Razor

Shaving is now a JOY, where it used to be a JOB. Gone are the days of honing and stropping, operations which sometimes improved the shaving edge, and sometimes failed, as your chin showed afterwards.

We have letters of Thanksgiving from the men in the trenches, full of the most cheery optimism—and there are days when the Gillette furnishes the only bright spot in the day's routine.

Any dealer will be glad to show you an assortment of Gillette Razor Sets. Decide today to purchase a Gillette for your own daily benefit, or that of a friend "over there".

A quoiting tournament will be held on the Collegiate grounds on Monday, Thanksgiving Day, at 1:30 o'clock. The game will be a handicap. Everybody is welcome; come and bring your quoits. The draw will be made at 1:30 p.m.

Combs.

Combs have been used in the toilet since very ancient times. The Greek, the Egyptian and the Roman ladies used them to arrange and hold up their hair; even ladies among the Swiss lake dwellers of archeological times, seem to have been familiar with them. Some of these were made of wood, some of bone, of horn, or of ivory. Specimens have often been found in recent years.

Why Not Insure The Payment of Your Premium?

Suppose you are thirty-five years old, and carrying $10,000 of Life Insurance costing you, say $306.00 per year, would you not like, (in case of serious accident or illness destroying your earning power) to have the payment of this premium paid for you as long as you live?

Then Read The Following:

The Sun Life of Canada will give you a further insurance of $5,000.00 if you are still insurable, and if you become totally and permanently disabled from any cause, the Company will not only relieve you of all future premiums on THIS policy during such disability, but they will guarantee to hand you a $500.00 cheque every year, which you see will pay the premiums on your $10,000.00 and in addition will give you a handsome CASH XMAS BOX each year and, nevertheless, will pay the face of your policy at maturity or death.

Many people hesitate to take out Life Insurance, lest some catastrophy should force them to give it up. Well, that bugbear is removed by the Sun Life of Canada.

THE GUN WAS LOADED.

CHICAGO, Oct. 12.—"Playing German" cost the life of Joseph O'Halla, 13, of this city, when he was accidentally shot in the heart by his cousin, Frank Nosal, a boy of the same age.

A family reunion was in progress at the O'Halla home and five or six children went to the woodshed to play with a small rifle belonging to Joseph.

They wanted to "play German," but none would be the "German." Finally Frank picked up the rifle and said, "Joe, you must be the German." He pulled the trigger and his cousin fell dead.

Frank pleaded he did not know the gun was loaded.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLES

Take a Glass of Salts Before Breakfast If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble; bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

Music Adds Charms to "Hearts of the World"

Symphony Orchestra a Wonderful Adjunct to This Great Picture.

There is music and music, but take it from D. W. Griffith, master showman and wizard of films, that the simple tunes of yesterday are what the public takes closest to its heart. Toronto's most blase first-nighter may sit dry-eyed through the most gripping drama, but when the orchestra croons an old melody that he heard at his mother's knee he is likely to make furtive use of his handkerchief.

"An old song will cling like a vine to one's memories of home and childhood," says Mr. Griffith, "and will tug at heart strings when all other devices of the dramatist fail. I worked on that theory in having "The Birth of a Nation" score pieced together with fragments of old tunes. The public liked it, and I have received thousands of inquiries from all over the world as to the titles of the different themes."

In "Hearts of the World," which begins a three days' engagement commencing Thursday, October 17, at The Grand Opera House, the same idea has been followed. Among the melodies is a dainty-spring song sort of melody listed in the song books of the sixties as "Sweetest Bunch of Lilacs." This accompanies the lover story of the "The Girl and the Boy" played by Lillian Gish and Robert Harron. In contrast to the pathetic little air from "Mignon" "Do You Know the Land?" is heard in the later scenes of parting and loneliness.

Wherever the rollicking little disturber (Dorothy Gish), comes into the story, a gay, saucy theme accompanies her, "Its Delightful to Be Married." But perhaps the most appealing touch of all is achieved in that time-hallowed nursery tune, "Peek-a-Boo," chosen for the littlest brother, Ben Alexander.

The cumulative effect of these and other old favourites in the score of this new film epic from the greatest of living producers, is to cause one to wonder whether the camera or the musical embellishment has been the most valuable instrument in tinting the horrors of the world war with the soft hues of romance.

OUR MORNING MEAL

Answer to Plea That it be Made a "Family Unifying Force"

Meredith Nicholson, discoursing on breakfast and our breakfast habits in The Yale Review, makes a plea for a cheerful meal, with every member of the family present, declaring it unequaled as a family unifying force. He wants it made a leisurely meal, deploring "an unhappy rush through ham and eggs."

It may be true, as elderly and reminiscent folk allege, that family life has been destroyed by modern conditions We doubt, however, whether the restoration of the family breakfast waits upon or would follow it. At least, in cities and towns the fixed and immovable breakfast hour, and the discipline which enforced the the family's presence, have become a mere tradition. It was a species of tyranny, usually imposed by the stern parent, who, obliged to get up himself, was as indolent of sleepyheads as he was of lovers Many individuals find it easier to belong to the community than to the family, for just such reasons—the imposing of one will upon others, often with no better basis than the maxims of Solomon or "Poor Richard" There are people who can "sleep the clock around" and others to whom Morpheus is a coy and reluctant visitor and must be wooed Children require more sleep than adults; so do the elderly, usually; yet Mr. Nicholson would have all routed out at a fixed hour, regardless of personal needs

Life is much more complex than it was even a score of years ago; it has changed family life. Each member has his or her individual claims and duties to meet and must be untrammeled. School, work, appointments and enagements call for more personal liberty and responsibility. Breakfast is no longer required as a lesson in punctuality. Nor has the attendance upon the meal changed more completely than the meal itself. Ham and eggs, sausage, and fried potatoes are memories of days of lower cost of living in most households. Fruits, cereals and toast or muffins have replaced the old superabundance of heavy viands, except where outdoor occupations and physical exertion make food less easily and quickly digested a necessity. The "no breakfast" fad has not prevailed to any extent; in fact it was not justified by good sense. If any meal can be spared it is luncheon. We need food at the day's outset to stroke the human engine for the day's toil —Detroit Free Press

Metz, Strasburg, Coblenz to be Occupied by Allies

Versailles Conference Adopted Marshal Foch's Minute Detailing Guarantees He Considered Essential as a Condition Precedent to Any Armistice.

LONDON, Oct. 15. — The whole subject of an armistice was exhaustively discussed last week at the Versailles conference, at which were present the Premiers of Great Britain, France and Italy and the military representatives of the allied nations. Marshal Foch presented to the conference a minute in which he detailed the military guarantees he considered essential as a condition precedent to any armistice. These involve the occupation of Metz, Strasburg and Coblenz, the strategic key to Germany. The minute was endorsed by the conference.

Marshal Foch also presented for future consideration of the conference a complete scheme for securing and ensuring German military impotence for the future. It is said to include the surrender of the German fleet of all descriptions and its surrender pro rata among the allies according to their naval losses.

The destruction of the Krupps and Skoda armament works in Germany and Austria were also considered, but their employment, with the other great industrial plants of these nations, to make good the material and machinery losses of France and Belgium seemed a better scheme all around.

Cooks Do Their Bit in Beating Boches

By FRANK J. TAYLOR
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 21. (By Mail.)—The army cooks had a lot to do with pushing the Germans back from the Marne. Any officer or doughboy will tell you that. The cooks were a great and they were continually on the jump getting food up to the doughboys who were fighting.

It was a common sight to see the old rolling kitchen lumbering toward the front, trying to get near enough to feed the company and the cook keeping hot food steaming away as the horses dragged the "goulash wagon" over the torn-up shell-swept roads. Barrages didn't stop those army cooks.

The cooks fed anyone who was hungry, no matter what his company, though they always looked out for "their boys."

"Say, I wish that outfit of mine would slow up enough so this old cart could catch up with them," said one worried cook in typical words, "believe me, C Company would never quit fighting if they didn't get a bite of food, but some hot show would mean new life to them. Let's speed up a bit more, Jim."

So Jim, the cook's assistant, who was driving, urged the tired horses onward toward the cannon sounds, while the cook himself hung onto the rear end of the jolting wheeled kitchen, trying at the same time to stir the stew.

"Were you a cook before the war?" the United Press Correspondent asked one husky perspiring cook.

"No, I was a salesman," he replied, laughing, "making good money, too."

"War brings unexpected changes, doesn't it?"

"In a way, yes. I never figured on being a cook over here," he said. "But the same principles apply to this job that did in salesmanship. First of all you have to have the real goods, and then you have to give it to them the way they like it.

"Camouflage for ordinary grub, studying what the boys want, using a little diplomacy and giving them plenty—that's all there is to getting by with a cook's job. It's a great life, but the same principles apply as in salesmanship."

The whiff from his kitchen influenced you to accept his hearty invitation to "have a bite with us."

The Quip Sprightly.

(From the Boston Transcript.)

"You there in overalls," shouted the cross-examining lawyer, "how much are you paid for telling untruths?"

"Less than you are," retorted the witness, "or you'd be in overalls too."

CARROS DISAPPEARS ON SCOUTING FLIGHT.

Noted French Aviator, Who Once Escaped From Germans, Posted as Missing.

PARIS, Oct. 7.—Lieut. Roland G. Garros, a French aviator well known in the United States, who last February escaped from a German prison and rejoined his aerial squadron, has again been posted as missing after a flight over the battlefront.

Lieutenant Garros went out on a reconnoiter over the German lines a few days ago and has not returned.

Roland Garros figured in many aerial competitions in the United States in the pioneer days of aviation. At one time he held the record for altitude by ascending 19,032 feet. He appeared in meets in Memphis, New Orleans, Dallas, Richmond, Chattanooga, Fort Worth, Mexico City, Havana, and New York, and holds a number of speed prizes won in various cities in Europe. He was born at Cape Town, South Africa, of French parents in 1885.

Two German Strongholds Have Been Captured

British Are Within a Few Hundred Yards of Douai and Have Occupied the Prison and Other Buildings in the Outskirts.

CITY OF LILLE MENACED

LONDON, Oct. 15.— The German stronghold of La Fere, together with a great part of the St. Gobain masif of which Le Fere was a northerly outpost of the Oise, has been captured by the French.

The La Fere-Laon railroad line has been crossed on the high ground between Danizy and Versigny, about 2 1-2 miles east of La Fere.

The northern and eastern sections of La Fere are burning.

Vouziers was captured on Saturday, and French troops entered Laon on Sunday afternoon.

Notable progress has been made by the Italians and French along the line to the east, where the French have reached Amifontaine, which is 15 miles north of Rheims.

"The American troops on both sides of the Meuse have obtained their objectives," was the official characterization to-night of the day's operations. The total prisoners taken since September 26 is 17,659.

In Douai Outskirts.

The British forces on the southerly side of the great wedge that has been thrust into the enemy lines south-east of Valenciennes are halting momentarily, before an extensive effort to seize the German defensive line from Valenciennes to the Oise.

Both to the north and south of this area, however, the Germans are retreating or preparing to fall back under the continuous pressure that Marshal Foch is applying.

Douai, the most important of the northern French cities within the immediate scope of the allied thrust with the exception of fallen Cambria and threatened Lille, seems about to pass into British hands.

The British are within a few hundred yards of Douai, Field Marshal Haig reported to-day in his official statement. They have captured the Faubourg d-Esquerchin, the Douai prison and the greater part of Flers, close to Douai on the north-west.

The edge of Lieu-St. Amand, three miles south of Denain, has been reached by the British in their push up the easterly bank of the Scheldt Canal, south-east of Douai. They have captured in this sector the town of Montrecourt, a scant seven miles from the outskirts of Valenciennes, and almost directly south of that city.

Further progress north-west of Douai and along the Selle River to the region of Solesmes, was reported Sunday night. Several additional towns have been captured and prisoners have been taken.

British forces advancing east of Lens Saturday captured the villages of Montigny, Harnes and Annay. The German rearguards suffered severe casualties.

North-west of Le Cateau the villages of St. Vaast, St. Aubert, Villers-en-Cauchies, and Ovesnes-le-Sec have been cleared of the German rearguards, while on the west bank of the Sensee Canal, Arleux and Corbehem have fallen to the British.

Lille is Menaced.

Lille itself, the greatest of the French manufacturing towns, is in none too secure a position. The wedge below Douai is threatening the whole line north past Lille into Flanders, and the Germans are palpably worried also over the prospect of Gen. Plumer's Second Army and King Albert's Belgian forces on their right flank above Lille springing into renewed activity.

MRS. CLAYBORNE SENDS FOR RUTH CHAPTER XII.

Brian really tried harder than usual to increase his clientelle, and so his income. But a young lawyer without broad acquaintance or influence never has an easy time. And Brian Hackett was no exception to the general rule. So, although he would generally bring home a little extra money, his salary was for long, lean periods all they had to depend upon. And, as he once said to Ruth, when she had bemoaned the fact they could not have something to make the rooms more attractive, or at least that they could not repaper them, the salary of a lawyer's clerk did not allow of luxuries.

"Why be a clerk, then? Why not strike out for yourself?"

"And live on nothing a year instead of what we now have?"

"We have little more, at least you might stand a chance of having something in the future."

"A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," he laughingly assured her, as he sat down to comfortably read his evening paper and smoke his pipe.

"He has no initiative," Ruth said to herself. "He never will be different, in some ways."

Ruth, too, often urged Brian to bring home his law books and study.

"You needn't tell me, Brian Hackett that you are so smart you could learn nothing more. I should think you would study every minute you could get. The better lawyer you are the more apt you will be to become successful

"It wouldn't make a bit of difference with me. Some fellows are lucky; they get all the plums."

"You got me, didn't you?" she tried to be facetious. At the same time, she intrigued herself that she must make him see his mistakes—that no one else cared enough to do so.

"Yes, dear and that's all one poor devil deserves"

"But Brian," she returned to the subject, "you know how interested in decorating I was; rather you do not know much about it But I read and studied for years. It was a perfect delight for me to work out new designs, new schemes of color I should think it would be the same with you—only that it would mean still more, because with you there is added the necessity of making it a success, because it is our living I am sure it would mean a great deal in the end."

Brian finally commenced to bring his books home, but he studied in a perfunctory manner, always ready to lay it aside at the slightest interruption. Ruth watched and kept silent. Indeed, she was growing more and more quiet as time went by The home upon which she could not make any more improvements, because of lack of money, began to get on her nerves The stark ugliness of it, compared with her luxurious home she had left, made her feel sick, almost nauseated at times Then she would take herself to task, and be conscience stricken because of feeling so when Brian was doing the best he could

Mrs. Clayborne wrote weekly letters to Ruth, retailing all the news, never forgetting to add that Rachel grieved for "her baby" and would not be comforted; and that the house even looked different now that she was not there to arrange the flowers etc. She mentioned also that she intended having her living room done over in the fall; there had been a leak and she thought she would have the coloring of the room changed at the same time she had the ceiling fixed Then she told Ruth that she must get Brian to spare her to plan the decorations for her. "You will owe me a visit by that time," she had added.

Ruth answered her aunt's letters faithfully and wrote brightly Her pride would not allow her to mention the careful way in which she had to live, so that Mrs. Clayborne only imagined how things were going because of what Ruth omitted to say Now she failed to mention Rachel's coming to her, or any of the little plans she had made before her wedding. And never had she asked hr aunt to visit her. Whn she thought of the elegant Mrs. Clayborne in her little flat, she finshed with shame—not because of the flat, but it would be such a proof of Brian's incompetency. It was so exactly as her aunt had pictured it would be.

But the mention of the old living room, that she was to plan its redecorations, gave her such delight that she could scarcely wait until Brian came to tell him of it. As she talked her eyes brightened, her face lit up with keenest interest and she talked fast and gayly Then, after dinner was cleared away, she brought out her precious books—she had insisted upon taking them, although Brian had laughed at her—and studied over different periods suited to the decoration of the big old-fashioned room

"See Brian!" I'll make a bow window here; it will give more light and alter the shape of the room a little. And"—

"Yes, dear, but what has happened to-day? I haven't seen you so bright and happy for weeks," he had no idea that it was the thought of going back to her home, once more living under a roof where everything was pleasant to look at, and getting away for the sordid life she now led.

"Why Aunt Laura wants me to come home. Isn't that enough to make me happy?"

"Wants you to come home—what do you mean?" he turned pale.

What would you do with it?

A CONSERVATIVE MAN DOESN'T CARRY a lighted bomb around with him searching for water to put out the fuse. He gets rid of it as quickly and gently as possible and then goes away from there.

Not all of us know that we are packing around with us every day a potential source of trouble that may produce disease or even death. Ninety per cent of human illness is caused or aggravated by a clogging of waste in your bowels.

If you try to blast away that decaying, germ-breeding waste with weakening pills, salts, castor oil, laxative mineral waters, etc., you are like the man with the bomb—carrying it around with you while you hunt for the neutralizer.

You'll never find one. There isn't any. The thing for you to do is to stick to your schedule of bowel movements as you do to your tooth brush. Get rid of that source of danger before the germs back up through your system and hit you with something you recognize. Nujol has a gentle, absolutely harmless and absolutely thorough cleansing action upon the intestines, and leaves no after-effect but regular habits.

Sloan's Liniment Kills Pain

CHOPSTICKS IN JAPAN.

How They Are Used and How They Are Served in Public Places.

The use of chopsticks is general in Japan, except among the richer classes, who have adopted European knives and forks, and, to some extent, the European cuisine. Small bowls of china or lacquered wood are the usual table equipment. After the various solid portions of the food have been lifted to the mouth with chopsticks the liquid remaining is sipped from the bowl.

In the case of rice, which would be tedious to pick up grain by grain, the bowl is often raised to the mouth and the rice shoveled or pushed in with the chopsticks. It is also customary to pour a little tea into the rice bowl after it has been nearly emptied, and in this way the few remaining grains of rice are washed down as the tea is drunk.

At public places the chopsticks at each meal must be new. This is indicated by the fact that the chopsticks are made from one piece of wood and are left joined together, as were matches at one time in the United States. These new chopsticks are incased in a thin paper envelope, sealed at the end, and bearing Japanese characters advertising either the hotel or some firm that has furnished them free to the proprietor for the sake of the publicity thus gained. Toothpicks, which are freely used by all Japanese at meals, are also inclosed in envelopes that frequently bear advertising matter.

Japan's Toothache Altars.

"Japan is dotted with shrines," said a traveler. "One that I examined closely resembled a little house about three feet wide and as many high, with a peaked roof and its front wall taken out. Attached to bamboo rods across the front were many slips of paper on which sufferers from toothache had written their prayers and promises to do acts of charity and kindness if the pain which brought them there disappeared. We were told that at least one toothache altar might be found in any Japanese town."

Sure Way To Get Rid Of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

An Aristocratic Grain.

Could plants lay claim to aristocratic position, as representing an old family, rice might safely claim to be of the most ancient pedigree. It is the earliest cereal known. Originally a native of India, it has crossed the ocean and made a home for itself where heat and moist soil could be found. It grows in all warm portions of the globe and furnishes the principal food of nearly one-third of the human race.

Couldn't See Why She Was Wrong.

"Was I rude this afternoon?" a little girl asked her mother.

"I hope not, my dear," said the mother.

Little Girl—Well, our teacher was examining us in poetry—"Casabianca"—and she asked why did the boy stand on the burning deck, and I said because it was too hot for him to sit down, and she made me stand in the corner.

Guarding Against Mishaps.

The kid came into the library and politely begged his father's pardon for disturbing him.

"Well, what is it?" asked the father.

"I hate to bother you, dad, but Sister Ann is going to elope with that young Mr. Taylor tonight."

"How do you know?"

"He has a rope ladder hid in the garage."

"Thanks for telling me, son. Now, look here; you run right upstairs and tell your mother what you're just told me. If she doesn't know about it beforehand she might think it was burglars when it comes off and raise a row."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Her One Romance

By RUTH EVELYN PETERSON

"Walter! Walter!"

"Sh-h!" ordered Miss Dorothy Worden, and waved a scarf toward the big wire cage hung from the top of the porch.

She flushed and was generally embarrassed, for some one was passing the house, and Miss Worden was a sensitive soul and experienced a certain sense of guiltiness. But to the passer-by the sudden outburst of Miss Worden's well-known parrot conveyed no secret. A name, and a common one, had no particular significance to unenlightened ears.

There had been an hour of quite rare romance in the lonely life of Miss Worden, but she had hidden its details and even its memories from all outsiders. She was thirty and designated as an old maid.

Fate had been kind to her. A brother, fortunate in his business affairs and generous in his gifts to his only sister, had provided her with a cozy home and a settled income. She was naturally sweet tempered, she had not allowed her sympathies to grow old and she was the favorite and confidant of all the younger set of the town.

Lovers had passed her by. For six years after girlhood the care of her invalid mother had taken all her time and interest. By that time she was twenty-eight, and with a sigh she had accepted the inevitable.

"I am quite on the shelf," she told one of her near and dear friends. "And that is not a very sad fate, for I have never had time to think of love and cherish any romance memories."

But sentiment came to Miss Worden with a visit for two weeks at a summer resort. The doctor had advised her that she needed and deserved a change and a rest after the death of her mother. It was one day while strolling down the beach that a well-dressed but unobtrusive gentleman half paused as he passed her. She was seated watching the waves and the sporters in the surf when the same man passed her. She noted that he slowed down in his pace. He hesitated, then he lifted his hat and approached her.

"Pardon me, if I have made a mistake," he said courteously, "but are you not Dorothy Worden—forgive me, Miss Worden?"

"That is my name," acknowledged the lady. "May I ask—"

But his clear, honest face had become radiant. He extended his hand readily and, somehow won with those friendly earnest eyes, she allowed her own to rest in his.

"You don't remember me," he smiled. "I don't wonder. I made little impression with my personality when I was a boy, less as I drudged along as a man. I am an old schoolmate of yours. I am Walter Clyde."

Her face lit up in turn, Ah, she fully remembered him now! It was like traversing a page from an old treasured book to go over the incidents of their early childhood. She recalled how he had spelled her down, and he related an incident where he had been punished for some trivial fault and she had waited to go home with him and comfort him. It was a delightful week for these two lonely ones. He told her of his daily work. He was a traveling salesman, and she in turn apprized him of her life history since they had parted. Playfully he called her Dorothy, and asked her to address him as Walter, as she had done in the dear old days of childhood.

"I am coming to see you next time my route covers Milton," he told her, and when they parted Dorothy felt as though suddenly she had been turned away from a newly found paradise.

And when Miss Worden got home it was a comfort to speak his name to herself. But wise old Polly heard her, and hence the oft, loud and mischievous, whenever the observant parrot comprehended that it teased her.

It was three months later when a lonely man turned his face in the direction of Milton. He had his longings to see his old-time school friend. He had his misgivings also. Somehow that chance meeting with Miss Worden had filled his life with a new interest. Did he exaggerate in his conception of the warm interest she had evinced in his affairs? That might have been simply a friendly and courteous act.

Walter Clyde reached Milton and inquired his way to the Worden home. He located it. The neat rose-scented garden, the vine-embowered cottage enchanted him. He found Miss Worden absent from home, probably shopping in town or visiting a neighbor. He sat down on the porch step, wondering if he would be welcome.

"Walter! Walter!"

He started to his feet. At first he believed it was Miss Worden calling him. Then he noticed the parrot in its cage hanging from the porch ceiling.

"Walter! Walter!" He began thinking. A most agreeable smile crossed his face. He was a slow man, but a reasoner. Had Miss Worden taught the clever bird to speak his name?

"I'll wait—I'll stay," he soliloquized. "Why not? The bird spoke my name. Sort of friendly and tender, too. Dear lady! perhaps she has made a confidant of the bird and really—really likes me."

She loved him, and he knew this before he went away, buoyed up with the happy knowledge that when summer came again she would be his happy bride.

The Stationer.

"Stationery" has etymologically as much to do with standing as has "stationary." The original stationers, or stationarii, were so called because they sold their books upon stalls or "stations"—in London round about old St. Paul's cathedral, in some cases against the walls of the cathedral itself. This is one of the many trades the names of which have no direct allusion to the commodities sold. "Grocers," for instance, were so called either because they sold "en gros," wholesale, or because they were "engrossers," monopolizers.—London Chronicle.

Always.

Time haunted her. She laughed at him, she resorted to a thousand devices whereby to discomfort him, but he was not to be shaken off. At length she lost her temper.

"Can't you see," she flared out reluctantly, "that there's no room for you where beauty dwells?"

"There is always," Time rejoined, touching his scythe significantly, "room for one mower."

"Whatever is the Matter, Jack, You Don't Look Well!"

"OH, I'm all right."

"But you're not. You look so worried and tired."

"Well, I haven't been sleeping very well lately."

"No, and you don't seem to have any appetite. I think you ought to take something to tone up your system."

"Oh, no, I don't need any medicine. I guess I will soon be all right."

"But you should not neglect yourself, for that is just the way I was before I had nervous prostration, and you know what a long time I was laid up."

"Well, I haven't any time to be laid up, that's a sure thing."

"I know what I am going to do. I am going to buy half a dozen boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and see that you take it regularly."

"You know, Jack, that nothing seemed to help me like Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I am sure it will be just as good for you."

"You will take it, won't you?"

"I'll do most anything to get feeling better, for I know I have been losing my grip on business lately."

"I get up feeling tired in the mornings, and have to drive myself to do the work that used to be a pleasure for me. I have got in the way of putting off matters that need attention, and hate to meet people when I know that some energy will be required to discuss business deals with them."

"You'll take the Nerve Food, won't you?"

"Oh, I'll let you be the doctor, and if the Nerve Food builds me up like it did you I'll soon get back my old-time vigor and be able to make things hum. I have been rather discouraged lately, but I can see now that the trouble is in the condition of my nervous system. So you get the Nerve Food and we'll see what it will do."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Every box of the genuine bears the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author.

MUNITION MAKING GOES ON.

Peace talk has not made such impression on the programme for the speeding up of the production of munitions, says Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing News. In fact, the actual operations have not been interfered with at all. There is just the same demand to-day as there was before the week-end peace talk, and there is the same uncertainty regarding delivery dates, due to the tremendous pressure under which the makers of munitions equipment are working.

It is a poor week when some person has not a new guess as to the amount of business that will be handled in the future by the war contract shops of the Dominion. One report has it that U. S. manufacturers feel that they are in a position to handle the shell programme, and they desire no more business to come to Canada. As a matter of fact munitions business is not coming to Canada because the U. S. firm want to send it here, but because the munitions shops in Canada are right now keyed up to a wonderful degree of efficiency in producing shells, and the Government that wants good shells at once can get them from the Canadian contractors. The largest orders for equipment now have to do with the production of the 155-m.m. shell, which is an American order.

SIBILANTS AND SONG.

A Combination That Does Not Produce Satisfactory Results.

"Writing verses for the printed page and writing 'words' to be set to music and sung," remarked a gentleman who has won laurels in both departments of industry, "are two very different matters. You can take liberties in the first case which you cannot in the case of 'lyrics,' as with these you have to consider the 'singableness' of the words used.

"To avoid sibilants like a pestilence and to use open vowels such as A and O wherever possible are the two golden rules. English has been called an unsingable language, and certainly Italian and French are more liquid and easier to vocalize in. Open vowels are very important. Compare, for instance, the word 'thee,' which is breathed out between the teeth, with its plural 'you,' which enables the singer to open the mouth widely. The relative singableness is apparent at once.

"An excessive use of sibilants produces a ludicrous hissing sound. (Read the last sentence aloud, and note the effect.) Nevertheless a well known dramatist was once careless enough to give an actor a speech in which he described 'Dick sitting still as a stone and spurring the horse splendidly.'—London Answers.

THAT SON-IN-LAW OF PA'S——Pa Must Have Thought It Was a Pop Gun — By Wellington

With Fingers! Corns Lift Off

Doesn't hurt a bit to lift any corn or callus right off. Try it!

For a few cents you can get a small bottle of the magic drug freezone recently discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Just ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone. Apply a few drops upon a tender, aching corn or callus and instantly all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you lift it off with the fingers.

Just think! Not one bit of pain before applying freezone or afterwards. It doesn't even irritate the surrounding skin.

Hard corns, soft corns or corns between the toes, also hardened calluses on bottom of feet, shrivel up and fall off without hurting a particle. It is almost magical.

Ladies! Keep a tiny bottle on the dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.

What last year's Victory Loan achieved

LAST year the people of Canada lent the nation $425,000,000, by buying Victory Bonds.

And because Canada now needs more money and will presently ask the people to lend it, the people have a right to know what was accomplished by last year's loan.

Every dollar of it was spent in Canada.

Not only was it spent in Canada—it was circulated—it became the working capital of the nation.

IT financed millions of dollars worth of munitions for Great Britain through which great sums of money were passed along to the workers in a hundred cities and towns and to the coal and iron miners of Nova Scotia and New Ontario.

It financed the purchase of thousands of aeroplanes for Great Britain through which again, millions of dollars were passed along to scores of lumber camps in British Columbia and to thousands of workers in the cities.

It financed the export of millions of dollars worth of copper, lead and zinc and that again gave employment to an army of miners and metal workers all over Canada.

It financed the building of 112 steel and wooden ships in the Maritime Provinces, Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia through which many more millions were passed along to the artizans, miners, steel workers and lumbermen of Canada.

It financed the purchase of hundreds of millions of dollars worth of foodstuffs as a result of which the money passed along to the farmers all over Canada.

And the farmers and the workers of Canada deposited their savings in the banks and the banks in turn loaned it to more producers who circulated it again and yet again, until every individual in Canada felt the benefit.

\+ \+ \+

THE money from the Victory Loan, like any other working capital, was "turned over" several times. It kept working, over and over again, until it built up a tremendous commerce—it developed the greatest export trade Canada ever had, greater by several times, than the amount of the loan itself.

And this trade furnished the market for Canada's products of the field, the mine, the forest and the shop.

Thus was Canada's prosperity, upon which her war efficiency depends, kept at a high level.

And by reason of this prosperity, Canada has maintained and equipped an army of over 400,000 men—an army which has brought glory to Canada by its courage and prowess in the field, and by its heroic spirit of sacrifice.

So when Canada asks us to lend our money to carry on we have an opportunity to contribute again to the nation's prosperity and to the fighting efficiency of her noble sons on the battle line.

How Canada's Exports have Grown

What Canada's war activities and financing have actually achieved for the nation's export business may be seen at a glance by comparing certain items for the year ending March 31st, 1918, with the average volume of trade in the same items for three years previous to the war.

	Average for 1913-13-14	For fiscal year 1918
From the Farms:
Dairy	$21,064,893	$40,175,270
Grain	97,061,983	403,985,858
Flour	18,861,944	95,896,492
Meat	6,146,554	76,729,060
Vegetables	1,205,709	19,034,528
From the Mines:
Iron and Steel (1914 only)	11,374,981	45,810,367
Copper, Nickel, Zinc, and Aluminum	15,323,513	46,271,848
From the Industries:
Munitions		450,000,000
Leather	2,162,662	10,986,281
Clothing	337,047	9,702,207
Vehicles	2,871,163	22,776,590
From the Forests:
Pulp and Paper	12,446,523	59,599,339

Canada's fisheries will yield, in addition to the above, during the present year about $9,000,000 worth of export.

In addition to the forest items 248 million feet of aeroplane spruce timber averaging over $20 per thousand is contracted for in British Columbia as the result of Canada's financial assistance to Great Britain.

Not ranking as exports, but nevertheless directly financed by the Victory Loan 1917, is 446,000 tonnage of ships valued at $70,000,000 which will be completed by the end of this year. These ships use millions of dollars worth of lumber and steel which again circulates vast sums among the workers of Canada.

EXPLOSIVES OF WARFARE.

To a Great Extent They Are a Development of Fireworks.

War is a wholesale fireworks celebration. A giant firecracker is really a dangerous bomb, and rifle grenades are but small rockets, carrying high explosives and fired from rifles. Great fort destroying projectiles look simply like gigantic rockets.

The first magazine gun was a Roman candle. The first projectile propelled by an explosive was a rocket. The first shrapnel was a bomb discharging luminous stars instead of bullets.

Modern warfare is, so to speak, a development of Fourth of July ideas.

However, gunpowder—the first explosive—was itself mere play stuff for at least a thousand years before anybody thought of using it for war purposes. It was commonly employed in China for fireworks and crackers during the earliest centuries of the Christian era. The bombs nowadays dropped by military aviators are children's torpedoes magnified to make them deadly.

Really an incendiary bomb was the famous "Greek fire" of the crusaders.

It has been said that shrapnel is a modified fireworks bomb. It has the form of a cylinder, which, at a distance from the gun muzzle suitably timed by a fuse, blows its own head off, throwing out 250 or more lead bullets that travel on their own account with a velocity of 400 feet a second.

Did Him Little Good.

James W. Marshall, a native of New Jersey, was the first man to discover gold in California. It was in 1848 that he noticed a glistening object in the bed of a stream, which happened to be a nugget of gold. Notwithstanding this important find Marshall died in 1855 penniless and alone in his little cabin.

Motions of the Earth.

The earth has at least eight different motions. There is the rotation on its axis, making day and night; the inclination of the axis, making summer and winter; the revolution around the sun, making the year, and the motion resulting from the attraction of the moon, which shows itself most plainly in the tides. There are several other motions of less interest. Perhaps the most awe inspiring of all is the motion of the earth in space, dragged by the swiftly moving sun at the rate of 700 miles a minute.

A Clam That Pearl Divers Fear.

All sorts of superstitions prevail among the pearl fishers of Ceylon, and a large business is done by sorcerers who sell charms to restrain the appetite of the sharks and to drive away the diabolical stingrays. Another peril which the diver dreads more than either stingray or shark is the giant clam that weighs nearly half a ton when full grown. It will snap off a man's legs like pipestems if the victim chances to thrust a limb between its open jaws, or, at all events, will hold him until he drowns miserably.—London Globe.

MAKE POULTRY PAY

Laying Hen Needs Plenty of Food, Grit and Shell Material.

In Preserving Manure Prevent Leaching First and Then Keep Pile Moist and Well Packed.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

MANY times the failure of securing a satisfactory winter egg yield is due to neglect of the pullets early in the fall. The ordinary pullets begin laying at from six to seven months of age, and many farmers get a few pullet eggs in October and November, followed by little or no production in December or early January. This frequently is due to a change in roosting quarters or being overcrowded and underfed in the poultry house.

To get the best results the pullets should be placed in winter quarters by November 1st. Sometime in August or September the henhouse should be thoroughly cleaned, the walls, ceiling, etc., brushed down, and all old cobwebs, etc., removed, then give the house a good whitewashing, and if the floor is earth or sand at least four inches of it should be renewed.

If at all possible, separate the pullets from the old hens and cockerels. In order to lay well, they should be fed all they will eat, particularly of ground grains and green foods, and should not be overcrowded. About twenty-five to thirty-five pullets is plenty for a pen twelve feet square; in fact, in many cases twenty-five pullets in the pen will lay almost as many eggs as the thirty-five. Should you be fortunate in having too many pullets, or where you can make a selection, get the earliest and best matured ones into the pen first. If you have to crowd or sell some get rid of the small, weak ones and those that are slow to develop.

The pen should be light and well ventilated. Have all the ventilators or openings on one side of the house and close together. Do not have an opening in one end of the house and another in the other end. These cause drafts, which are very apt to produce colds and sickness. It usually takes a pullet at least three weeks to get over a cold, and she seldom lays while she has a cold. Keep the house dry, and use plenty of dry straw in which the birds can scratch for the feed.

Remember a laying hen needs plenty of food, grit, and shell material. Also there should be a variety to the food; that is green food such as clover leaves, cabbage, or sprouted oats, or if none of these can be had, some roots. She also needs some form of meat food—sour milk is the best, but beef scrap, or other meat offal, if untainted, will answer. Usually about one-third of the grain should be ground or even up to one-half. The whole grain makes exercise in hunting for it in the straw. Always remember the pen should be clean, dry, and sweet.—Prof. R. W. Graham, O. A. College, Guelph.

To Preserve the Fertility of Manure.

In fresh manure the plant food materials are not in as available condition for growing plants as in well-rotted manure. In the storing of manure, however, to get it well rotted considerable losses of plant food occur unless the manure pile is properly packed.

If the quickest returns are not wanted following the application of the manure to the soil, then the manure may be added in the fresh condition. If this is done in warm weather the manure should be ploughed in as soon as possible after application. The total plant food materials present in the manure will thus be added to the soil, where they will be prepared by the soil bacteria for use by the growing crops.

The main objections to putting fresh manure on the land are—first, it is not always convenient to do so; second, weed seeds may be numerous in the fresh manure, consequently a heavy weed crop may be expected, third, its action is not so rapid as in the case of well-rotted manure, but it is active over a longer period.

Where manure is to be stored in piles or pits until it is ripened, or until it is convenient to use, then the greatest care is necessary to prevent losses of plant food materials from it.

In the first place the bottom of the pile or pit should be impervious to water so that leachings from the pile will not occur. Second, it is well to have a layer of old well-rotted manure at the bottom. Third, the manure as it is piled up should be well compacted or tramped down to prevent excess of air from getting into it. Fourth, it should be kept moist but not wet. These precautions apply more particularly to horse manure, which is loose and comparatively dry. Unless this is kept well packed and moist, loss by fire fanging is certain. This is an oxidation process, or fermentation, set going by certain species of bacteria in the manure. If cow or pig manure is available it should be mixed with the horse manure in the pile, as these are very wet and compact and will give a good consistency to the whole mass. Manure so kept will have the minimum of loss and the plant food will be ripened by the various species of bacteria in it and thus made ready for immediate use by the growing crops when it is added to the soil.

The main things to be remembered in storing manure are, first, to prevent leaching; second, to keep it well packed down and moist.—Prof. D. H. Jones, O. A. College, Guelph.

Marshal Foch Driving Formidable Wedge in German Lines on Franco-Belgian Front

Enemy Forces Will be Split in Two Unless an Immediate Retirement is Carried Out.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Oct. 15.—Marshal Foch in his new stroke in Flanders is driving a formidable wedge between the German bases of Bruges and Ghent, in Belgium and Lille in France. The effective manner in which King Albert carried out his attack Monday has further widened the wedge, while the Canadians aim to split the German forces in two unless the enemy falls back speedily on a wide front.

The British army of General Plumer on the right wing of the Allied advance is now only three miles from the important railway junction of Courtrai. Once the Allies master the line at Courtrai, which probably will only be a matter of a few hours, the German situation at Lille will be most perilous and that at Ghent not much better. The French capture of Roulers, the important railway junction east of Ypres, is a serious loss to the Germans. Although the Belgian railway system is dense enough to provide alternative routes to a certain extent, the Allied entrance into Roulers on the first day of the offensive is bound to affect the German communication system most unfavourably.

Third Phase.

(By Frank J. Taylor.)

WITH THE AMERICAN FIRST ARMY, Oct. 15. —Swinging into the third phase of the Argonne-Meuse battle, the Americans have crossed the Aire river, capturing Romagne and Cunel and menaced Champigneulle, St. Geuges and Landres. The infantry attacked yesterday morning after a terrific all night bombardment which blasted the Germans out of their forward positions. After the first forward jump, the doughboys encountered deadly machine gun resistance and their advance was also more difficult by the nature of the terrain. They were last reported on the outskirts of St. Guivin, into which they were pushing.

Still Advancing.

(United Press.)

(By Frank J. Taylor.)

WITH THE AMERICAN FIRST ARMY, Oct. 15. — American troops, supported by tanks to-day, stubbornly fought their way forward between the Argonne and the Meuse, seizing German strong points. The fighting this morning was in cold, damp weather. German attacks were repulsed by units of the American second army.

A heavy counter bombardment came from the enemy batteries during the night. This morning the German guns were silenced.

On the Serbian Front.

LONDON, Oct. 15.— Serbian troops have occupied on a broad front all the heights dominating the terrain south of the Moravia river, according to the Serbian official covering Sunday's operation, received here to-day. Four field guns fell into the hands of the Allies.

French Official.

PARIS, Oct. 15. — French troops have made an advance towards the town of Rethel and have captured the town of Nauteuil, two and a half miles west of Rethel.

In the Argonne the French have reached the Aisne west of Grand Pre and have captured the villages of Clizy and Termes. Nearly eight hundred prisoners were taken in this region. South of Serreth the French have also made a marked advance.

YOUNG MAN, reliable & capable, experienced in all lines of Editorial and Reportorial work on daily newspapers, seeks position Apply H. M. Sinclair, 570 Aylmer St., Peterboro.

Precautions Against Influenza Should be Increased, Not Relaxed

Peterborough acknowledges with a deep sense of gratitude the comparatively mild form and effects of the epidemic of influenza which is at present sweeping the country. Sapient citizens proclaim that the present disease is none other than La Grippe, and have been inclined to denounce as panicky the efforts that have been made here to safeguard the public. The great body of citizens, however, realize that while there is undoubtedly a great number of cases of ordinary influenza there is also a more virulent type from which this city seems to have escaped thus far.

The precautions taken by the Medical Officer of Health, Dr. Amys, and the assistance and counsel of the Medical Association, have met with the approval of practically the entire community, and it is because of the success of the measures enforced during the week-end that many citizens feel that the efficacy of these precautions should not be nullified by their premature revocation. It has been pointed out that only a few days ago Brantford was boasting that it had not a single case of influenza. Now, it is reported to have more than 2,500 cases, and the deaths during the week-end are convincing proof that the security was false. Toronto, according to Dr. Hastings, is now beginning to feel the full rigours of the epidemic. In brief, extreme conditions in some of the nearby communities prompt the suggestion that it is too soon to consider that this city is out of danger.

CITIZENS EAGER TO CO-OPERATE.

The officials of the churches, theatres, schools and other places of assembly that have been closed for the past few days have shown a praiseworthy spirit of co-operation with the Health authorities, but they too doubtless realize that the sources of infection in Toronto and other centres, apart from the local cases, present a menace through travel and other channels that should be reckoned with in the fight against the epidemic in Peterborough. Such is the consensus of the street, and if the Health authorities have any doubt of the opinion of the people in this campaign they may rest assured that the majority of citizens are more than willing to dispense with their ordinary pleasures and activities until there is complete assurance that the epidemic has passed. Lives are too valuable to be needlessly subjected to an infection, so fatal, as the news reports prove, that may be largely avoided by the sacrifice of the social and entertainment affairs of the next few days.

It is an easy matter to close the schools, and it is just as easy to close theatres, pool-rooms and such places. Many cities have turned the key in the last of these resorts when the epidemic in these cities is at its height. It seems too soon to lessen the restrictions in Peterborough.

The responsibility rests with Dr. Amys, and the preventive measures he has already employed indicate that he realizes the responsibility that rests upon him. The public hopes that he will not make a mistake in misjudging the period and the progress of the outbreak by relaxing the restrictions that have thus far been highty effective.

The Tag Day Collections

Over One Thousand Dollars Was Realized for the Children's Aid Society.

The sum of $1034.15 was collected by the Children's Aid Society on their annual tag day held on Saturday, October 12. Although this is $185 less than the sum collected last year the committee in charge are well pleased considering the handicap which hindered the work of the collectors. Rain began to fall in the morning and the weather was more or less drizzly all day. Owing to the great number of men at the factories they were very hard to tag as also was the market. Mr. G. W. Powell, the inspector of the society states that all subscriptions are not in yet and that he confidentially expects to exceed last year's figures.

The boxes will be a Madill's drug store and the Union Bank for a few days for the convenience of those who wish to augment this sum.

"Hearts of the World" For Three Days

At the Grand Thursday, Friday and Saturday Next—D. W. Griffith's Picture.

David W. Griffith's supreme triumph, "Hearts of the World" might be called a cinema grand opera, so well does the musical accompaniment fit the picture. There is a theme running through the symphony indicating every important character and every gesture is timed with music. The picture might easily be understood without titles as some of the music, to which everyone knows the words, describes the scenes exactly.

"There are women — thousands of them—in France, who in two years have not had a comb, brush or hairpin. D. W. Griffith makes this statement. And Mr. Griffith ought to know, for he spent eighteen months in France producing "Hearts of the World," his greatest achievement, which comes to Grand Opera House for a three-days engagement, starting Thursday, Oct. 17. Seats now on sale.

Little Ben Alexander, the six- year-old actor appearing in "Hearts of the World," is soon to be featured in a film production now being made by D. W. Griffith for the Artcraft management. Little Ben is one of the most compelling figures in "Hearts of the World," his acting calling forth rounds of applause. He made his screen debut under Mr Griffith's direction, and the famous producer expects great things from his juvenile "find."

KAISER MUST STEP DOWN

That in Effect Represents One of the Basic Conditions of Peace.

WANT GUARANTEES

(United Press.)

(By Robert J. Bender.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15. — Kaiser Wilhelm must step down or else his powers must be curtailed so that he is a mere figure head before Germany can have peace. That is the basic meaning behind President Wilson's "decision," with respect to a peace with the German people. He can remove himself as the Czar of Russia did long before him and as other monarchs have done since, or he can be removed by the German people themselves—tired of his "God-given" air of power to kill them at will, or the German people can quietly have an internal political reform which will wholly emasculate his powers to declare war and peace. That summarizes the "way out" for Germany as seen here to-day.

Sufficient Guarantees.

Previous to such momentous steps, however, it is extremely vital that sufficient guarantees be given that treachery will not cheat the Allies of supremacy should an armistice come. The guarantees may include the occupation of such strategic strongholds as Metz, the relinquishment of Teuton submarines and the lifting of German mine fields. Germany must eliminate the burst of extreme ruthlessness that has marked her military programme more than usually in the past few weeks. There will be no spirit of revenge if President Wilson's programme succeeds. He holds that only the spirit of justice must prevail at the peace table. The most the authorities here saw in the situation to-day is that the German leaders may have started the peace proposals as a "gold brick." But now they have so instilled the idea of peace into the German people that it will not be long before the demand for peace crystallizes to the point where these people will take matters in their own hands.

The Socialist Congress at Munich unanimously adopted a resolution favouring the abdication of the Kaiser and the Crown Prince, according to the Munich Eachrichten.

First Victim of Influenza

East City Man Was Stricken a Few Days Ago.

Deceased who was 22 year of age leaves a wife and three children. The remains were taken to his former home in Norwood today at 12:27 for interment.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—The Associated Press this morning issued the following summary:

Savagely attacking he German lines in Belgium, the British, French and Belgian forces have captured Roulers, and carried their lines far toward Theurout. In reports from the front there are indications that the German lines have been pierced and the enemy is retreating rapidly. On the other extreme of the battle line, American troops have carried their lines well past the Kriemsild positions west of the Meuse river. They are holding a front that runs from north of Cunel, north of Romagne and thence northwestwardly to the vicinity of St. Georges, at which village it turns south-west and meets the French lines at Grand Pre. French and Italian forces are slowly sweeping the Germans back out of the Laon salient. They are now well to the east of the Laon-Lafere road and have kept up a steady pressure against the enemy to the north-east of Lafere. The Allied blow in Belgium appears to be one which may have direct bearing on the course of the mighty battle that is being waged over the battle line from Dixmude to Verdun. The progress made against the Germans on the first day of the offensive seems to indicate that it is possible for the Allies to press and outflank both German submarine bases, to the north, and the whole German line to the south.

The Text of Wilson's Answer to Germany

The Reply is Known to be Satisfactory to the British—How News is Received in London.

WANT GUARANTEES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—The text of the President's answer follows:

"Sir,—In reply to the communication of the German Government, dated the 12th instant, which you handed to me, I have the honour to request you to transmit the following answer:

"The unqualified acceptance by the present German Government and by a large majority of the Reichstag of the terms laid down by the President of the United States of America in his address to the Congress of the United States on the 8th of January, 1918, and in his subsequent addresses, justifies the President in making a frank and direct statement of his decision with regard to the communications of the German Government of the 8th and 12th of October, 1918.

"It must be clearly understood that the process of evacuation and the conditions of an armistice are matters which must be left to the judgment and advice of the military advisers of the Government of the United States and the allied Governments, and the President feels it his duty to say that no arrangements can be accepted by the Government of the United States which does not provide absolutely satisfactory safeguards and guarantees of the maintenance of the present military supremacy of the armies of the United States and the allies in the field.

"He feels confident that he can safely assume that nothing but this also will be the judgment and decision of the allied Governments.

"The President feels that it is also his duty to add that neither the Government of the United States nor, he is quite sure, the Governments with which the Government of the United States is associated as a belligerent will consent to consider an armistice so long as the armed forces of Germany continue the illegal and inhumane practises which they still persist in.

"At the very time that the German Government approaches the Government of the United States with proposals of peace its submarines are engaged in sinking passenger ships at sea, and not the ships alone, but the very boats in which their passengers and crews seek to make their way to safety; and in their present enforced withdrawal from Flanders and France the German armies are pursuing a course of wanton destruction, which has always been regarded as in direct violation of the rules and practices of civilized warfare. Cities and villages, if not destroyed, are being stripped of all they contain, not only, but often, of their very inhabitants. The nations associated against Germany cannot be expected to agree to a cessation of arms while acts of inhumanity, spoilation and desolation are being continued, which they justly look upon with horror and with burning hearts.

"It is necessary also, in order that there may be no possibility of misunderstanding, that the President should very solemnly call the attention of the Government of Germany to the language and plain intent of one of the terms of peace which the German Government has now accepted. It is contained in the address of the President delivered at Mount Vernon on the 4th of July last. It is as follows:

"'The destruction of every arbitrary power anywhere that can separately, secretly and of its single choice disturb the peace of the world; or, if it cannot be presently destroyed, at least its reduction to virtual impotency. The power which has hitherto controlled the German nation is of the sort here described. It is within the choice of the German nation to alter it.'

"The President's words just quoted naturally constitute a condition precedent to peace, if peace is to come by the action of the German people themselves. The President feels bound to say that the whole process of peace will in his judgment, depend upon the definiteness and the satisfactory character of the guarantees which can be given in this fundamental matter. It is indispensable that the Governments associated against Germany should know beyond a peradventure with whom they are dealing.

"The President will make a separate reply to the Royal and Imperial Government of Austria-Hungary.

"Accept, sir, the renewed assurances of my high consideration.

(Signed) "ROBERT LANSING."

"Mr. Frederick Oederlin,

"Charge d-Affaires, ad interum, in charge of German interests in the United States."

REPLY IS SATISFACTORY.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—President Wilson's reply to Germany is known to be eminently satisfactory to the British. The conditions he outlined coincide not only with the views of the British, but the other Allies as well. Lord Northcliffe's "Evening News" was the first paper to appear with Wilsons answer, which printed it in splashes of the biggest type, covering half a page.

WITHHOLD STATEMENT.

LONDON, Oct. 15.— The House of Commons assembles this afternoon.

BULLETIN FROM DR. C. H. AMYS, M.O.H.

The closing of the schools by the Medical Officer of Health, for three and one-half school days of this week gives eleven continuous days of closure. This in itself should give all sick teachers and pupils a chance to get well, and we trust that it will go a long way in mitigating the severity and extent of the disease.

TO AVOID INFLUENZA.

Avoid crowds indoors or on the streets; avoid theatres and other places of public assemblage. Avoid persons suffering with "colds." Avoid expectorating in public places, and also avoid visiting the sick. Cover the mouth and nose when coughing or sneezing.

Children will not be allowed in the picture theatres.

"Are Living in a Tragic Moment"

"One Lone Man Can Now Decide the Fate of the World."

(United Press.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

PARIS, Oct. 15. — France stands firm on the Berlin peace proposition. The people showed absolutely no excitement during the crisis of the correspondence with President Wilson. They went about their business precisely the same as usual. Newspapers were unanimous in the declaration that the Allies must obtain the absolute and unconditional surrender of Germany, Austria and Turkey and the fullest guarantees. "We are living in the most tragic moment of the history of all centuries," Deputy Paul Meunier said. "One lone man can now decide the fate of the world. This man is worthy of his unprecedented role. All humanity has its eyes fixed upon him."

La Presse declared, after referring to Wilson's diplomatic victory: "The floor no longer belongs to Wilson. It belongs to Generalissimo Foch, who by virtue of his office, represents all the General Staffs and all the Entente belligerents. One of two things is true —either Germany must recognize she is vanquished and accept the situation or else she will not recognize defeat but will attempt to escape by means of getting an armistice. This guarantee is necessary for the safety of France and the world."

Political Strike Has Broken Out

Says Final Act of the Revolution Has Begun.

(Special to The Examiner.)

ZURICH, Oct. 15.—A general political strike in Bohemia and Moravia began on Monday, according to despatches received here. There was a great manifestation in Prague in favour of independence. The deputies declared that the final act of the revolution had begun. Bohemia and Moravia are Austro-Hungarian provinces, the home of the Czecho-Slovaks, who have been recognized as one of the Allied nations. It has been the belief that the breaking up of the Austrian conglomeration of people and the revolt against the Hapsburgs and the Hohenzollerns might started in Bohemia and Moravia as disaffection has been stronger in those provinces than in other parts of the Central Powers.

THE FLOWER PROSPECT

Plenty of Cut Bloom is Promised at the Greenhouses of Messrs. Jordan Bros.

Messrs. Jordan Bros. inform the Examiner that they will have abundance of home grown cut flowers within a couple of weeks and it will not by any means be necessary to double the regular prices. They will have a good variety of bloom, and the prices will be according to quality.

ENGINEERS, ATTENTION!

All Stationary and Hoisting Engineers of the city are urgently requested to attend the regular meeting in the Labour Hall on Tuesday, 15th inst., at 8 p.m. sharp. Business of importance. Thos. Darrah, Pres. 3d-86

EYES RIGHT.

Every soldier in the Allied armies had their eyes examined before putting on the uniform. Every soldier who needs glasses wears them. If the government values its eyes, why shouldn't you. See Dr. Lacey, 410 George street.

TERRIBLE HOLACAUST

More Than Six Hundred Bodies Recovered From Devastated Area.

PROPERTY LOSS

DULUTH, Minn., Oct. 15. — More than six hundred bodies of people burned to death in forest fires which swept over north-eastern Minnesota last Saturday had been recovered today and it was expected this number would be increased by three hundred and possibly four hundred when the entire devastated district has been gone over.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—Property damage by the forest fires in Minnesota amounts to seventy-five millions, and the insurance will total twenty-three millions, according to the computations made to-day by insurance men here. Their estimate does not include standing timber and other property which was destroyed, which was uninsured, and the concensus of opinion in insurance circles is that the loss to insurance companies is the heaviest since the San Francisco fire. The losses to fire risk companies will be the greatest it was stated, on large number properties on which war values are high and on which several of the risk concerns carry lines of insurance in excess of a million dollars.

Dry Cleaning of the Streets Unsanitary

The paved streets in the business district this afternoon were heavy with the dust of three days, and the street sweepers with their brooms stirred up clouds that were swirled by the winds and automobiles into the throats of the crowds. Citizens pointed out that this was surely an unhealthy means of cleaning the streets, and would probably contribute to the epidemic that has not yet spent itself. At any time this dry cleaning of the pavements is not sanitary, but in these distressing days it should be immediately forbidden by the authorities.

COST OF NECESSARIES.

To Be Investigated Soon, Says Hon. T. W. Crothers.

OTTAWA, Oct. 12.—Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labour has announced that he intended to start an investigation shortly into the cost of a number of necessaries of life including textiles and boots and shoes. The inquiry will likely be by a commission.

A recent order-in-council gives municipalities power to appoint fair wage committees. However, obviously such committee cannot investigate the cost of woollens, shoes, etc., and it would not be just to manufacturers to have a dozen such committees of inquiry investigating the same subject. The proposed investigation to be initiated by Mr. Crothers would inquire into questions which could not well be probed by local committees.

There is a proposal in some quarters to have such a commission to investigate and to fix prices of necessaries of life made permanent at least until the end of the war. Such a commission would have similar authority to the railway commission.

A DANGEROUS PRACTICE.

Several motorists have complained to The Examiner that a number of car owners are travelling through the country at nights at dangerous speed, and with their headlights turned on to the fullest extent, the result being a glare that practically blinds the drivers of cars approaching from the other direction. There have been several narrow escapes from serious accidents as a result of this practice, and the other night a car was forced into the ditch by a fast travelling automobile with blinding headlights. Motorists should remember to dim their lights approaching another car, or there may be a serious accident to record.

THE VICTORY LOAN.

The 1917 Victory Loan not only enabled the Canadian Government to take care of the needs of the army, but also to make advances to various industries, with the result that there has been unprecedented prosperity. The 1918 Loan will have a similar result.

Last year's Victory Loan made it possible to finance the purchases of beef, bacon, cheese, wheat, hay, oats and munitions by Great Britain in this country. Great Britain could not pay cash for these articles and it was necessary for Canada to give credits to the Mother Country, and advance the money for the purchases. The 1917 Victory Loan enabled the Dominion to carry on this work.

This year's loan is absolutely needed. The probability of an early ending of the war does not lessen the need in any way and should not be accepted by any one as a reason for not subscribing to the new loan. Every cent of the money asked for will be required, and the national prosprity depends upon the amount that is subscribed by the Canadian people.

Victory for the Allies is in sight. Let Canada's 1918 Victory Loan be a fitting climax to the war efforts of the Dominion.

"ME, TOO?"

A bill has been introduced in the U. S. Senate, providing for the indefinite prolongation of the "daylight-saving" time schedule. It is not unlikely to be passed.

What is Canada to do about it?

Following the lead of the United States, our government decreed that the clocks of the Dominion must be put forward at the same hour that the clocks of the United States were put forward. But with a burst of independence, our government dared to fix the time—Oct. 31st—when "daylight-saving" should end in Canada for this year. In the States the time for putting the clock back was fixed for Sunday, October 27th, a more convenient date.

A week or so ago our government, by order in council, changed the Canadian date to Oct. 27th, so that the sun time should be restored on both sides of the border at the same hour, thus avoiding confusion.

And now, if this new bill should pass Congress, are we to have another order in council prolonging "daylight-saving" indefinitely for the sake of continental uniformity? Must Canada say "Me too" to whatever the legislators at Washington may see fit to enact?

Whatever may be done at Washington, let the Canadian "daylight-saving" programme, as amended, be carried into effect. This country is not yet an "adjunct" of Yankeedom.—Hamilton Herald.

HOW YOU CAN HELP.

No citizen of Peterboro would want to do anything to assist the spread of the influenza epidemic throughout the city; yet carelessly, or unconsciously, hundreds of people are helping to transfer the disease. All the precautions that the authorities are taking, wise as they doubtless are, will be set at naught if the people of Peterboro do not co-operate with Dr. Amys, and those who are associated with him, in the fight against the plague. The precaution that every citizen is asked to take is a simple one, but effective, merely to refrain from coughing or sneezing with the mouth and nose uncovered, for this is regarded as the most dangerous way of transmitting the disease germs, especially in crowded places, street cars, churches or wherever people gather in numbers.

The infective germs of the Spanish influenza, like those of other communicable diseases of the respiratory tract are found in discharges from the nose and mouth, and the influenza is spread by taking into the air passages germs which have been discharged by some one who has the disease. When a person coughs or sneezes, a fine spray of mucous is discharged from the mouth and nose and in this manner the germs are transferred.

The State of New York has just passed a most stringent law against open sneezing and coughing. There is a penalty of $500 for an infraction of this law, which has been placed on the statute books as a protection against such diseases as the so-called Spanish influenza.

If people would only realize the importance of covering the mouth and nose when either coughing or sneezing, the spread of the influenza and other similar ailments would be greatly checked.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The German offer to retire from France is a joke in view of the fact that the Kaiser's battered legions are being driven back at top speed.

Canada's Victory Loan for 1918 is absolutely needed. Don't let the early prospect of peace deceive anyone.

Peterboro wants an honour flag. Help to win it by subscribing to the Victory Loan.

Canada must do her own financing. The money must come from the people of Canada.

Strikers Will be Dealt With Government Plans to Take Action and Enforce Law.

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 15.—In spite of the protest of President Moore, of the Canadian Trades and Labour Congress against the government "work or fight" order-in-Council, declaring strikes and lockouts to be illegal, the Federal authorities have already taken preliminary steps to institute proceedings in the case of the shrike of freight handlers called at Calgary on Saturday last. The Department of Labour is not this morning in full possession of the facts connected with the strike. It is, however, believed that the men are still out, though they are willing to have their differences submitted to the Railway War Board, provided the railways agree to the reinstatement of employees. Proceedings are, however, pending, and action in the matter has been ordered by the Justice Department. According to the order, men of military age who violate the regulations automatically become soldiers and are subject without opportunity of exemption to the draft. Others are dealt with by the courts. The publication of the order in the Canada Gazette is considered to be sufficient notice of the fact that the law is in force.

TWO MEN KILLED IN A COLLISION

ONE MAN DIED FOLLOWING HIS REMOVAL TO NICHOLL'S HOSPITAL.

In a collision at the diamond at Central Ontario Junction on Saturday evening at 6 o'clock Michael Houlihan an engineer of the C. N. R. was fatally hurt and Fireman Lang of Havelock killed instantly. The C. N. R. train was standing on the track when a C.P.R. freight approaching the intersection saw it only in time to apply the brakes and dashed into it broadsides catching it between the cab and tender. The C.N.R. train folded in a V shape wreck killing Lang instantly and seriously injuring Houlihans feet A special brought Houlihan up to the city where Comstocks' ambulance me him and took him to Nichoffs Hospital. Dr. D. N. Carmichael was called but the injured man was unable to stand the operation which followed. The remains were sent to Trenton for interment.

None of the C.P.R. employees were injured.

TO FARMERS

The Government has sent out an appeal to the Canadian people to buy at home. Why? Because when we buy abroad more than we sell we have to pay a premium on the excess, in addition to the price of the goods. This is known as an adverse rate of exchange. We have bought four hundred million dollars' worth more from the United States than we have sold to it. The rate of exchange is 2 per cent. against us. In other words, we are paying 2 per cent. on four hundred millions of dollars, or eight million dollars, which means that if we owe a great deal of money for goods bought we have to pay extra for the privilege. If we keep this up Canada will bleed to death. Please inquire into this matter at once.

Signal Corps Has Busy Job in Fight

(By United Press.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 30 (By Mail)—The signal corps men had to do some fast work during the recent fighting to keep up with the infantry and to keep communications always open between headquarters and the villages newly captured where the doughboys were.

The signal corps was the connecting link between the infantry, artillery, ambulance service and headquarters. The signal corps did wonderful and lightning work. Every other department says so.

It's no cinch being the signal corps after a division that is continually gaining ground. As soon as the infantry makes a push you have to get a telephone line strung into the farthest ruin or woods or wheatfield, no matter how many German shells are spattering eclat over the area.

Then a bout the time you get a wire stretched along the ground and in working order, call up headquarters to tell them, "This is the new post at Squeedunk, give us a ring to see how she works," along comes another boche shell and cuts the communication. There's nothing to do but go out and find the cut and fix it, and probably more boche shells are trying to make more cuts in communications and even cut you off.

The signal corps had wires everywhere, in bushes, along the ground, on poles left by the boches, underground, through ruins. Headquarters say they never had such quick service, and they were never out of communication with regiments longer than the few minutes it took the signal corps man to inspect the wire and repair the break.

A signal corps man was stringing some wire across a wheatfield. "Some war this," he said. "I haven't had a sleep for more than two days. I suppose I'd fall asleep on the job if it weren't for these shells that come whistling along. Duck. There comes one!"

After it exploded, he said, "They kind of scared me at first. I thought every one was meant for me."

The Death of James Hanlon

Served on Council Board on Different Occasions.

In the passing away of James Hanlon whose funeral took place Sunday afternoon, from his late residence, 460 Driscoll Terrace, this community loses an old and valued citizen, the announcement of whose death will sadden many a home in this county.

Born in Otonabee where he lived all his life until a few years ago, when failing health induced him to move to city, Mr Hanlon was one of the best known men in the county, especially by the older residents. He served in the council and different positions of trust in Otonabee and gave much of his time and energy for the community.

Always kind and considerate his memory will be cherished by a large circle of friends. To his immediate neighbors and those who knew him best his name is linked with all that is kind and cheering and noble.

Mr Hanlon is survived by one sister, Miss Annie Hanlon, with whom he made his home, and two brothers, Richard of Sharon, Pa., and Thomas of Erie, Pa.

Cheap and Effective

Realizing that a bottle of mouth wash does not go very far and that those on the market are rather expensive when used frequently by several people, I have put up one that sells at one half or one third of the usual price, but one that will act as a powerful cleanser to the nose and throat.

This preparation is called Moncur's Antiseptic Mouth Wash and Nasal Douche. It sells at 25c. for a large sized bottle. Moreover we will refill these bottles for 20c. at Moncur Drug Store, 407 George street, Peterborough.

Boy Scouts Will Reforest Italy

By HENRY WOOD

(Written for the United Press.)

Rome, Sept. 18. (By Mail.)—To the Boy Scouts of Italy has just been intrusted the nation-wide propaganda for reforestation.

Results the boys may obtain probably will count as one of the most effective services ever rendered to a state by this organization, which has attained fully as great proportions in Italy as it has in the United States.

The boy scouts of Italy, beginning at once, will not only give their own help in the actual work of reforestation, but will inculcate it as one of the cardinal principals of their organization.

While reforestation long has been one of the vital problems facing Italy, it has become doubly important as a result of the past two years of war. Italy has no coal supply, and her railways, factories and industries generally are dependent upon coalfields of England and America.

Decreased importation of coal caused by the war created a coal shortage in Italy that was one of the important factors contributing to Italy's military disaster last fall. The shortage, which was at its acutest point immediately following the Italian retreat threatened to entail even still greater military disasters, and to prevent this the Italian government has recourse to its forests for sufficient fuel to keep the railways and munition factories going.

Olive wood was chosen as the best wood fuel for railways, and hundreds of thousands of Italian olive trees have been cut down. Burning of the olive wood resulted in the ruin of hundreds of locomotives and burning of thousands of acres of crops along the railways, but it tided over the situation until the allies arranged for larger importations.

Italy still is receiving hundreds of thousands of tons of coal less than her minimum needs and as a consequence she is obliged to continue obliteration of her forests with the certainty that in the end she must suffer from it all the evils that have been sustained in China, the United States and other countries by the denuding of the forests.

Every railway station in Italy is a centre of great deposits of firewood which Italy is holding for emergencies should her coal supply be again diminished. Hundreds of thousands of soldiers are cutting down wood and hauling it to the railway centres.

WAS HARDLY ABLE TO HOBBLE AROUND

Had Suffered From Rheumatism For Years—Tanlac Restores Health.

"Before my wife started taking Tanlac she was so awfully crippled up with rheumatism that at times she could hardly hobble around," said William Cooper, of 21 Crowyn Ave., Toronto, the other day.

"For several years," he continued, "my wife was in a badly rundown condition and suffered terribly. She had little appetite, and did not relish the little she did eat. Her limbs would swell to almost twice their normal size with rheumatism and would be so painful she would almost cry out at a touch. She was so nervous that the least little noise would startle her and she got very little sleep at night. She complained of having pains all through her body, and although I would rub her with liniments and she took all kinds of medicines nothing did her any good.

"I heard so much about Tanlac that I got her a bottle and could see quite an improvement soon after she started taking it. Although she has taken only two bottles so far that swelling is rapidly going out of her limbs she says they don't hurt near as much as they did. She rests better at night too, and her general health is so much better in every way that she looks like a different person.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd. In Havelock by A. C. Denike. In Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd. In Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter. In Gelert by A. J. Scott. In Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Spanish Influenza May be Prevented

It is a Duty One Owes to One's Self and to the Community.

The difficulty with this form of influenza is that a very mild case may, by contagion, produce in another individual the very worst form of the disease. That is, a person, who seems to have but a slight cold, may be the Carrier of the Germs.

Those, who are liable to be exposed to the Contagion, should, both for themselves and the sake of their families, take every precaution to avoid contracting it.

The mouth should be cleansed once or twice a day with an antiseptic wash and the throat gargled with the same.

Also one of Moncur's Capsules for the Prevention of Spanish Influenza should be taken each morning. These Capsules strengthen the system so that the Germs, even though the person is frequently exposed to the contagion, are quite unable to gain a foothold.

However, they are not recommended to cure the disease but only to prevent one from taking it, which they will do if they are taken before the person is already infected. If the prevalent Epidemic strikes Peterborough in full force, these Capsules will save a lot of people from sickness and also prove an enemy to the Undertaker.

GERMANS FEEL LACK OF WAR MATERIAL

French Capture Orders Showing Handicaps Under Which Their Army Works.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES —Throughout the front the defense is being strained to the breaking point. Captured German orders illustrate the handicaps under which the enemy is labouring. One refers to the shortage of horses for artillery, and directs local commanders to utilize for batteries horses from the transport service, even at the risk of interfering with the latter's efficiency. Another refers to the jamming of machine guns due to substitution of iron for copper cartridge cases and the inferior quality of "ersatz" grease, wherewith the guns are lubricated. A third insists on the absolute necessity of a better liaison between the artillery and infantry to avoid cases where "artillery fire has been too short — that is, fell upon our own trenches—throughout the whole day, despite the remonstrances of our infantry."

Two others contain instructions for special measures against tanks and artificial fogs, thus proving their efficiency in the recent fighting. The most numerous of all are injunctions in the most stringent terms to hold on to every foot of ground and maintain the morale of the soldiers by every means possible. Elaborate "schools of patriotic instruction" have been installed in every German Army, with eloquent spellbinders from the universities and other branches of civil life, appointed to galvanize the waning spirit of the troops. In short, everything denotes that the German leaders realize the imminence of collapse and are striving vainly to avert it.

MOTHER! GIVE CHILD "SYRUP OF FIGS" IF TONGUE IS COATED

IF CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK, BILIOUS, CLEAN LITTLE LIVER AND BOWELS.

Children love this "fruit laxative" and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty its bowels, and the result is ,they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, the stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally the breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach ache or diarrhoea. Listen, mother! See if the tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs,' and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mother. give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

Here's Where Part of Your Big Dollar Went

(By United Press.)

Paris, Oct 1. (By Mail.)—The vast and varied activities of the American Red Cross in relieving suffering in the war zone is outlined in the latest report of the civil affairs department of the organization.

During the month of June, the department rendered aid to 412,563 civilians, exclusive of the work among allied soldiers. Of this huge army, 226,638 were refugees from the war-stricken regions In the early days of the German offensive, thousands of refugee passed through Paris daily, most of them practically destitute and suffering from hardships of the hurried flight American Red Cross emergency committees met them at the stations and supplied aid A large percentage of the refugees so assisted were children.

The supplies distributed by all the bureaus during the month include 296,710 garments, 56,847 pairs of shoes,, 17,222 articles of furniture, 60,078 articles of bedding and household linen, 668,672 pounds of food, 35,370 yards of cloth and 4,287 articles of hospital equipment and supplies.

Some of the other activities in succoring the war-stricken include 17 civilian hospitals with 1,698 beds, also a new hospital for soldiers who have lost limbs. Three refugee homes are housing 1,500 homeless children from the invaded territory. In Paris alone 32,000 school children are procuring supplimentary food for noon-time luncheons from the Red Cross. THE TEXT OF WILSON'S ANSWER and it was considered practically certain that Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, would be asked to make a statement on the diplomatic and military situation. It was believed unlikely that he would comply, in view of the pending inter-Allied consultation. Premier Lloyd George will probably make such a statement within a few days. In this connection the most radical members of the House, it is believed, may attempt to start a peace debate. If they do so, the move will most certainly be squelched. No debate on peace is wanted just now. It is significant that the European allies have so far not joined President Wilson in any formal declaration of their war aims. They perferred to wait until the fortunes of war were very strongly in their favour.

THE FUTURE.

Members of the British Cabinet, it is understood, are determined to exact reparation from Germany that must include compensation for all damage done by submarines to merchantmen. Also it is stated "there must be no doubt about deciding the future of the German colonies in the peace negotiations on the basis of self-determination and the free choice of the people who live in the colonies." When Lloyd George makes his address to Parliament he is expected to discuss the German colonies situation. The Allied governments it was learned, must be guided altogether by the advice of their Field Commander with regard to the wisdom of granting an armistice and the terms under which hostilities may be temporarily suspended. Any armistice, it is agreed, must be on terms under which it would be absolutely impossible for the Germans to imperil the Allied armies after the armistice ends.

TORTURING, ITCHING ECZEMA

Mrs. J. B. Horth, Pascebiac, Bonaventure Co., Que., writes:—"Thanks to Dr. Chase's Ointment I have been completely cured of that horrible disease, eczema. I was held as if in prison from going among other people, for I was ashamed of the raw, flaming sores. Doctors could do nothing for me and I was almost desperate with suffering when I began to use Dr. Chase's Ointment. In one month I was completely cured and think that this was little short of a miracle."

Ambulance Driver Cool in a Traffic Tangle on George St.

Only the cool and clever driving of Mr. John Comstock prevented a serious accident on Saturday night in a traffic predicament that suddenly confronted him while speeding up George street with an emergency ambulance case from the C.P.R. station for the Nicholls hospital. At the Hunter street crossing about eight o'clock Traffic Officer Lawrence, facing the east, indicating a right of way for the approaching ambulance, and held up the vehicles from the east and west. Ignoring the officer's signal, Tony Minnecola, 459 McDonnel street, a boy on a bicycle drove past him from the west and turned into George street so close that the officer almost succeeded in catching him. Minnecola, instead of keeping close to the right hand curb as he cycled north, turned on to the street car tracks The ambulance swung to the west side to avoid the boy. In front of the Oak Hall store one car was standing close to the curb and another was coming south almost in the centre of the street to pass the standing car In this dilemma, Mr. Comstock apparently chose the least of the dangers of the situation and drove between the two automobiles without appreciably reducing his speed. Young Minnecola's bicycle was struck a glancing blow that sent him spinning uninjured and the ambulance continued up George street snatching every second for its injured charge who died on Sunday from the effects of the injuries received in the accident at the Central Ontario junction with the C. P. R. on Saturday afternoon.

GIRLS' PAINS AND WEAKNESS

Yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands of Girls Benefited

St. Louis, Mo.—"When I was only fifteen years old mother had to put me to bed every month for two days because I suffered such pain. I also suffered from a weakness and mother took me to a doctor but he did not help me. Finally mother made me take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has made me strong and healthy. So when mother or I hear any woman complaining we tell them about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it did for me."—Mrs. JOHN FRAME, 1121 N. 18th St., St. Louis, Mo.

Girls who suffer as Mrs. Frame did should not hesitate to give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial, as the evidence that is constantly being published proves beyond question that this grand old remedy has relieved more suffering among women than any other medicine.

For confidential advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of their forty years experience is at your service.

ing to figures, Italy heads but rationing there extends only to sugar and bread (with macaroni, rice and maize flour.)

These conditions are not comparable with those in the central empire, where almost every food is rationed in very limited amounts, and where in some cases the rationed quantities cannot be obtained. The cost of living for those who can manage to give exhorbitant prices for ellicit food must be incredibly great.

Thousands Rendered Homeless as Result of Forest Fires

Least Five Hundred Persons Perished—Timber Loss Heavy—Millions of Dollars' Worth of Property Went Up in Smoke.

DULUTH, Minn., Oct. 15. — With probably 500 persons dead, thousands homeless, and without clothing, and with property damage counting far into millions of dollars, whole sections of northern Wisconsin and Minnesota timber land, are smouldering, fire-stricken areas, with only the charred ruins of abandoned, depopulated towns to accentuate the general desolation.

The bodies of 75 victims lie in Duluth morgues. Hundreds more along the roads leading to Duluth and Superior lay where they fell when overtaken by the fire.

Twelve thousand homeless and penniless refugees, all in need, more or less, of medical attention, are quartered in hospitals, churches, schools, private homes, and in the armory here, while doctors, and nurses sent from surrounding communities attend them, and nearly every able-bodied man in the city has been conscripted to fight the flames, which now are reported to be dying away.

Reports that the holocause resulted from the work of enemy agents were circulated here tonight. Definite confirmation was not available, but incendiaries were driven away from a local shipyard when the fires in Duluth and Superior were burning at their height, according to F. J. Longren, fire marshal, and other city and State officials.

Reports reaching here by courier told of a widespread destruction, but it was evident that in most cases the fury of the flames were spent. Duluth and Superior are in no further danger. Virginia is safe and Brainerd was untouched. However, peat bog fires now are said to menace the latter city. Bermidji reported only a small loss.

The greatest loss of life and property damage is believed to have occurred in the Clouquet region, where a number of towns have been destroyed and all semi-rural settlements virtually wiped out.

A special train of 20 coaches brought 1,500 refugees from Cloquet and Carleton. They confirm reports that many persons lost their lives in those towns.

To Show Wounded Men Way to First Relief

(By United Press.)

Paris, Oct. 1 (By Mail.)—To guide the "walking wounded" back from the front to the first available aid station, the Red Cross is furnishing the army with thousands of small cloth signs. Medical officers have learned that many wounded suffer great hardships during severe fighting because of their inability to find the nearest dressing station.

In some cases men have become lost and wandered around for hours. The Red Cross markers will be distributed following each advance, and tacked to trees, posts or any conspicuous object by Red Cross men and stretcher bearers. The markers are of red cloth with large Red Cross and arrow to indicate the direction of the nearest dressing station.

The regular monthly executive meeting of the local Red Cross Society was held Thursday afternoon, October 10th, in the Public Library. While the reports of the various committees showed that the work in all departments was being vigorously carried on, the fact that our men at the front are engaged in the present tremendous drive makes it imperative that still greater efforts should be put forth by our workers at home.

DON'T FORGET GUM IN YANK'S COMFORT KIT

(By United Press.)

AN AMERICAN HOSPITAL IN FRANCE, Sept. 13. (By Mail.)—When you are making up comfort kits for soldiers at the front, have you often wondered just what is most needed and what is extra among the doughboy's "finds" in the bag?

Here is what they have found most essential and useful:

A safety razor, shaving brush and soap, tooth brush and paste, chewing gum, playing cards, packages of cigarettes and a can of tobacco. Towel wash rag, soap, hard candy or chocolate.

Asked what he thought most important a doctor here replied, "Chewing gum." Often patients cannot smoke, especially gas cases, or eating is difficult. Gum does them lots of good.

A TERRIFIC EXPLOSION

Trenton Workmen Have a Narrow Escape—Many Homeless.

TRENTON, Oct. 15.—Trenton and surrounding district were rocked to their foundations as if by an earthquake early last evening, when a series of explosions occurred at the plant of the British Explosives, Limited, which is located here. Only one man was known to have been killed, according to a statement made by Mayor Ireland at a late hour last night, and few people are believed to have been hurt. The T.N.T. and gun cotton plants were known to have been destroyed, but the remainder of the buildings, of which there are about one hundred, it is thought escaped serious damage. Mayor Ireland said that the cause of the explosion was attributed to a fire which commenced in one of the buildings. The amount of damage could not be estimated to-night by the company officials.

A later report says that although much damage was done and hundreds of people out of work and many homeless, there appear to have been no deaths as result of series of explosions at the British Explosives and other works last night. The work of restoration has already commenced.

EMPLOYEES ESCAPE

The first explosion occurred at 7.10. It was only small and local, but fortunately it served as a warning to the night shift employees, who made hasty exits, running in all directions seeking places of safety. Within a few minutes twelve or fourteen louder explosions followed in quick succession reducing the two buildings to ruins. Trenton itself is located a distance of about two miles from the plant, and it was because of this fact that the damage to the homes and factories in the centre of the town was not greater.

When the first explosion occurred people rushed from their homes to the streets in the wildest excitement. Great anxiety was shown on every hand by the relatives desirous of learning the fate of husbands and sons employed in the plant. They were all clamoring for information, but so far as could be learned at midnight, only the one person was missing, although even his name was not available. While the windows were all broken by concussion, it is not believed that the damage to the buildings in the centre of the town will be great.

Debris from the plants was thrown high in the air by the force of the explosion. One carriage was thrown a considerable distance, but fortunately without doing any damage.

EXPLOSIONS HEARD MILES

The detonations were heard for miles around, and assistance was immediately offered by both Belleville and Kingston. The latter city offered to send at once a trainload of supplies and a number of doctors and nurses, but Mayor Ireland, while appreciating the proffered assistance, said the local hospital would be able to care for all the injured. The fright occasioned to the people in the town, however, by the fear of further explosions resulted in many refugees hurrying going to Brighton, and for a time the road was black with people, both in vehicles and on foot.

About 2,500 people are employed in the different departments of the British Explosives, Limited, and probably most of them will be thrown out of work, at least temporarily. The majority of men employed in the plant are experts in their own trades, and they come from all parts of Canada and the United States. Because of this fact they besieged the local telegraph offices and swamped them with messages.

OFFICIAL REPORT

OTTAWA, Oct. 15.—An official report on the Trenton munitions explosion will be issued by the Imperial Munitions board today it is stated meantime, however it is stated that no loss of life resulted from the explosion. The Tri Nitro Toluol plant and Gun Cotton lines were however destroyed. Steps are being taken to restore the plant at the earliest possible date and to recommence operations.

RAGTIME TUNE IS FINE MEDICINE FOR YANKS

AN AMERICAN HOSPITAL IN FRANCE, Sept. 12. (By Mail.)—Ragtime music is great medicine, so they've discovered in one hospital where a lotof Americans are recovering. In this hospital they organized a jazz band to play on state occasions. Then some one had the bunch to try ragtime on the patients.

They have one ward at this hospital on a pavillion that used to be part o fa cassino. It's large, airy and open and was meant for a music hall. The sergeant began arranging things for the evening, and this included escorting a piano to the ward.

Patients' interests began to pick up and here and there came, "Hey, Sarge, what's up this evening? Let us in on it."

"Nothing doing. You'll see when the time comes." And the sergeant went about his work.

Just before dusk, the jazz band slipped in quietly, and began to play "Waikiki." Then anther snappy dance piece.

Here and there the bed covers began to move as a foot kept time, and heads began to crane out of pillows with grins on them, many from patients who hadn't budged or shown any life at all for a long time.

Next, some were sitting up, and before long more were, men who'd not been off their backs since they arrived. Shoulders were swaying and everyone was happy.

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Says we can't look or feel right with the system full of poisons.

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which if not eliminated every day, become food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisons and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood, causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Governor-General's Son-in-Law A Victim of Spanish Influenza

Reports From Ontario Towns Show That the Epidemic of Influenza With Pneumonia In Its Wake Has Not Yet Abated.

OTTAWA, Oct. 14.—Captain Angus Mackintosh, son-in-law of his Excellency the Governor General died in Washington last night of pneumonia, following Spanish influenza.

He first came to the capital as an aide-de-camp at Rideau Hall to the Duke of Connaught in 1915, and remained until the present Governor-General came to Canada. While here as A.D.C. he met his wife, Lady Maud Cavendish, eldest daughter of the Duke of Devonshire, and the acquaintance ripened into a charming romance, and they were married in November, 1917, less than a year ago. A baby girl was born to them a few weeks ago in Montreal, and the young widow will now have the deepest sympathy of all Canada in her irreparable loss in the death of her young and gallant husband.

As Capt. Mackintosh had been shot in the lungs during the famous Mons battle he was naturally a bad subject for pneumonia, and following a gallant struggle for life he died on Sunday afternoon at four o'clock in Washington.

Angus Mackintosh was the eldest son of the Mackintosh, and would have succeeded his father as head of that famous Scotch clan, but death has willed it otherwise, and at the early age of thirty he has passed away

Sad News for Elm Street Home

One Son Killed in Action and Another Wounded—Brother-in-law Dead From Pneumonia.

Shortly after Rev. Father Phelan had arrived to break the news to Mrs. E. Callahan, 497 Elm street, that her son, Herbert Callahan, had been killed on October 1 in France, news arrived that a second son, Pte. Clare Callahan, had been wounded with a bullet in his shoulder, and later the news came that Victor Grady, a brother-in-law of Pte. Clare Callahan, had died of pneumonia in Halifax.

The late Herbert Callahan enlisted four years ago this month in Brockville, with the 156th Battalion, and after service in training camps in Canada, went overseas. To go to France with the Princess Pats he later reverted to the ranks from Sergt.-Major. A letter received to-day stated that he would be home in a month.

Pte. Clare Callahan enlisted in London, Ontario, and was also in the Princess Pats when wounded. A third son of Mrs. Callahan, Sergt. James Callahan, is in England at present working on aeroplanes.

HONEYWELL MEETINGS ARE POSTPONED

At a meeting of the Executive committee in charge of the Union Evangelistic Campaign held last evening, it was decided not to hold any services this week. Members of the committee who had consulted with Dr. Amys, the Medical Health Officer, were informed by him that the committee was at liberty to hold meetings this week as had been planned, and also that the moving picture shows and theatres would be allowed to operate. At the same time Dr. Amys said that he believed that it would be in the interests of the public if neither the meetings of the evangelistic campaign or for amusement purposes were held, and that he would probably issue a warning to the public to that effect.

When these facts were laid before the meeting last evening the view was unanimously taken that the best interests of the public must first be considered. While heavy expenses have been incurred in connection with the campaign, and which it was expected would be wiped out by the offerings during the first part of the campaign, it was felt that such considerations should not be considered in a time like this when the public welfare is concerned. The committee decided that in view of the fact that the moving picture shows and theatres would probably be continued this week as usual, the public should know why they had decided not to hold meetings this week.

WEDDING BELLS

A pretty wedding was solemnized in the George street Methodist church on Monday at one o'clock when Miss Lillian Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hill, 621 Union Street, was united in marriage to Mr. F. Winter Runnels, also of this city, the ceremony being performed by Rev A. J. Thomas.
The bride was attired in her travelling costume of brown gabardine and back picure hat and also wore a corsage bouquet of Ophelia roses. The wedding march was played by Mr. J. H. Renwick and during the signing of the register, Miss Rena Hill of Orillia, cousin of the bride, rendered "O fair, O sweet, and Holy" in pleasing style.
Among the many gifts received by the bride was a handsome oak clock presented by the office staff of the De Laval Co., and a beautiful vase and bon-bon dish, of cut glass, from the George street choir. Mr. and Mrs. Runnels left for a short honeymoon and will reside in the city on their return.

WEST—SPENCE.

Spence, C.E., and Mrs. Spence, 372 Downie street, and J. Eversley West, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. West, Hastings.
The bride, who was unattended, entered the church, which had been brilliantly decorated in autumn flowers and leaves by her many friends, under the escort of her father. She was charmingly attired in her travelling suit of African brown gabardine with a small hat to match, and wore a corsage bouquet of sunset roses.
The ceremony was performed by Rev. Canon Davidson, and Mr. R. J. Devey played the wedding march.
Immediately after the wedding Mr. and Mrs. West left for the G. T. R. station, where the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E., of which the bride has been an active member, gave them a hearty send off amid showers of confetti.
After a short honeymoon they will leave for Smooth Rock Falls, where Mr. West is electrical and Power Engineer for the Mettagami Pulp and Paper Mills.

Ex-Officers Flocking to Join New Russian Army

Many Escape Through Bolshevist Lines and Enlist in New Force as Privates—But Most of the Peasants Are Apathetic—Holding Long Lines Against Bolsheviki.

VILLAGERS "NEUTRAL"

VAGA, Northern Russia.— Villages behind the Russo-Allied lines are full of young peasants too disinterested in the fighting to enlist. From all Northern Russia, however, other young men, principally former Russian officers, permit no obstacle to prevent their joining the new army. This type of men is filled with enthusiasm for the new Russia, but the people of many villages callously meet the plea to enlist.

In many villages almost unanimous sentiment against the Bolsheviki has been found by the correspondent. He has also found that the people hate Germany and appreciate the aid that is being given by the Allies. The peasants are willing to fight the Bolsheviki in the vicinity of their own villages, but not elsewhere. A group of young men in one village naively explained that they were "neutral."

Another village group would enlist only if they were mobilized, but "Why should Ivan fight while Peter sits at home by the stove keeping warm?" they said. Steps are under way to bring about a mobilization to educate these peasants to the necessity of forming an army.

"It is by no means a hopeless task," an officer working among the peasants told the correspondent; "but it takes time. In the meanwhile the thin line of the Allies and Russian volunteers are holding a territory larger than France and Germany combined against superior numbers of Bolshevist troops."

The story of one company of former Russian officers, many of whom are now privates, rivals that of the French Foreign Legion. Nearly half of them escaped through the Bolshevist line to enlist. Two of them, once Captains, arrived recently. They fled from Moscow late in August, when threatened with death by the Bolsheviki. They procured bogus papers and reached a point near Vologda. Then they walked 200 miles through the swamps and forests to the allied lines.

The majority of this company received the highest decoration from the Emperor for their bravery in the fighting against the Germans. They have stripped these from their uniforms and are pledged to wear no decorations until Russia is redeemed. They have been, at their own request, in the forefront in nearly all the fighting along the Dvina River.

GIRLS! HAVE A MASS OF BEAUTIFUL HAIR, SOFT, GLOSSY, WAVY

A SMALL BOTTLE DESTROYS DANDRUFF AND DOUBLES BEAUTY OF YOUR HAIR.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and ahve an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter for a few cents and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

SIGNIFICANT POINT IN GERMAN REPLY

Omission of the Word "Imperial" is Unprecedented.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—One of the most significant points in Germany's reply to President Wilson is that it is the first important German diplomatic communication since the German Empire was proclaimed at Versailles in 1871, which has not spoken in the name of the Imperial German Government.

"The German Government," is an absolutely new phrase, and the omission of the word "Imperial" is unprecedented. Whether this means catering to President Wilson's views or whether it means change in Germany remains to be seen."

Mr. Maxwell Suffered Years With Pimples Healed by Cuticura

"I suffered for years with pimples and blackheads on my face. The latter one could hardly get a pin point between, and the former itched and burned so that I could tear my flesh to pieces. I could not sleep at night, and my face was just a mass of eruptions.

"I decided to give Cuticura Soap and Ointment a trial, and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed." (Signed) R. B. Maxwell, Upper Sackville, N. S., August 10, 1917.

You may think that because Cuticura does such wonderful work in soothing and healing severe itching and burning eczemas it is not adapted to the gentle uses of the toilet. On the contrary, that is just where it is most effective in preventing these serious skin troubles.

DON'TS FOR GUNNERS

Every year the hunting season brings with it its spoils in the form of human sacrifices. For the benefit of gunners who are going after game this fall the following list of don'ts is given:

Don't take any chances. The function of a shotgun is to scatter shot, but be very careful where you scatter it.

Dont blaze away in haste and don't get excited. Many a hunter has filled his favourite dog full of lead just because he was over-anxious.

Don't point a gun at any person in jest. It is always the gun that "we didn't know was loaded" that goes off and does the damage. The only time to point a gun is when you intend to kill.

Dont take every rustle of a bush or a bough to be a sure indication of game. Remember some times an inquisitive person has a penchant for being in strange places.

Dont carry a loaded gun through the street or on cars ,trains, automobiles or any other kind of vehicle.

Don't get excited and shoot without making sure your object is game. Don't shot until you see the rabbit, and then be sure that he is clear of both man and dog.

Don't drag a gun under a fence with the muzzle pointed toward you.

Don't climb over a fence with your gun or lean it against a tree until you get over. Put it through the fence and on the ground, business end before.

Don't hunt with anyone that you know to be careless. Carelessness with three and a quarter drams of powder behind and one and one-eighth ounces to shot is inviting "sure death."

Don't load your gun until you are actually ready or business. At all other times it should be empty. Keep your finger off the trigger until you are looking down the barrel at your game.

Don't rest on the muzzle of your gun.

Don't violate the game laws. It is not only criminal but sometimes very costly.

Don't "hog" all the game. Leave some for the next fellow.

Don't rest the muzzle of your gun on the ground. A gun muzzle clogged with dirt or mud is a dangerous proposition.

UNIQUE PENALTY.

A short time ago a young man in San Francisco was haled before the United States Commissioner charged with having attacked the Liberty Loan and with having upheld German militarism.

He was tried and found guilty.

It was generally presumed, of course, that the best the young man could hope for in the event of conviction would be a term in prison.

But the court pursued a different course.

He asked the errant youth if he had ever read Hale's "The Man Without a County," and received a negative reply.

Whereupon he ordered the defendant to procure a copy of the book, read it and become so thoroughly familiar with its contents as to be able to appear before the court again on Aug. 16 and retell in all of its pathetic details the story of the poor, unpatriotic, miserable, and latterly penitent Philip Nolan."

At the appointed time the lad came back—came back so full of emotions inspired by a study of the story that at times he broke down and wept as he reeled it off, episode after episode, before the listening Judge and courtroom attaches.

Then he was permitted to go hence with his liberty fully restored.

And it is a safe assumption that he left the courtroom that day with a far more wholesome respect for the law, for democratic institutions, for the flag—a better and a more partiotic citizen by far than even half a lifetime in prison could have made him.—Atlanta Constitution.

GRAIN MARKET

TORONTO, Oct. 15.—Announcement that U. S. Government would probably be in the market for large quantities of corn during this month and November, had the effect of sending prices up with a rush, the advance reaching three or four cents on all the options. Oats were influenced by the action of corn, while cash prices were similarly affected. Should the report prove correct that the Government is to become a heavy purchaser, it is altogether likely that the Government will also have something more to say as to the price they will pay for it, and "price fixing" will probably be the next step.

DROPPED THE CRUMBS.

GARRY, Ind., Oct. 12.—If Edward Johnson, a munition worker of this city, hadn't gone a-courting with a couple of apple pies he might still be living. As it is, "Willie" Thompson, his fiancee, has confessed to the police that she shot and killed him in her home, 1533 Washington St. She said he sat down on the sofa to eat the pies and spilled crumbs on the floor. She remonstrated, she says, he abused her and she shot him through the heart.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards— Receipts today, 45 cars, with 665 cattle, 124 calves, 505 hogs, and 511 sheep and lambs.

The market continues very weak and draggy, with prices on the common class of cattle 50c. lower han last week. There is a fair demand for the few choice butcher cattle coming in, and the packers are taking good heavy steers, but for the rest of the stuff coming in, both Western and Ontario, there is a very slow demand, and a lot of cattle are held over.

There is a poor demand this week for stockers and feeders.

Sheep and lambs dull.

Hogs are quoted by the packers 50c. lower than last week, at $18.25 fed.

NUXATED IRON

"Say, Doctor, This Prescription Works Like Magic."

Physician Says Nuxated Iron Quickly Puts Astonishing Strength and Energy Into the Veins of Men and Brings Roses to the Cheeks of Nervous, Run-Down Women.

Ask the first hundred strong, healthy people you meet to what they owe their strength and see how many reply "Nuxated Iron." Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital, says: "Thousands of people suffer from iron deficiency but do not know what to take. There is nothing like organic iron—Nuxated Iron, to enrich the blood, make beautiful, healthy women, and strong, vigorous iron men. To make absolutely sure that my patients get real organic iron and not some form of the metallic variety, I always prescribe Nuxated Iron in its original packages. Nuxated Iron will increase the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down folks in two weeks' time in many instances."

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE: Nuxated Iron recommended above by Dr. Sullivan can be obtained from any good druggist with or without a physician's prescription on an absolute manufacturers' guarantee of success or money refunded.

This Is Better Than Laxatives

One NR Tablet Each Night For A Week Will Correct Your Constipation and Make Constant Dosing Unnecessary. Try It.

Poor digestion and assimilation mean a poorly nourished body and low vitality. Poor elimination means clogged bowels, fermentation, putrifaction and the formation of poisonous gases which are absorbed by the blood and carried through the body.

The result is weakness, headaches, dizziness, coated tongue, inactive liver, bilious attacks, loss of energy, nervousness, poor appetite, impoverished blood, sallow complexion, pimples, skin disease, and often times serious illness.

Ordinary laxatives, purges and cathartics—salts, oils, calomel and the like—may relieve for a few hours, but real, lasting benefit can only come through use of medicine that tones up and strengthens the digestive as well as the eliminative organs.

Get a 25c box of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) and take one tablet each night for a week. Relief will follow the very first dose, but a few days will elapse before you feel and realize the fullest benefit. When you get straightened out and feel just right again you need not take medicine every day—an occasional NR Tablet will then keep your system in good condition and you will always feel your best. Remember, keeping well is easier and cheaper than getting well.

Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) are sold, guaranteed and recommended by your druggist.

FEARFUL RUTH WILL NOT COME, HER AUNT SENDS A CHECK

CHAPTER XIII

Ruth could scarcely think of any thing else but what she would do to make the old living room lovely. She was absent minded for days after she received her aunt's letter, and Brian often spoke twice before he received an answer.

Two or three times she had started to discuss her ideas with her husband, but he seemed so little interested she had desisted. To tell the truth, Brian Hackett was so comfortable, so happy in that he had won Ruth, that he cared little for extraneous things. Their home was —to his mind — comfortable; although it seemed so poor to Ruth. She had made it as attractive as possible, and it was so different, in its plain restfulness, from his own home, that it satisfied him. Brian was an adorable lover, but as a husband he was far too easy-going to satisfy an ambitious woman, a woman accustomed to luxuries, which she felt, he might in a measure supply if he tried hard enough.

"When does your aunt want you to come?" Brian asked.

"Oh, she hasn't said! When she gets ready to have the work done, I suppose."

"What am I to do while you are away?"

"Why, I hadn't thought of that! I should sleep home, if I were you, and get my meals wherever I wanted to."

"Um"—

"I'll get Mrs. Murphy to make your bed and keep the house dusted."

"Ruth, I may as well tell you before you plan any further, I don't see how I am to manage it—your going, I mean. Ever since you spoke of it I have wondered how I could get the money But it costs us every cent I earn, to live. It will take fifteen dollars, at least, for such a trip, I am afraid, dear, you will have to give it up. I'm sorry, but I don't see how I can manage it, unless," he added whimsically, "I turn second story man."

"Oh, Brian, I must go!—think what Aunt would believe if I didn't!"

"What do you mean?"

"Why, she would say right away you couldn't afford to let me—and"—Ruth stopped short. Never had she confessed to Brian her aunt's feeling that he could not support her; that she would miss the luxuries to which she had been accustomed as soon as the newness wore off.

"And what? Why don't you finish?"

"Oh, nothing! only I would hate to have her think we are so poor I couldn't visit her."

"I would manage it, dear, if I could, don't you know that? But unfortunately Uncle Sam doesn't allow me to coin the long green."

"Never mind, Brian, I know you do all you can." But in spite of all she could do, in spite of her love for her husband, her faith in him, Ruth could not help a sinking feeling as she wondered if he never would be able to let her go home. Repapering, a better apartment, all such things receded before the thought that she could not visit her home ,she so loved whenever she wanted to. Her aunt had told her she need expect nothing from her—told it in such a manner Ruth knew she meant it. But at same time, Mrs. Clayborne had taken it for granted that Ruth would often visit her and had so expressed herself.

Ruth said nothing more, neither did Brian again mention the subject. But while Brian dismissed it from his mind, there was scarcely an hour of the day that Ruth did not think of it. That she did not long to go home. She wanted to see her aunt, her second mother, and she wanted her mammy. She longed to be petted and made of. To sleep once more in her dainty chamber, to have her bath drawn, her breakfast served to her daintily as it used to be. She longed to see what she could do with the old living room that had not been redecorated when the rest of the house had been done over. It had enormous possibilities; it was so big, and her aunt would let her do as she wished.

But of all this she breathed not a word to Brian. She loved him dearly, was happy in her love. Even the lure of all she had given up, could make no difference in that. But, oh, how she did want to have both! Brian and all he meant to her; and money to do, and live, as she had been accustomed.

Then one morning came another letter from her aunt. When she opened it, at the breakfast table, a thin, blue paper fluttered to the floor. With a little squeal of delight she picked it up. It was a check for seventy-five dollars.

"Your expense money" her aunt wrote, "If I engaged a professional decorator I should have to pay his expenses down here. As I like your work better than that of any professional I happen to know,I am sending you your expenses."

Ruth jumped up from the table and did a little dance around the room

"Now I can go! and I am so glad!"

"Yes, you can go. But I can't pretend to be glad. I shall be horribly lonely. Then—I hate to think your aunt had to send you the money for your fare."

"Yes, I know Brian! But I couldn't have gone if she hadn't, you said so yourself. But don't look so forlorn. I'll stay home if you want me to."

"No, go along!" but Brian felt like a martyr, just the same, and Ruth knew it.

To-morrow—Ruth is Very Happy to be Back in Her Southern Home.

Try Magnesia For Stomach Trouble

It Neutralizes Stomach Acidity, Prevents Food Fermentation, Sour Gassy Stomachs and Acid Indigestion.

Doubtless, if you are a sufferer from indigestion, you have already tried pepsin,bismuth, soda, charcoal, drugs and various digestive aids and you know these things will not cure your trouble —in some cases do not even give relief.

But before giving up hope and deciding you are a chronic dyspeptic just try the effect of a little bisurated magnesia—not the ordinary commercial carbonate, citrate, oxide or milk, but the pure bisurated magnesia which you can obtain from practically any druggist in either powdered or tablet form. Take a teaspoonful of the powder or two compressed tablets with a little water after your next meal, and see what a difference this makes. It will instantly neutralize the dangerous, harmful acid in the stomach, which now causes your food to ferment and sour, making gas, wind, flatulence, heartburn, and the bloated or heavy lumpy feeling that seems to follow most everything you eat.

You will find that, provided you take a little bisurated magnesia immediately after a meal, you can eat almost anything and enjoy it without any danger of pain or discomfort to follow and moreover the continued use of the bisurated magnesia cannot injure the stomach in any way so long as there are any symptoms of acid indigestion.

WOMAN'S NERVES MADE STRONG

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Winona, Minn.—"I suffered for more than a year from nervousness, and was so bad I could not rest at night—would lie awake and get so nervous I would have to get up and walk around and in the morning would be all tired out. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and thought I would try it. My nervousness soon left me. I sleep well and feel fine in the morning and able to do my work. I gladly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to make weak nerves strong."—Mrs. ALBERT SULTZE, 603 Olmstead St., Winona, Minn.

How often do we hear the expression among women, "I am so nervous, I cannot sleep," or "it seems as though I should fly." Such women should profit by Mrs. Sultze's experience and give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial.

For forty years it has been overcoming such serious conditions as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, dizziness, and nervous prostration of women, and is now considered the standard remedy for such ailments.

WORK OF A VOLCANO.

Result of an Eruption In Alaska Fourteen Centuries Ago.

Every traveler on the upper Yukon river has noted a conspicuous white bed, four to six inches in thickness, that occurs on the river banks. This is made up of volcanic ash derived from a volcano located in the northern margin of the St. Elias range, more than 100 miles to the south. Though geologically speaking, the material is of recent age, yet it was probably erupted 1,400 years ago.

There are, of course, no historical records of this eruption, but in the course of explorations in Alaska much has been learned about the distribution and thickness of the material ejected. It originally covered an area of over 140,000 square miles, and some of it was carried over 450 miles from the volcano.

The deposit varies in thickness from 300 feet near the volcano to an inch or two at the margin of the area covered by it. A rough estimate indicates that over ten cubic miles of material was ejected at the time of this eruption. During the eruption of Katmai volcano in southwestern Alaska in June, 1912, about five cubic miles of ash was ejected, and about the same amount fell from the Krakatoa eruption of 1883 This Yukon eruption is therefore comparable in intensity with some of the larger eruptions of historical time.—Geological Survey Reports.

Old Man of the Mountain.

The title "Old Man of the Mountain" was first applied to Hassan Ben Sabbal, who founded a formidable dynasty in Syria A. D. 1090. He was the prince or chief of a sect of the Mohammedans. Having been banished from his country, he took up his abode in Mount Lebanon and gathered round him a band of followers, who soon became the terror alike of Christians, Jews and Turks. They paid the most implicit obedience to his commands and believed that if they sacrificed their lives for his sake they would be rewarded with the highest joys of paradise. For 200 years these "assassins," as they called themselves, continued to be the terror of the country Whenever their chief, the "Old Man of the Mountain," considered himself injured he dispatched some of his assassins secretly to murder the aggressor. This is the origin of our use of the word assassin for a secret murderer.

WON ON HIS BLUFF

How an American Consul Brought a Dictator to Terms.

A THREAT AND A SURPRISE.

The Venezuelan Despot to Whom Uncle Sam's Official Had Issued a Comic Opera Ultimatum First Got on His High Horse and Then Stepped Down.

A great many years ago Phil Hanna was consul at La Guayra, Venezuela, when a little revolution broke out. A military martinet in command of the town announced himself dictator and, needing money to carry on his activities, seized a bunch of American, English and German residents in the place and locked them in the town jail They were informed that they would be released when they had made certain cash contributions to the revolutionary war chest.

Hanna was notified of the situation, and, looking up the consulate and leaving an extra sized American flag flying, he marched up to the headquarters of the dictator.

"Mr. Dictator," said Hanna, "I note that you have locked up a number of Americans. Permit me to introduce myself as the American consul."

The dictator asked what interest that fact had for him.

"It signifies that I am here in the name of my government to demand that these Americans be released instantly," replied Hanna.

"Can't do a thing for you," replied the general. "They've been told that when they cough up they'll be turned loose."

"They'll be turned loose without coughing and without delay," retorted Hanna. "I desire, in the name of my government, to say that if the Americans and all the European citizens whom you have locked up are not released by 6 o'clock this afternoon I shall proceed to shell the town."

"To shell—what'll you shell it with?" snorted the dictator. "Why, you haven't an American ship within a thousand miles, and you know it."

"What I said," replied Hanna with frozen faced dignity, "was that if those people are not released by 6 o'clock I'll shell the town." And he marched out again.

Hanna knew perfectly well that there wasn't an American ship nearer than New Orleans, and he knew the dictator knew it. But he had something up his sleeve. He went back to his office and waited patiently, meanwhile sending a clerk down to the water front to watch things.

The day wore on to midafternoon. Hanna was getting nervous. He must make good somehow. At last his messenger returned.

"Two British cruisers are coming into the harbor, sir," he reported.

"I knew they were due today," replied Hanna. "Now, you get word to the commander about what we've done here and tell him it's very important for him to come and see me."

At 5 o'clock that afternoon three very impressive officers in the uniform of the British navy came ashore and marched straight to the American consulate.

Hanna slouched out of his chair, shook hands all round and explained his scrape. The naval man wanted to know how he could best serve the necessities of the moment.

"Just go back on shipboard and begin clearing those vessels for action in the most ostentatious way you can," replied Hanna. "I'll do the rest."

As soon as the necessary time had elapsed to assure that these facts would have duly impressed themselves on his dictatorship Hanna started for the palace again. He didn't have to wait for admittance.

"Have the American and European prisoners been released?" he asked.

"They have not yet," replied the dictator.

"Then permit me to say that at 6 o'clock sharp, as I mentioned this morning, I begin shelling this town!"

"Where's your American ships?" persisted the dictator.

"The two British cruisers that have entered the harbor today are under my orders," replied the American consul, "and we'll blow you and your town off this coast before morning if you don't perform. Do you get it?"

The dictator didn't know whether it was bluff or not, but at 5:59 o'clock the prisoners were turned loose.

Hanna got a promotion for the job.—New York Sun.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save four-fifths of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup at home. It is simple and cheap but it really has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) from any druggist, pour it into a 16-oz bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make 16 ounces. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, whooping cough or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Are Your Pulley Problems Well in Hand?

Have you reduced "belt slip" and weight-friction to a minimum? Can you show, despite increased price of coal, that your power bills are less, because you are getting more results from each unit? Many Superintendents are showing these results to-day, because they are replacing metal pulleys by Dodge Wood-Split Pulleys.

$10.00 per pulley per year is the smallest average saving of power costs by such replacements.

This is a big claim, but it has been proven over and over again. Write for more information.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Getting Out of It

By DON LA GRANGE

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Deacon Strothers and his wife were eating supper when she said to him across the table:

"Moses, if I should die, would you marry again?"

"Bless me, but what a question," he replied as he choked.

"But I should like to know."

"It ain't likely that I would."

"You believe I'll go to heaven when I die, don't you?"

"Straight as a crow flies."

"And how'd I feel lookin' down from heaven and seein' you around with another wife!"

"But the angels in heaven can't look down on earth."

"It is said they can't, but how does anybody know they can't?"

"These are nice mashed taters," said the deacon as he helped himself to some more.

His wife was a Christian woman, and a church member, but nevertheless there were times when she wanted to know, you know, and he found it safer to choke her off than argue with her. He was hoping he had in this case when she said:

"Yes, I've got a knack of mashin' taters, and you'll miss me when I'm gone. How about my question, Moses?"

"You'll probably outlive me ten years."

"I probably won't, and I want to know if you will marry again?"

"No, sir, I shouldn't!"

The deacon was vexed with her persistency, and he brought out his answer with an emphasis.

"All right," began the wife and began talking of something else.

Next day she and another woman were drowned by the upsetting of a boat on the river. The deacon, who was over fifty, was overwhelmed for a time, but gradually his grief wore away and he was like himself again. It is not contended that he was an absent-minded man, but it is stated, and it is quite reasonable, that after the first month the deacon did not think of that promise again for four years. Then it came like a knockout blow. Bit by bit he had come to be friends with the Widow Stevens. He had sat on her doorstep; he had sat by her fire; he had hoed in her garden; he had split wood for her cookstove. Aye, he had called her Sarah, and she had called him Moses. One evening he had had a talk with himself beginning with:

"By the great horn spoons, but that widder can make a custard fit for a king!"

And then: "Deacon, you have been a widower for four years—for four long years. You have been sad and lonely. It has come mighty hard."

And again:

"There's folks winkin' and blinkin' around and sayin' that me and the widder will make a match of it, but let 'em wink and blink. It hain't none of their pesky business, and I have told 'em so."

Then with a chuckle:

"It wouldn't be a bad match for either one of us. Home is where the husband and wife is, and we've neither one of us got a home 'cordin' to that.

wonder if I had better hint around?"

Three minutes elapsed and then the deacon brought his fist down and exclaimed:

"Hint? Hint? No, I won't hint a hint! I'll just ask her outright!"

And he was going over in his mind what he would say when a thought struck him and he fairly leaped from his chair and gasped out:

"My promise to my wife that I wouldn't marry again!"

For five minutes Deacon Strothers was as weak in the knees as if he had seen a ghost. He had promised, and that promise was like a wall across his future path.

"What did Martha ever pester me into making that promise for?" he asked himself. "It wasn't right—no, it wasn't. Did I ask her not to marry again in case I died first? No, of course I didn't. I jest left it to her feelings in the matter."

Was there any way out of it? Couldn't that promise be dodged?

It was an hour after the deacon's usual bedtime, but he was still as lively as a fox. He went over the matter for ten minutes, and then said:

"Why did I promise? Because Martha was in the best of health, and appeared good for fifteen years yet. Did she give me the slightest hint that she was goin' to be silly enough to get into a boat the next day? No, she didn't. Did she say she might get drowned? Not a word. Wouldn't a court hold that it was deception, and that I wasn't bound by my promise? When Jabez Reed sold me a cow for thirty dollars and never said a word about her jumpin' fences, didn't the court make him take her back? It said he suppressed a fact. Didn't Martha do the same?"

The deacon went to bed feeling better, but when he awoke next morning his conscience began to trouble him again.

"By heck, but sunthin' has got to be did!" he exclaimed over his breakfast; and soon as the meal was finished he clapped on his hat and went out to look up Robert Roebuck.

Mr. Roebuck was known as a very pious, God-fearing man, and he would see both sides of the case and render a fair decision. He was given the facts, and, after chewing on them for five minutes he said:

"Deacon, you was a fool for makin' such a promise."

"I know I was."

"My old woman has asked me more'n forty times to promise the same thing, but I never have done it and never will."

"But I wish I hadn't."

"But you did, and now we must see how you can get out of it. Was your wife ever in a boat till that day?"

"Never."

"Was there any call for her to go on the river?"

"Not a call."

"Which of the women suggested that they take the boat?"

"My wife."

"Deacon Strothers, if that don't come under the head of conspiracy, then my old white cow is a red one! If anyone conspires to force a promise out of another then that promise won't hold."

"I believe you are right, Mr. Roebuck," replied the deacon with relief in his voice.

"Of course I am. An agreement that benefits only one side does not hold. Did your wife speak up and say that she would not marry again if you died first?"

"She did not!"

"Well, there you are, as free as a bird, though you'd better go to the parson and see what he thinks about it. He may hold sentimental views."

The deacon walked over to the parsonage, and not wishing to be too brusque, he began:

"Parson, do you hold that an angel in heaven can see what is going on here below?'

"If they could they wouldn't be angels very long," was the grim reply.

"Did you ever preach that they could?"

"Not that I remember of. Heaven is a long way off, deacon."

"My wife kinder believed that after she got to heaven she could see what was takin' place down here."

The parson was silent.

"She wanted me to promise not to marry again in case she died, because if she looked down and saw me with a second wife it would make her feel bad.

"If anything could make the angels feel bad in heaven, it would not be heaven, would it?'

"By George, parson, it wouldn't! Martha was mistaken about it. If I was to marry half a dozen times over she couldn't know anything about it."

"But did she ask you to promise?" queried the parson.

"Yes, she kinder asked me."

"And you promised?"

"Yes, I kinder promised, but it was because I did not want her to feel bad as an angel. Now that you say she couldn't feel bad if she tried her hardest, I guess that promise needn't bother me much."

"But look out next time, deacon."

"Yes—ahem—yes!"

"It's the Widow Stephens, I suppose?"

"Yes, kinder."

"Throw out any hints yet?"

"A dozen, I guess."

"You may find that she made a promise to her dying husband."

"Jewhittaker! I'll see about that the first thing!"

It was a new scare for the deacon, and he made the two blocks to the widow's house on the trot. He found her in the garden coaxing the pea vines to climb their best, and he didn't wait a minute before asking:

"Widder Stevens, did your husband expect to go to heaven when he died?"

"I don't see how he could. He was a man that cussed and gambled and drank."

"Did he ask you to promise not to marry again?"

"No, he didn't, and if he had I should have told him that that was my own business. Why are you asking these questions?"

"Widder, hain't I been a good man at the woodpile?"

"Fine."

"And a good one in the garden?"

"Sure."

"And hain't I lonely and you lonely?"

"We are."

"Then—then let's get married!"

"La me! Bring on the parson and have it over with and off our hands, for them string beans have got to be poled afore sundown!"

BIRDS AND BRAINS.

The Canary Well Supplied, While the Poor Hen Is Sadly Lacking.

Naturalists have arrived at the conclusion that the brain in birds is large in proportion to the body. If it is admitted that intelligence depends upon the weight of the brain then the goldfinch must be placed at the top of the list of birds. The brain weighs one-fourteenth of its whole body.

It must be remembered, however, that attempts to draw conclusions as to the intelligence of certain birds from a comparison of the weight of the brain with that of the body have been considered futile.

In man the brain forms from one-twenty-second to one-thirty-third of the whole body; in the canary, one-fourteenth; the sparrow, one-twenty-fifth; the chaffinch, one-twenty-seventh; the redbreast, one-thirty-second; the blackbird, one-sixty-eighth; the duck, one-two-hundred-and-fifty-seventh; the eagle, one-two-hundred-and-sixtieth; the goose, one-three-hundred-and-sixtieth; the domestic hen, one-four-hundred-and-twelfth.

By some the preternaturally cunning raven is supposed to be the most highly developed of birds. His courage is so great that the eagle respects it, and his intelligence prevents him from getting into unseen though suspected dangers.—London Spectator.

Would Have Made No Difference.

Sir Edward Cook in his "Life of Florence Nightingale" tells a story of a wounded soldier who picked up another wounded soldier and stumbled back into camp with him.

The rescued man turned out to be a general, no less, and when he went to see his rescuer in hospital the latter exclaimed:

"I'm glad I didn't know it was your honor. But if I'd known it was you I'd have saved you all the same!"

DON'T BE DYSPEPTIC.

The dyspeptic has thought only of the stomach when the real source of trouble is the Liver, Kidneys and Bowels. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills thoroughly cleanse and purify the digestive and excretory system and in this way put the organs of digestion into splendid working condition. A little patient urging on of the organs when sluggish will restore the habit of healthful digestion.

Cemeteries Where Women Gossip.

Friday, the Sabbath of the Moslems, when all true believers of the masculine gender make a point of going to church, their wives, sisters and daughters resort to the cemeteries and wail for the dead. But all their time is not spent in weeping, and sorrow is not the only emotion they display on these occasions. They take with them bunches and garlands of flowers and decorate the graves of their relatives and pray and weep over the dead for a time. Then when this pious duty is performed they gather in little groups and have a good time gossiping about the living. Thus the day of mourning is very popular among the Moslem women. It gives them almost the only opportunity they have of cultivating the acquaintance of their neighbors.

Crowns by Wholesale.

It is told of one of the ancient kings of Egypt that his coronation procession occupied a whole day in passing through the city of Alexandria and that 3,200 crowns of gold were carried by the servants. One crown was three feet in height and twenty-four feet in circumference. There were also carried in the procession sixty-four suits of golden armor, two boots of gold, four and a half feet in length; twelve golden basins, ten large vases of perfumes for the baths, twelve ewers, fifty dishes and a large number of tables—all of gold. Twenty-three of the 3,200 crowns were valued at £334,400, and it is not surprising that the procession was guarded by 10,000 soldiers. —St. James' Gazette.

Let Her In on This.

"I believe a man should be master in his own house," said the newly married man. "There can be only one head in a family, and I mean to be it."

"That's a very good idea," answered his friend, who had been married more years than the other had lived, "a very good idea indeed. Have you spoken to your wife about it?"

Tree Leaves and Water.

Ash leaves are capable of taking up more water than those of most other trees. In a hundred pounds of ash leaves are eighty-five of water, in the same weight of beech leaves seventy-five, of maple sixty, of pine fourteen and of fir ten.

FLEETEST OF ALL DOGS.

Greyhounds Can Run as Fast as Carrier Pigeons Can Fly.

Comparatively few people realize of what remarkable speed dogs are capable. The wolf can run between fifty and sixty miles in one night, and the arctic fox can do quite as well, if not better. Nansen met one of these foxes on the ice at a point more than seventy miles northwest of the Sannikow territory, which is 480 miles from the Asiatic coast. Eskimo and Siberian dogs can travel forty-five miles on the ice in five hours, and there is one case on record in which a team of Eskimo dogs traveled six and one-half miles in twenty-eight minutes.

English setters and pointers hunt at the rate of eighteen to nineteen miles an hour, and they can maintain the speed for at least two hours. Foxhounds are extraordinarily swift, as is proved by the fact that a dog of this breed once beat a thoroughbred horse, covering four miles in six and one-half minutes. Greyhounds are the swiftest of all four footed creatures, and their speed may be regarded as equal to that of carrier pigeons. English greyhounds which are carefully selected and which are used for coursing are able to cover at full gallop a space between eighteen and twenty-three yards every second. It is said that a hare at its greatest speed never goes faster than at the rate of eighteen yards a second. These interesting statistics fully prove the right of the greyhounds to rank as the swiftest of the quadrupeds.

Natural Age of Man.

The question as to what is the natural age of man is by no means settled, of course, but many are of the opinion that the Frenchman Flourens was not far out of the way in his estimate of the time a man should live. Taking his observations from the group mammalia, of the class vertebrata, as having the closest resemblance to man and such species as are permitted to live the full term of their natural life under circumstances not admitting of error or doubt, Flourens found that their natural life extended to about five times the period of their lives from birth up to maturity. Applying the rule thus obtained to human life and taking the age at which the body is fully matured to be twenty years, he concluded the natural duration of the life of man to be 100 years.

The Process—Quality Standard and Service that insure Better Belting

Manufacturers invariably claim superiority for their products. The Dominion Rubber System is no exception in this respect—but we go further and ask you to let us prove to your satisfaction—

—that ours is really a better belt—

—that Dominion Friction Surface Belting is more than rubberized fabric—

—that Dominion Rubber System Belting Service means more than just selling better belts.

Over fifty years of experience and research have enabled the Dominion Rubber System to accurately determine the kind of fabric, rubber and construction that produce the greatest belting service for a given purpose and to build the largest, most complete and most efficient organization of its kind in Canada.

Briefly summarizing the process—the highest grade fabric procurable is laboratory inspected and tested—it is impregnated with tested rubber under heat and pressure—cut to size and placed together.

The stretch is removed and the whole belt is vulcanized in the curing press under automatically governed heat, time and pressure, thus assuring absolute uniformity in every foot of Dominion Rubber System Belting.

Every ounce of material—each individual operation and each finished belt must test up to the high quality standard of the Dominion Rubber System.

Our service branches place, within phone distance of your plant, the services of our belting engineers without cost.

These technical experts will assume complete responsibility for the efficiency of your belting equipment and prove invaluable in cutting costs, solving problems or bridging emergencies.

THE SEA OF LOT.

Its Ridge of Sodom and Its Fetid but Clear Blue Waters.

It is in the southeastern part of Palestine where the famous Dead sea lies. In the Old Testament it was known as the Sea of the Plain or Salt sea, but it is known today by the Arabs as the Sea of Lot. Its surface, which is lower than any other body of water, is 1,292 feet below the level of the Mediterranean.

The Dead sea is fed by the river Jordan from the north, but has no outlet, depending entirely upon evaporation. A portion of the sea is surrounded by cliffs which are destitute of vegetation. On the south shore is the ridge of rock salt, seven miles long and 300 feet high, known as the ridge of Sodom. Lava beds, sulphur and volcanic slag prove the existence of volcanic agencies at some period. The lake still casts up pieces of asphalt when the environs of the Dead sea are visited by earthquake.

Its proportion of saline matter is so great that it contains more than eight times as much as the ocean, and, while it is exceedingly fetid, yet its water is as blue as that of the Mediterranean, and to the bather it is very refreshing, and owing to its specific gravity it is difficult to sink. Nothing living exists within the waters of the Dead sea.—Buffalo Express.

JOHN STOWE'S REWARD.

The Beggar Historian Got Royal Permission to Solicit Alms.

James I. on March 8, 1603, granted letters patent under the great seal to John Stowe, London's great historian, authorizing him to beg. The letters patent of James I. authorized Stowe to collect the voluntary contributions of the people. The letter recites that:

"Whereas, Our loving subject, John Stowe, a very aged and worthy member of our city of London, this five and forty years hath to his great charge and with neglect of his ordinary means of maintenance, for the general good as well of posterity as of the present age, compiled and published diverse necessary books and chronicles, and therefore we, in recompense of his labors and for the encouragement to the like, have in our royal inclination been pleased to grant letters patent under our great seal of England, dated March 8, 1603, thereby authorizing him to collect among our loving subjects their voluntary contributions and kind gratuities."

John Stowe died on April 5, 1605, and was buried in the parish Church of St. Andrew Undershaft, where his monument, erected by his widow, is still to be seen.—London Stray Stories.

A Journalist Bought Suez.

The journalist is often the man behind the statesman, but he seldom gets the credit. Who was it that induced Mr. Disraeli to buy the Sues canal shares which have proved so abundantly good an investment, with dividends that are represented not only by money, though even from that point of view it is the best investment that a state has ever made? Fleet street knows and honors the name of Mr. Frederick Greenwood both for that reason and for many another. But how many outside the world of journalism realize that but for Mr. Greenwood the Suez canal shares would probably have been purchased by a rival continental power? The question was one among those put in a "general intelligence" examination paper a little time back at a certain school. Only one boy was able to answer it correctly, and he was the son of the prime minister.—London Chronicle.

Discordant Thoughts.

In wandering through your mental pleasure grounds, whenever you come upon an ugly intruder of a thought which might bloom into some poisonous emotion, such as fear, envy, hate, worry, remorse, anger and the like, there is only one right way to treat it, writes Robert H. Schauffler in the Atlantic. Pull it up like a weed, drop it upon the rubbish heap as promptly as if it were a stinging nettle and let some harmonious thought grow in its place. There is no more reckless consumer of all kinds of exuberance than the discordant thought, and weeding it out saves such an astonishing amount of eau de vie wherewith to water the garden of joy that with it in hand every man may be his own Burbank.

His Alibi.

"If you are innocent," said a lawyer to his client, an old darky, who was charged with stealing a ham, "we ought to be able to prove an alibi."

"I don' specs we kin," the darky replied doubtfully.

"At what time was the ham stolen?"

"'Bout 'lebben erclock, day say."

"Well, where were you between 11 o'clock and midnight—in bed?"

"No, sah. I was hidin' de ham."—Philadelphia Ledger.

PEPPERY COMPOSERS.

Masters of Music Who Had Nice Tempers of Their Own.

Even in the presence of his royal pupils Handel would sometimes fly into most violent passions.

"You forget yourself, Mr. Handel," a court attendant said reprovingly on one such occasion. "You should show more respect to her royal highness!"

"Royal highness!" snorted the musician contemptuously. "Bah! De respect is due to me! There are many princesses, but only one Handel!"

On another occasion, when George I. sent a message summoning him to an interview, he returned this answer:

"Dell his bajesty he bust waid. By tibe is bore imbordant dan his!"

Viotti, the famous French musician of the eighteenth century, had an equal contempt for royalty and an exaggerated opinion of himself, as the following story shows: One day he was summoned to Versailles to play before Marie Antoinette and the court. The performance had begun; the opening bars of his favorite solo commanded breathless attention, when a cry was heard:

"Place for Mgr. the Comte d'Artois!"

At the sound Viotti immediately ceased playing, cast an indignant glance at his audience, placed his violin under his arm and walked out of the place.

When Marie Antoinette once inquired of Gluck how his new opera was progressing he answered, "Madame, it is nearly finished, and I assure you it will be superb," a conceit which was rivaled by that of Meyerbeer, who, when a friend declared that if anything better could be composed than one of his rival operas he would dance on his head, answered, "If that is so I should advise you to start practicing at once, for I have just commenced the fourth act of 'The Huguenots!'"

Even Haydn, usually the most modest of men, showed at times that he had as good an opinion of his own merits as any of his admirers. On one occasion, when a friend said to him of his "Salomon" symphonies, "Sir, I am strongly of opinion that you will never surpass these wonderful symphonies," he answered placidly, "No; I never mean to attempt the impossible!"

CURIOUS CARD TRICK.

It Deals With Odd Numbers, and the Explanation Is a Mystery.

There is a puzzle which may be performed with any odd number of objects, playing cards being usually employed, and which any one can do, but no one seems able to explain the reason for it. Let us suppose the number selected to be twenty-seven cards, although fifteen or twenty-one would do just as well.

After having them shuffled hold them in the left hand face upward and then deal them face upward one at a time in three piles so that the fourth card comes on the first and the fifth on the top of the second and so on until you have three piles of nine cards each.

Request any person who is watching you to make a silent note of any card he pleases, and when you have finished dealing to tell you in which pile the card lies. By picking up the three piles again one at a time as before, the noted card will reappear. Ask in which pile it came that time and place that pile in the middle as before.

Upon dealing the cards into three piles for the third time note carefully the card that comes in the middle of each pile. With twenty-seven there will be nine in each pile and the fifth will be the middle card. Now, when the person who selected the card names the pile in which his card comes you will know it was the middle card of that pile. With this knowledge in your possession you can finish the trick in any manner you please.

This is only a statement of results, but what is the explanation or reason for it? What is the rule that makes it always come out right, regardless of the number of objects used, so that it is odd?—New York Sun.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If your Back is aching or Bladder bothers, drink lots of water and eat less meat.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending b'adder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

RECEIVING WAR CROSS

The patriotic spirit and devotion with which Canadian women have so far performed war-service work and made sacrifices has never been equalled in the history of any country. Mothers, wives, and sisters support this burden with strength and fortitude. But those who are already miserable from the complaints and weaknesses which are so common to women, should take the right temperance tonic for the womanly system.

If a woman is borne down by pain and sufferings, by nervousness or dizzy spells, by headache or backache, "Favorite Prescription" should be taken. It can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid at most drug stores. Send to Dr. Pierce's Branch at Bridgeburg, Ont., for a 10c trial pkg. of tablets.

For fifty years Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets have been most satisfactory in liver and bowel troubles.

Windsor, Ont.—"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription made a new woman of me. For about six years I suffered with woman's trouble during which time I became all run-down, weak and nervous. I would have severe backaches and pains in my side. I doctored with the doctor but did not get cured of my ailment and was so bad that I could scarcely walk across the floor when I began taking the 'Prescription.' When I had taken two bottles I was much improved and four bottles completely cured me, and I have enjoyed better health than I ever did before taking this medicine. It is truly a wonderful medicine for women."—Mrs. Martha Molcaster, 6 Albert St.

Making a Beach.

Weymouth owes the beginning of its popularity as a health and pleasure resort to an accident. In 1763 a west of England doctor whose name is now forgotten advised one of his patients—Ralph Allen, a prominent philanthropist of Bath—to "bathe his body in the open sea." By mere chance Allen selected Weymouth, and the first wooden bathing machine was built. Then crowds gathered to watch the "madman" enter the water. But the patient got better, told the Duke of Gloucester all about it, and—Weymouth was made.—London Tatler.

The Price of a Kid.

Cordova is full of fun, says C. Bogue Luffmann in his "Quiet Days in Spain," and in the leisurely pace of life there the observer has time to see and appreciate all of it.

In the market one day a small boy with a big apron and a pompous manner was offering half of a small kid to a woman for a peseta. She objected that it was very tiny, and he fairly smothered her with: "Woman! Do you want half a bull for a tenpence?"

Which?

Is woman more interesting than man, or the reverse? Man varies more. He has more genius in exceptional individuals, and less of genius-like insight in the average person. He completes; woman endures. He builds externally, she at home. He fights; she preserves. Our worthless opinion is that men are more interesting than women, but that woman is more interesting than man.—Harper's Weekly.

Both Are Good.

We are asked, "What is the best conundrum and answer you ever heard?"

That which was answered by a minister who was asked by a vain woman which hand he regarded as the most beautiful. And he replied, "Ask the poor, and they will tell you that most beautiful hand is the hand that gives."

Next to it is the reply of a banker who was asked, "Why is a promissory note like a rosebud?" He answered, "Because it matures on falling dew."

Not Settled Yet.

"Is the head of the house at home?" asked the agent as the mister of the family answered the doorbell. Making no effort to answer the question, the mister person said, "I don't know what line of goods you are introducing or whether they would fit in our establishment or not, that phase of the matter being neither here nor there, but let me tell you something—if you can establish once for all just who is to be recognized as the head of this house I'll buy a gross of whatever you've got and pay the catalogue price."

"But love won't foot the bills!"

UTAH'S NATURAL BRIDGE.

The Secret of Its Origin Somewhat Puzzles the Scientists.

What is thought to be the largest natural bridge in the world is that of southwestern Utah, known as the George natural bridge. The total length of this great work of nature is about 200 feet; its width—i. e., the "roadway"—is about thirty-five feet; the span in the clear is about ninety feet. At the base there flows a small water course which, during the hot months, dwindles to a mere rivulet.

Scientists are somewhat perplexed to explain the means by which nature produced this bridge. It is thought hardly possible that it could have been created by water erosion, unless, as was most unlikely, there was a very large and swift stream flowing at the point where the brook now runs.

Some authorities are inclined to the view that this bridge was due to volcanic action, occurring at some remote geological period.

Although long known to the Indians, it was not until about fifteen years ago that white men became familiar with the sight of it. Mining prospectors were the first of the whites to see it, since it is located in the heart of a very rugged and inaccessible region.

The span is composed of a dark brown standstone of unusual hardness, and the thickness of the span is twenty feet or more.

Engineers who have examined this bridge assert that it is perfectly safe and secure and that it is fully capable of sustaining an immense weight, especially as the span is free from flaws or seams.—Washington Star.

JUSTICE AND LUNCHEON.

They Seemed to Clash a Trifle, So the Court Made a Change.

It was formerly the practice of the supreme court to sit from 12 noon until 4 o'clock continuously on each day that it was in session. From time to time, as the afternoon progressed, the justices, one or two at a time, would slip out of their seats, snatch a bite of luncheon and return. Sometimes as many as four or five of them would be off the bench at once. They usually had their luncheon brought to them by their messengers and ate it in the little curtained recess behind the bench, and as the argument progressed there could be plainly heard in the courtroom the clink of knife and fork on plate and what O. Henry has called "the crash of dishes on the American plan."

One day a lawyer pleading a case made bold to enter a protest. He most solemnly inquired if he could count upon the continuous and undivided attention of even one justice to the thread of his argument. "The personnel of the court has been twice entirely changed since I began," he said plaintively.

The court deigned no response, but on the following Monday it was announced from the bench that a recess for luncheon thereafter would be taken every day from 2 to 2:30 o'clock and that the court would sit until 4:30 o'clock every afternoon.—World's Work.

Birds That Fight Eagles.

In Foula, one of the Shetland islands, the natives make a business of rearing skau gulls in order to rid the islands of eagles that congregate there and commit many depredations. The magnificent red sandstone cliffs that skirt the northwestern coast became a favorite haunt of the eagles, and in this inaccessible spot they increased so rapidly that they became a terror to the farmers and fishermen who dwell on this isolated spot. The skau gulls are also strong and fierce and the inveterate foes of the eagle. In battle the gulls are nearly always victorious, and so the inhabitants of Foula hit upon the novel plan of feeding and caring for the skau gulls, which, though formidable to their feathered enemies, are very peaceful and docile when brought in contact with man.—Dallas News.

Allies' Sweeping Drive in Flanders Threatens German Submarine Bases

Lille is Outflanked and May Fall in a Short Time—Industrial Centres of Roubaix, Tourcoing, Bruges Are Almost in the Allies' Grasp.

HAVE ADVANCED 7 MILES

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—The Associated Press this morning issued the following:

Sweeping steadily ahead over the lowlands of Belgian Flanders, British, French and Belgian armies are rapidly tearing away the extreme right flank of the German battle line, 12,000 prisoners have been captured in two days, according to the official statement. This would seem to indicate a victory of great importance even if the ground gained was not of the utmost importance in the development of a mighty Allied offensive. Allied forces have captured Menin and Wervicq and are across the Lys river in the neighbourhood of the latter town. There are unofficial reports that Thourout has been taken, and it is confirmed that the British are within two miles of Courtrai. This completely outflanks Lille from the north, and the Germans will probably be forced out of that city in a very short time. The Allies are now about eleven miles from Bruges and twenty-five miles from Ghent. They have advanced seven miles since Monday morning.

HUNS ARE PREPARING TO QUIT BRUGES AND GHENT

PARIS, Oct. 16.—The German extreme right wing is being threatened more and more as the Allied wedge in Flanders is driven deeper. The enemy resistance seems to be slackening in Flanders and it is believed here that important results may be seen within a few days. Already the advance of the Allies is from two and one-half to five miles on a thirty mile front. On the right the British hold Menin and Wervicq and have Courtrai almost within their grasp. The evacuation of the great industrial centres of Lille, Roubaix and Tourcoing seems inevitable as a result of this gain.

On the left the Belgians are approaching Thorout, only twelve miles from Bruges and are within 20 miles of the Dutch frontier. There are signs that the Germans realize that the days of their occupation of Belgium are numbered. They already have begun the work of destruction in Western Belgium. According to informa- Ghent and even Brussels.

EXTRAVAGANT WITH SHELLS THEY WILL SOON LOSE

(By Lowell Mellet.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Oct. 16.—Allied forces driving into Belgium have thrust their wedge across the road from Bruges to Courtrai, severing another area of communication to the U-boat bases. French cavalry has swept over Lichtervelde and Thorout, advancing toward Bruges and the sea. Toward the southern end of the fighting front, Menin has been taken and Haig's men are in the neighbourhood of Haubourdin, three miles from Lille.

The Germans are using prodigally, great stores of shells in their Belgian coast cases. It is becoming evident they will be unable to save these munitions, so the enemy is using them up as fast as possible. Their batteries gave out a more stubborn response than at any other time in recent weeks.

Although the Germans are forced to lavishly spend their shells to keep them from falling into the hands of the Allies, they had time to remove a considerable quantity of war materials before the long-dreaded Belgian offensive was launched. By transporting much of this to the rear, the High Command rendered the enemy army fairly mobile. Yet vast stores still line the coast.

YANKS MAKE BIG EFFORT

Fighting Desperately to Break the German Line Between the Aisne and Meuse Rivers.

EFFECT WOULD BE GREAT

(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY NORTH OF VERDUN, Oct. 16. — The Americans are battling another breach in the Kriemhilde line in the region of St. Geurges. The army is fighting with utter desperation. A break between the Aisne and the Meuse rivers means the collapse of the entire present German front in this region. Should the Americans break through here, the enemy left flank would be shattered and the effects would probably be felt all along the line, which has been shoved backward by recent assaults of the Allies further north. Buzancy is under heavy American shell fire. Dun-Sur-Meuse, Stenay and other big railway centres have been repeatedly bombed by airplanes.

Thus the way is being cleared for a further advance and the enemy communications are constantly being harried. The Americans steadily pushing on are narrowing the avenue through which the Germans can withdraw. Rapid gains by the British and French to the north made it necessary for the Boche to offer the stiffest resistance to the Americans in this region, to avoid being cut off by Pershing's men taking him in the rear.

THE AMERICANS HAVE CLEANED UP GRAND PRE

(United Press Service.)
(By Frank J. Taylor.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY, Oct. 16.—Plunging through belts of German wire in the fact of showers of hand granades, the men of the first army have mopped up Grand Pre, crossed the Pass through the Argonne, and are pushing on. Captured German orders stated that Grand Pre must be held at all costs. A new Prussian Guard division was identified in this fighting, making a total of twenty such divisions, encountered since the beginning of the American offensive in this region.

EYES RIGHT.

Clearing Belgium of the Invader.

A drive to clear the Belgian coast of the Germans, who have held it since the capture of Antwerp and Ostend in October, 1914, is in progress by British, Belgian and French troops. The advance took place from Dixmude to the Lys river near Menin, (both shown on this map.) Roulers has been taken; Courtrai is menaced, and the historic city of Ghent may be said to be within sight of relief.

PRECAUTIONS AGAINST INFLUENZA.

(1) The sick should be separated from the healthy. This is especially important in the case of first attacks in the household.

(2) Discharges from the nose and mouth should not be allowed to get dry on a pocket handkerchief or inside the house, office or factory. They should at once be collected in paper or clean rags and burned. If this cannot be done, they should be dropped into a vessel containing water.

(3) Infected articles and rooms should be cleansed and disinfected. Use disinfectants everywhere. Wash the hands frequently.

(4) Those attacked should not, on any account, mingle with other people for at least a period of ten days from the commencement of the attack. In severe cases, they should remain away from work for a longer period.

(5) Special attention should be given to cleanliness and ventilation. Warm clothing should be worn, the feet should be kept dry and all unnecessary exposure avoided.

Berlin's Financial Circles in a Panic

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct. 16. — President Wilson's reply to the German peace note produced a most unfavourable impression in Berlin, says the Central News despatch from Amsterdam today. It was followed by a panic in the Berlin banking circles and on the Stock Enchange. The German supreme command advises that it will come to Berlin at the end of the present week to deliberate on mobilization, concentration of national strength, and raising the military age.

German Press Now Reflects Discontent With the Kaiser

Becoming So General Now That Even the Censor Apparently Does Not Dare Delete It—When Turkey Drops Out the German People May Begin to Reason.

TOO LATE TO BARGAIN

(United Press Service.)
(By Robert J. Bender.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—Upon a growing dissatisfaction in Germany over the Kaiser's rule, authorities here to-day based the view that the Hohenzollern power will soon crumble and that the Wilson peace terms will then be accepted. Both openly and guardedly the Teuton press is voicing its dissatisfaction with things as they are in Teuton political life. The comment expressing discontent with the Kaiser's autocratic power, is now becoming so general that the all-powerful German censor apparently does not dare kill it. Authorities declare that even the most loyal of the Kaiser's subjects will begin to appreciate soon that the murder-master is the only thing standing in the way of peace and will realize that they are fighting a losing fight.

"Force Without Stint."

The State Department is keeping a careful file of German press comment gathered by its agents in countries near Garmany. The Department withholds this generally lest it unduly give America the idea of an early peace. In this connection, it may be said that the Government is now proceeding with the war just as though the peace notes had not been exchanged. The military authorities are disregarding peace proposals through diplomacy entirely. In their plans and calculations, they are arranging "force without stint," on the theory that the most convincing argument with a German is a "bullet in his head."

Turkey Next.

Authorities look for the early collapse of Turkey. Her request for peace will probably be accepted by Allies with a demand for unconditional surrender to be arranged with the commanding general, along lines similar in scope to those applied against Bulgaria. From the Turkish collapse to the disintegration of Austria-Hungary is regarded as no far cry. With these last props gone, it is felt here that Germany will reason rapidly and see that Kaiserdom is a poor investment.

Too Late to Bargain.

One point which is causing an amount of discussion is what will occur over the demand for restoration of Alsace-Lorraine to France. This has been regarded as a sticking point, but it is felt there that the German military situation is such that she cannot dicker over this matter now. If she does not choose to accept an armistice and democracy, Foch's armies will settle the Alsace-Lorraine question.

It is reported that anti-Kaiser demonstrations in Germany, plus imminent trouble from the Poles and Slavs to the east, are big factors in the peace situation. Diplomatic circles are receiving indications that distinct movements are afoot in Poland, Bohemia and Moravia, looking to throwing off the German and Austrian yokes.

Wilson's Reply Pleases Paris

Press Unanimous In Its Approval —Responds to Wishes of the Allies.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Oct. 16.—Paris newspapers greeted President Wilson's reply to Germany with strong approval.

"Wilson doesn't let things drag. The latest document is so clear that it will rejoice all the Allies because it responds to their wishes."

Said La Liberte: "All vulgarly speaking Germans thought they had put the President in their pocket, but Wilson outplayed them."

The Intransigeant said: "These few in France who for an instant doubted Wilson's perfect insight can now make honourable amends. This honest American negotiator is more clever than the plotting gentry in Berlin."

The Temps, heading its article "A Straight Stroke," says: "Unanimously will reply Wilson is right. Conditions of an armistice must give guarantees of advantages that victory would bring if we should go on until the end came by strength."

SHOULD REDUCE RUTHLESSNESS

(United Press Service.)
(By J. W. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Zeebrugge and Ostend can no longer be used by the Germans as supply bases for their submarines. The Allied advance into Belgium has cut the principle railway leading to Ostend by way of Thourout. There remains a second railway which passes through Bruges, and branches off to Ostend and Zeebrugge. French cavalry, however, are approaching so near to this line that it would be foolhardy for the Germans to continue sending over supplies which would be destined for ultimate capture.

Instead of this sole remaining line of communications being used to carry munitions to the Belgian coast for the U-boats, there is every reason to believe that the Germans are trying to employ it to rescue all they can from Ostend and Zeebrugge before the Allies close in upon these points.

The forwarding of torpedoes for submarines to Ostend and Zeebrugge for the destruction of Allied shipping can be undertaken only by way of the Belgian railroads. There is no other means of communication. The Germans cannot send torpedoes from German ports to the Belgian coast by submarine carriers. To reload their magazines, therefore, the submarine pirates must shorten the period they back to German waters after the termination of every raid.

These outward and return trips will add five hundred miles to the necessary journeys of submarines before they reach the lanes of the trans-Atlantic shipping. This means that the pirates must shorten the period they can remain at sea in wait for their victims by several days, otherwise their supplies will become exhausted. It also means that U-boats must run a much longer gauntlet past Allied patrol ships off the boast of Belgium and Holland. There will now be a greater total of submarines taken than ever before. At the same time of the Kaiser's efforts to increase ruthlessness at sea all Allied shipping losses show a rapid decline.

He was thrown against the freight and his body was horribly mangled. He was 82 years of age, and for a long time was engaged in brick manufacturing here. "Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 16TH, 1918.

TO AVOID INFLUENZA

The attention of the people of Peterboro is called to the instructions issued by Dr. C. H Amys, medical officer of health in regard to the influenza epidemic. The rules laid down by Dr. Amys are simple but if consistently followed by the citizens would do much to check the spread of the disease. One of the principal points to bear in mind is to keep out of crowds either indoors or on the streets, avoid theatres and all other places of public assemblage. Keep away from all people who are suffering from "colds" —in fact some Boards of Health are warning people not to buy anything in a store where there is a clerk who is coughing or sneezing. Above all things to protect others, cover the mouth and nose when coughing or sneezing.

LOAN IS NECESSARY.

It cannot be too often or too forcibly repeated that Canada's new Victory Loan will be absolutely needed, even if the war ended to-day. The only thing that could possibly stand in the way of an over-subscription to the loan in Canada would be a general belief that with peace possibly in sight, there will be no occasion to invest in the Victory Loan. Every patriotic Canadian should consider it a duty to deny any such theory, if it is brought forward by anybody as a reason for not subscribing. Every cent of the amount asked for will be required. If peace came to-day, Canada's army overseas would have to be paid and maintained until demobilized—an undertaking that will require many long months to complete. And Great Britain's purchases in Canada, transactions upon which much of the Dominion's prosperity depends, will have to be financed through the Victory Loan.

Canada needs $500,000,000 whether peace comes soon or not, and the people of Canada must supply the amount.

THE WONDERFUL NAVY.

Reference to the British navy and its wonderful work are mostly of a general character. We hear quite a bit about what the navy as a whole is doing and the effect on the Allied cause. For example, it has been stated that the navy has protected the transportation over the seas of something like twenty million Allied soldiers. But very little of a definite nature has been given out about its part in the war; we know that it is a stupendous accomplishment to have safeguarded those twenty million soldiers on the ocean but we know practically nothing about the manner in which the navy succeeded in doing it, about the way in which it has exercised its strength and ability. Thus, we are not acquainted with the daring and efficiency of the personnel of the navy as we are to some extent in the case of the army.

We learn something of how the navy carries on, however, from the story of the rescue of American soldiers and members of the crew of the wrecked transport Otranto by the British destroyer Mounsey. It is a story that might well be considered worthy of a place by itself in the traditions of the British navy, for it is a story of heroism and naval skill unsurpassed, yet it is only an incident of the navy's work. For four years the units of the navy have been meeting unusual circumstances with just the kind of skill and daring that enabled the Mounsey to perform such a notable rescue.

The best way, perhaps, to describe the work of the navy is to say that for four years it has been performing the impossible —for, things it has done would have been considered impossible before their doing. In the case of the Otranto rescue, the commander of the wrecked transport warned the youthful commander of the destroyer, Lieutenant Craven, of the apparent futility of attemping to take off the soldiers and sailors and of the almost certain disaster he was courting. But to the naval officer, with his own vessel disabled by the terrible storm, nothing was impossible till it had been proved so, while as for the danger to himself and his own vessel, it didn't cause him to even hesitate. It seemed almost certain that if he approached the transport he would be smashed against her, but he did approach, and by his own seamanship and the cleverness of the transport commander in providing a buffer of life boats he avoided the seemingly inevitable crushing. Brushed away by the waves from the wounded ship, he brought his destroyer back again and again, until having come alongside of the transport for the fourth time, he had his little vessel filled to the last square foot with survivors. He had saved the lives of 310 American soldiers, 236 members of the transport's crew, 30 French sailors and one British officer.

No doubt Lieutenant Craven has received many messages of congratulation on his exploit, and the chances are that they surprise and embarrass him. The young men who do these things do not consider they are doing the wonderful. To them it is only their duty. Lieutenant Craven probably considers the saving of those hundreds of lives was only an incident of his duty, although to a man less daring and less resourceful, it might have seemed impossible to carry out the rescue.

The navy is full of such men as this young commander, men who are ready for any emergency, who have initiative, who never hesitate and never count the cost. Particularly the destroyer division, the commanders of which are young men. Any one of scores of them would have done just as Lieutenant Craven did, although not all of them might have been as successful. Not until the war is over and the secrets of the navy are uncovered will be know how wonderful is the personnel of the iron wall of Britain.—Ottawa Journal.

TO FARMERS

The Government has sent out an appeal to the Canadian people to buy at home. Why? Because when we buy abroad more than we sell we have to pay a premium on the excess, in addition to the price of the goods. This is known as an adverse rate of exchange. We have bought four hundred million dollars' worth more from the United States than we have sold to it. The rate of exchange is 2 per cent. against us. In other words, we are paying 2 per cent. on four hundred millions of dollars, or eight million dollars, which means that if we owe a great deal of money for goods bought we have to pay extra for the privilege. If we keep this up Canada will bleed to death. Please inquire into this matter at once.

DESECRATED GRAVES OF MEZIERES

(By Lieut. Frederick Sleath.)

Mezieres is a small village ten kilometres south of Villers Bretonneux. There are many other villages in the neighbourhood, some of them much more important. But to Mezieres at present is attached a peculiar significance. For there the Germans have perpetrated one of the cruelest and most cold-blooded acts of sacrilege that will ever be associated with their name.

The village had the misfortune to fall into their hands during the German offensive in the early part of the summer; and until the subsequent French and British successes drove the enemy out of that region, the place lay a kilometre or two behind the German line. In that short period the Germans systematically picked out the more elaborate graves in the cemetery and broke open everyone of them.

All the well-to-do people in France—and before the war the greater part of the population could be brought under this heading — possess family vaults in their local cemeteries, consisting of deep pits in the ground lined with brick, and closed by a great slab of stone. In Mezieres these vaults are mainly situated on the side of the cemetery nearest the village. That is the side which has been handled most severely. And though I searched very carefully on August 29th, 1918, the day I went there, not one of the graves having any pretentions to wealth whatsoever seemed to have escaped desecration.

The slabs covering the smaller vaults had been pried off by hand or by lever. In some cases they had been broken by a blow. The larger slabs—huge sets of stone requiring many men to lift them— had simply been shattered by mobile charges of explosive burst on top of them, and a fragment removed to give access to the tomb.

In one or two of the graves coffins can be seen broken open and rifled. Others are entirely empty, though the tomb stones testify that interments have taken place. The Germans have either removed the coffins for more systematic looting, or they have pitched out the dead into some common charnal hole and carried off the coffins for the sake of the material of which they were made.

Had Mezieres been the centre of bitter and long continued fighting like any firing line village of the old days of trench warfare, one would only too gladly attribute the damage to the ordinary wear and tear of war; for even after four years' experience of the Germans and their ways it is difficult to believe that any human beings could perpetrate such vandalism. But I have seen many graveyards in the firing line, and not by the greatest stretch of imagination could one tenth of the havoc at Mezieres be put down to shell fire.

There has been no excessive fighting at Mezieres. Apart from the church, which of course is destroyed, the village has suffered comparatively little. In any case he cemetery is right out in the open country some distance away from the nearest house.

The damage to each grave moreover is much too local to have been caused by shell fire, only the outer stone-work of the tomb itself having been harmed. Besides, bursting shells do not make coffins disappear without leaving any traces, and the inner linings of the vaults are untouched by splinters, the bricks being as clean and new as the day they were laid. And what other significance can be placed on the fact of the damage being almost entirely confined to the wealthier portion of the graveyard, than that the motive of the Germans was desire for loot, or sheer bestiality.

At the time of my visit to Mezieres a company of French soldiers were quartered in the place. They were fine big fellows, whom any country would have been proud to have in its service. They glanced in a kindly way at my Scottish bonnet, and with a courtesy which we Britons have learned to describe as "typically French," they pointed out the way to the cemetery.

I could not help thinking as I walked down the long road that these fellows were singularly devoid of the gay swagger characteristic of troops I had noticed in other French billeting places. But when I saw the cemetery I understood their gravity. They watched me walk back down the long, village street, and let me go in silence. I had the feeling of having suddenly entered a house of mourning. Yet I felt glad that it would not be my lot to face those fellows when next they went into the firing line.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner,
City.

Dear Sir,—I have been reading Mr. Burnham's advertisement to farmers about the adverse rate of exchange which I do not understand very much about. Today on account of it being warm I was trying to save fuel and not do any cooking for dinner. I thought I would buy half a pound of ham but I found that the cooked ham with the rind on cost sixty four cents a price which is more than I could afford to pay. Mr Burnham says that if they keep up this buying of foreign goods Canada will bleed to death. If the Pork Packers keep up the price of meat the people will not have enough blood left to even make a case of anaemia. Could not Mr. Burnham get a petition prepared asking the Government to fix the price of meat and other things people requite to use.

I have noticed that those who have war contracts are driving around in fine big shining automobiles, and this looks as though price fixing would not squeeze any one very much but might help people who do not get enough to eat.

Yours truly,
SOLDIER'S WIFE.

To the Editor of The Examiner,

Dear Sir,—A writer who signs himself "Reader" has put a letter in The Review which that journal might very well have left unpublished The letter is headed "Is Faith Failing?" and goes on to say that things have come to a nice pass when during an epidemic it is as a remedy not necessary to attend churches but to close them up and to subsitute liquor as the sovereign remedy. It is true that the "good old days" when people headed by their clergy went out swinging censers and reciting prayers and doing penance to stay plagues have gone, having been swept away by knowledge but why throw into the garbage the last remnant of religious dependence by such sentiments as expressed in The Review. It is true that God did not make the mess of His creation that people used to think, but established it according to law which is as much divine law if not more than those things given to Moses as laws which do not refer to the future life from beginning to end, and which Moses who having fallen to disgrace, was not permitted to introduce to the promised land. It is time that the day of the mystic is at an end and that God is no longer divided up into three Gods but is one God, and the relics of Jewish polytheism have been swept aside along with that people themselves but why laugh it all away? Let us resign it all with reverence and let us know that our many old mistakes (such as infant damnation) should teach us that God is all around us—that there is nothing that is not His creation. When we cease proclaiming everything here a failure and God's creation of us day by day a strange and peculiar proceeding, and that we want to get away to Heaven out of this hole as fast as possible, we shall show more reverence and common sense. The facts are that churches are struck by lightning, that Providence does not "temper the wind to the shorn lamb." Let us take what He has given us and make the best of it knowing that the God of the boundless depths of space gave it to us and put us in it Let us not flaunt our knowledge in God's face by proclaiming a doctrine of prohibition in anything which He could have proclaimed if He had wished but which He did not. We would have done it sure--but He didn't What's that to us? We know better (sic).

TRUE REVERENCE

REASON WHY LABOR SHOULD BE REPRESENTED ON ALL LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLIES.

Now that the city of Peterboro can boast of an Independent Labor party also I understand are likely to put up labor candidates for election to the municipal council, it may be of interest to review, labor's relation, to Industrial Capital. The history of industrial capital, shows, that it starts out by making producers, subservient to its needs of expansion, and places the satisfaction of this need, above the satisfaction of the wants of producers, man becomes the tool of capital. The profits of the capitalist, formerly a side issue from the view point of social progress now has become the all obscribing incentive and regulator of history.

The accumulation of industrial money capital, and the eminent law of its development, assume the role of social pilot, which steers the ship of mankind, over the reckles course of profits, out of the over sweated worker human flesh and blood. In the beginning; it is mainly the working classes, which receive the saverest blows, from the result of the capitalist law of accumulation, so long as capitalism lasts. But the ruling classes are by no means exempt from its uncontrolled fury. In proportion as capitalism develops, it is brought home with increasing directness, and peraistance, to the capitalist mind, that "capital is stronger than the capitalist," and, that capital, in its turn, is subject to the law of its own mechanical making, which it cannot control. The farther capitalism proceeds on its historical way, the more heavily do its uncontrolled laws, fall upon the capitalist himself, they become dangerous to his existence; compel him to resist this danger, by opposing the natural direction of development from which they spring; and thereby to undermine capital itself, and so hasten his own downfall. The same law, which built up the structure of capitalism during its ascending period, turns during its descending curve into the means of destroying it, and the capitalist class.

To the same extent do these laws turn from destructive enemies of the working class, into constructive aids to its organization, education and supremacy, although they will never cease to press hard upon the worker. Every capitalist wants to make as much capital as possible. In order to make profit he must squeeze surplus value, out of his employees, and sell the products containing it in the competitive market. The more surplus value he can squeeze from his employees, the greater will be his opportunity to gather profits, from the sale of his commodities.

Surplus value cannot be increased by any other means, than that of increasing the intensity of labor, together with its productivity, or of increasing the surplus labor, at the expense of necessary labor, or of prolonging the day's work, or by using all these means together. The most effective means of intensifying the productive power of labor, is the introduction of improved machinery. Hence concentration and centralization, of capital, sound the doom of the middle class, as a socially essential element in production; although this class never disappears entirely, but merely changes its character, by being transformed from independent producers, into dependent agents and employes of the great capitalist. In proportion as the middle class loses its importance in process of social production the great capitalist, and the working proletariat, become the typical representatives of capitalism. The competition of capitalists between themselves, and the elimination of the weaker capitalist leads, not only to the centralization of the instruments of production, but also the centralization of money, in the hands of fewer and fewer magnates; and to the extent of this centralization of means of production, and money continues, the unemployed problem is intensified. The markets are glutted and every few years, a commercial crisis, and confusion reigns in the capitalist camp. Meanwhile the working people thrown out of employment, stand, shivering and hungry before the mountain of wealth. They themselves have produced monopolies in the hands of great corporations trusts may check the tendency of rate of profit to fall (I) by depressing wages below the average value of labor power. (2) by selling commodities above their value; (3) by systemizing all kinds of adulteration and eliminating waste. This Marxian theory of capital is fast becoming realized fact and only the working class can solve this problem.

Suppose you are thirty-five years old, and carrying $10,000 of Life Insurance costing you, say $300.00 per year, would you not like, (in case of serious accident or illness destroying your earning power) to have the payment of this premium paid for you as long as you live?

To All Who Are Interested in Union Evangelistic Campaign

A Word of Advice by the Rev. A. J. Thomas, Pastor of George Street Church.

We regret exceedingly that owing to the prevailing epidemic, it has been necessary to cancel all our evangelistic services for a few days. We heartily sympathize with any action which is for the physical well-being of the community and hope that this precaution will help to accomplish the desired result.

We trust that in the meantime you will continue to make the campaign a matter of earnest consideration and we would suggest that at the Sunday service in all the churches which are co-operating, there be united prayer that under the providence of God conditions will be so improved that following the present temporary changing of our plans, it will be possible to carry on the work continuously to the end. There is justification for such a prayer, not only in the fact of the Divine Omnipotence, but also in the character of the movement in which we are engaged. It has been planned with a view to the highest interests of all the people. It is in harmony with the spirit of the gospel. Already much good has been accomplished and there is reason to believe that still greater results will be realized. It would be a moral calamity if the city should miss the spiritual uplift which such a campaign by the grace of God can contribute.

Let us therefore pray that the work may go on and let us associate with it our earnest plea that not only in this, but in every land, the ravaging of disease may be stayed.

Yours in the Master's name,

REV. AMOS J. THOMAS,
Chairman of Executive of Evangelistic Campaign.

PETERBORO RED CROSS SOCIETY

Conditions in Holland for the interned prisoners are improving, according to a cable from the Chief Commissioner Overseas. Major Hume Blake was sent by the Society to Holland to look into the treatment being accorded the men there, and as a result of his visit bully beef has been added to the daily issue for each man, while tobacco, cigarettes and soap are being sent by the Red Cross Society.

Word has been received from the Central Prisoners of War Committee to the effect that the War Office have sanctioned the despatch of one pair of socks in the "personal parcel" as an alternative to the muffler or pair of mittens that may be sent once a quarter in this parcel. The socks must take the place of the article formerly permitted, and cannot go in addition.

The postal censor in London has informed the Canadian Red Cross Commissioner that tobacco cannot be sent privately to prisoners interned in neutral countries.

Thanks from Serbia.

On October 1 the Chief Commissioner Overseas cabled that since July the Society has despatched 5,000 cases of supplies to Paris; 500 to Italy, to whom a further 4,500 will go; 650 cases to Belgium, and 500 cases to Serbia. Canada is one of the few warring countries in a position to provide a surplus of Red Cross supplies and from her extra effort the sorely tried allied nations will receive all essential aid.

"Tell the Canadians that their kindness to our poor France makes us weep," writes a medical officer from a French hospital which had received some cases of Red Cross supplies.

Through the British Red Cross Commissioner at Salonika has come thanks from the Director of Medical Service of the Serbian army for the supplies which he had received from the Canadian Society.

Christmas Preparations.

Christmas for the soldier overseas, in hospital or trench or prison camp, will be made as bright as possible. The Red Cross is sending to each man in hospital a Christmas stocking, and a half pound plum pudding, made in the Hamilton fruit kitchen. To each prisoner in Germany the Society is sending a special Christmas parcel, containing as far as possible, the special delicacies of the season.

Red Cross workers will be interested in learning that the plum puddings for the men in the trenches are being made also in the Fruit Kitchen at Hamilton. The puddings are the gift of the Canadian War Contingent Association of Manitoba, newly organized and working in co-operation with theManitoba Red Cross. One hundred thousand pounds of delicious pudding, made of the best of ingredients, will be the offering of Manitoba. Each three pound tin bears a gay label of greeting from "The Prairie Province."

SPANISH INFLUENZA RAPIDLY SPREADING

Persons Weak and Rundown Easy Victims—Fortify Yourself Against it by Taking Tanlac.

According to late reports issued by State and Federal health authorities of the United States the Spanish influenza epidemic is rapidly spreading to all parts of North America, and it now seems that practically all of Canada will be seriously affected before it runs its course.

It has not only become a great and terrifying menace to the public health but unless checked, it is apt to seriously affect progress of war work in all its various departments. Already the American Shipping Board has announced that ten per cent. of its workers had been affected.

The disease has made its greatest progress in the East where it has claimed its victims by the thousands. Reports from other sections, however, are equally alarming; and both civil and military authorities have warned the public to take every precaution to prevent its further spread. In many cities schools, churches and theatres have been closed and public gatherings of all kinds forbidden.

Medical authorities agree that people who are weak and rundown are the earliest victims of the influenza epidemic. If you find yourself tired, weak and losing flesh, or if you are in a generally run-down condition, or if you catch cold easily this warning should be heeded promptly. You are really in great danger,—because the germ of the disease is very catching and you are apt to fall an easy victim if you come in contact with the germs. People who are well and strong are not likely to contract the disease because they are able to throw it off. The common-sense way to keep from taking it therefore is to fortify the system against attack by building up the constitution.

In other words to use the old adage, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." And if you are in a sub-normal condition the proper thing to do is to begin immediately to build up your powers of resistance To accomplish this, nothing on earth will strengthen you and build you up like Tanlac, the powerful reconstructive tonic, which contains the very elements needed by the system to give you fighting strength and ward off the influenza germ.

First of all Tanlac begins its action by creating a good healthy appetite for wholesome, nourishing food, and assists every organ of the body to perform its natural functions, thus helping to build up health and strength in the natural way.

Tanlac is also the ideal strengthening tonic for persons who are suffering from the after effects of influenza, grippe, or bronchial troubles and hundreds of thousands are using it daily with the most gratifying results.

In connection with the Tanlac treatment, it is necessary to keep the bowels open by taking Tanlac Laxative Tablets, samples of which are included with every bottle of Tanlac It is also important that the every day rules of hygiene be observed; that is, sleep in well ventilated rooms, get plenty of fresh air and exercise and keep away from crowds.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co Ltd., in Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Particulars Concerning the Death of Peterboro Soldier

Sergt. W. A. Murney, M.M., Was Killed by a Sniper's Bullet—Missed by His Comrades

Mr. George Murney of South Monaghan, has received the following letter concerning his son, Sergeant Murney who was killed in action.

France, September 10, 1918.

Geo. Murney Esq.,
South Monaghan,
Ontario.

Dear Mr Murney,—It is with the deepest regret that I attempt to extend the sympathy of the battalion in the loss which we and you have recently sustained by the death in action of your son, Sergeant W. H. Murney, M.M. He passed away at about 3 o'clock on the afternoon of August 28th, when our battalion was attacking a German position. From the particulars given me by one of his comrades, Sergeant-Major C. Byrne, M.M. he was killed by a German sniper's bullet passing through the lower part of his face and neck.

We have been advised that your son's body has been interred in a British cemetery, not far from the scene of action in territory not long since occupied by the enemy.

"D" company to which the late Sergeant Murney belonged speaks very highly of his work on all ocasions, but particularly at Amiens on August 8th and on August 26, 27 and 28th when our battalion made three successive attacks. His outstanding work as a leader was particularly noticed in the fight east of Amiens. This was brought to the notice of the Brigade and Divisional commanders and your deceased son was awarded a bar to his Military Medal The announcement of this appeared in orders after his death. It seems so hard that a man of his type should not be spared to wear this decoration which he so truly earned.

As I write I think of the early days of this battalion when Serg. Murney enlisted with us at Kingston. His work on all occasions, up to the time of his death tempered of the highest and best among Canadians. After the healing of his wounds on three occasions he lost no time on rejoining his battalion, and at the time of his death he was considered one of our most gallant and trustworthy Sergeants, having the confidence of his officers of the N.C.O.'s and men of his company.

As one of the original officers of this battalion I extend to you the heartfelt sympathy of all who knew and respected your son during the period of service with this battalion. Men of his type are a real loss to us, and their example is ever before those left to "carry on".

H. E PENSE,
Lieut. Colonel Commanding 21st Canadian Battalion.

Protect Yourself Against Spanish Influenza

A Dangerous Epidemic That is Prevalent Throughout Canada

This disease which is now prevalent throughout Ontario, is "Epidemic Catarrh," characterized by acute inflammation of the mucous membrane of the air passages, attended by severe constitutional disturbances followed by general debility and frequently develops into an attack of pneumonia.

It is highly infectious and every precaution should oe taken to avoid contracting this dreaded disease.

Don't put unclean things into the mouth. Keep the hands clean, and wash the mouth and gargle the throat once or twice a day with "PYROLL."

While this epidemic is prevalent, people cannot be too cautious and careful and everybody, and especially those attending schools or places where a number of people gather, should use "PYROLL," which is recommended by doctors and dentists as the best antiseptic and mouth wash to prevent this disease. mwf-6d 82

Kinmount Fears Minstrels May Carry "Flu" Germs

KINMOUNT, Oct. 16. — Still the weather keeps cold and changeable. It will not be strange if we have an epidemic of la grippe, as nearly every one you meet is suffering from severe colds. If you go out of doors for a short time you are sure to have the sneezes very soon after.

Three of our soldiers returned on Thursday. They are Pte. F. W. McKinley, wounded by shell; Pte. McIntyre, wounded by a ball through the thigh, and Pte. J. Mansfield suffering from rheumatism. Lieut. W. Mark is home also.

We understand that a troupe of colored people intend to hold a performance on Monday evening next in the C.O.F. Hall. What a great number of people are wondering is, What is our council going to do about it? They cannot surely intend this to take place, and it is certainly the duty of the Board of Health to guard the people by hindering this troupe from putting in an appearance in our village. Montreal, Toronto, Peterboro and Lindsay are suffering from this epidemic, and are taking precautions by closing churches, schools and places of amusement, and in preventing outsiders from bringing in amusements to gather a crowd. Are we wiser than they? The old adage that an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure is applicable here. We may not yet have to close the churches and schools, but it is the duty of those having the charge of affairs to prevent as far as possible strangers coming in and gathering crowds in heated rooms. No person knows how many of those carry the dread disease which carries death in its trail. It is rumoured that there is a case already in Minden.

Mr. Chessel and Miss B. Chessel of Toronto are visiting friends in Kinmount.

Bitten by a Dog.

Gordon Stewart, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Stewart was attacked by a cross dog owned by Mr. Chalmers. He was badly bitten in several places, and in one place the flesh was hanging from the wound. Dr. Frost attended him and he is doing nicely after having to remain in bed for a week.

There was no service in the Anglican church last Sunday, owing to the illness of Mr. McIntosh.

Family Reunion.

Rev. Mr. Williams and Mrs. Williams have returned from Woodstock where they took part in the family reunion. One brother returned home after having been at the front for nearly four years, he having enlisted as soon as war was declared. Another brother has been in training in New York and also made a visit to his home at this time.

STRATFORD VICTIMS

STRATFORD, Oct. 13.—Four deaths due of Spanish influenza occurred here over the week end.

The spread of the epidemic has been more rapid during the past couple of days. At the Grand Trunk shops 300 men were off work on Saturday and some plants have been shut down entirely owing to sickness among their help.

WHY PEOPLE FEEL DEPRESSED IN THE COLD WEATHER

Why is tiredness and langour so prevalent just now? A physician explained that the cold of winter drives blood from the surface of the body to the liver. Normally one-fourth of the whole blood supply is in the liver, and when more blood is accumulated in that organ everything goes wrong.

No better remedy exists than Dr. Hamilton's Pills which are composed of such vegetable extracts as Mandrake and Butternut, and possess wonderful liver stimulating powers. It's a marvel the way Hamilton's Pills clear the blood of the poisonous humors. They put new life into worn out bodies, build up the appetite, bring back a reserve of nerve energy, tide folks over the cold days of winter and the depressing days of spring. For your health and body comfort get a 25c. box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills today.

In the REALM of FASHION'S FANCIES

WITH THE SPOT LIGHT OF CHIEF INTEREST TURNED UPON BLOUSES AND SKIRTS

A Boundless Array of Beautiful Blouses

Showing All That Fashion Counts Dearest in Blouses Now at the Present Time —Collarless Necks, Bead and Silk Embroidery, Fringe and Apron Collars.

Georgette crepe still holds sway as fabric of first choice, with crepe-de-Chine filling the demand for a weave of greater substance. Flesh pink and white are all-supreme for general use, while to "match-up" with tailored suits are featured the browns, blues, greens and greys of current vogue.

Round, square and V-shaped necks are all in evidence, many of them rejoicing in the fact that they own not a trace of a collar. Bead and silk embroidery is lavishly applied, fringe adorns a few most beguiling models and wee vestee fronts and apron fronts appear as two of the modish details.

When donned with one of the fashionable brown suits this blouse of heavy brown georgette crepe will complete a striking costume. The round neck in front with side panel collar is one of the predominant Autumn styles. It is trimmed with gold silk embroidery and tucks. Price... $13.50

"Apron panels" have become a veritible pass-word in the realm of fashionable garments, and a pass-word which this adorable blouse has by heart. The material is georgette and the color is the most wonderful shade of coral. It has an apron panel both front and back, and fastens at the side. The round neck is bound with white satin, also the sleeves open at the elbow. Price $13.75

Distinctly effective is this little blouse of maize-colored georgette, effective in its simplicity. Tiny pin tucks fall gracefully away from the round collarless neck both front and back, forming a yoke shape. It is buttoned out on the shoulder with small white satin buttons and loops. Truly a charming little blouse that can be worn with almost any skirt. Price..... $12.50

If you require a smart shirt waist of a strictly tailored design, we have them carried out in washable crepe-de-Chine of excellent quality. The convertible collar and plain shirt sleeves are very neat. They are in different colored stripe patterns and are priced at..... $7.50

Taupe crepe-de-Chine of heavy quality makes an attractive and practical blouse. This one has a wee vestee in front with groups of pin tucks on either side. Touches of mauve and grey silk embroidery relieve the plainness. Fastened with pearl buttons. Price $8.95

Novelty and style have been combined in a charming skirt of rich black charmeuse. A draped overskirt curves up at one side and falls into a long point at the other from which hangs a gold and black tassel ornament. It is so reasonably priced at $19.00

PANELS, PLEATS and DRAPERIES Make for New Effects in Skirts

But Still Maintaining the Slender Silhouette of the Current Mode

The separate skirt emphasizes the practical note of the present styles. And it has many versions, as you will notice in the variety that is offered in our skirt section.

The all-conquering modes of panels and pleats appear in various forms and soft drapes are an interesting feature of some of the more elaborate models.

Plaids make their reappearance once again, and whenever there are plaids there are pleats, box pleats, knife pleats and small pleats.

Satin skirts are very popular, while charmeuse and taffeta are responsible for the appeal made by numerous others.

The popularity of pleats is not to be wondered at when you notice the graceful lines of this skirt of broadcloth in navy blue. It has a deep crushed girdle and is pleated at the sides. Cable stitching is used around the novelty pockets. Priced at $25.00

As imitation is a sincere form of flattery, we feel sure a Highlander would appreciate the flattery in this pleated skirt of plaid, green and grey in colors. It has a plain panel in front and is box-pleated all around. Priced at $22.50

A lovely soft quality of black French serge, is used for one of our most exclusive models. The vogue of buttons is plainly visible in this skirt. They trim the belt, which is formed of strapings, and run right to the hem down both sides. Price..... $24.00

NEW ARMY ORGANIZED TO FIGHT THE "FLU"

Sisters of Service Formed at Toronto—Branches Are Required in All Parts of the Province to Deal With the Influenza Epidemic.

TORONTO, Oct. 15. — "Sisters of Service,' is the very euphonious name under which a new provincial organization has been formed with a view to providing care for the victims of the influenza epidemic. The Hon. W. D. McPherson presided at the inaugural meeting held in Parliament Buildings at 10 o"clock yesterday morning, and about sixty volunteers for service registered, comprising untrained women, V. A. D.'s, nurses, doctors and heads of organizations, each eager to help in her own capacity. The Provincial Secretary outlined the situation caused by the outbreak of influenza, and explained the emergency which made it necessary to call in all available assistance for nursing those afflicted with the malady. Dr. C. J. Copp told what facilities the St. John Ambulance Brigade had for furthering this end; Col. J. W. S. McCullough, the Provincial Health Officer; Dr. Helen MacMurchy, Dr. Margaret Patterson, on behalf of the St. John Ambulance Brigade, and the Women's Institutes; Miss Potts, Superintendent of the Hospital for Sick Children Miss Flaws of Wellesley Hospital; Mrs. W. B. Hendry, President of the Women's Auxiliary to the Army Medical Corps, and Mrs. A. E. Gooderham, President of the Daughters of the Empire, all spoke briefly offering to help in every way they could.

The City Situation.

Dr. C. J. Hastings, Dr. Risk and Alderman Cowan spoke on the situation in the city. Dr. Hastings said:

"We must conscript every human being in Toronto to play his or her part. The enemy is comparatively unfamiliar, and most ubiquitous in character. To be on the watch is the great thing. Precautions should be taken on the first appearance of the disease. It is hard to control the spread of it but the mortality may be materially lessened by staying indoors as soon as the first symptoms appear."

At the same time the Medical Officer of Health warned against overfatigue and worry, saying that nothing lowers the power of resistance like worry.

He told of the preparations of Mossop's Hotel and the Arlington Hotel, which would give accommodation for two or three hundred more patients. In the latter building, although only secured on Sunday at noon, electric connection had been made and coal put in by night. The carpets were then taken out, mattresses disinfected and linen laundered, and all would be ready for occupation by Tuesday night or Wednesday morning.

Dr. Risk said that many young people had been sent out of rooming houses when they contracted the disease and had been unable to find hospital accommodation, but the local Board of Health had now given instructions that no influenza patient could be moved without its knowledge.

Province-Wide Co-operation.

A committee meeting followed the general meeting and it was arranged that Dr. Margaret Patterson and Dr. Copp draw up a syllabus of lectures to be given twice a day, beginning at three o'clock yesterday afternoon for which occasion the Private Bills Committee Room was converted into a classroom, with a bed, blackboard and all equipment provided. Dr. Margaret Patterson delivered the first lecture, at which 47 were present. To-day's lectures will be given at the same place at ten and three, and all are welcome, whether able to volunteer their services as nurses or not. Dr. Copp desires that holders of V.A.D. certificates shall come too to refresh their minds.

The association formed and plans made were discussed in committee, as the nucleus of an organization of which branches can rapidly be formed all over the province. Telegrams explaining this were sent out in all directions at the conclusion of the meeting and contained also the syllabus for lectures to be given simultaneously with those in Toronto, the main themes of these to be the same but the details to be filled in by the local branches.

Municipalities requiring the services of the Ontario Sisters of Service, it was stated, would be expected to pay a reasonable wage. Local Boards of Health have power to pay for service of this nature, and will probably do so in the case of poor patients. People able to pay, it was felt, would do so gladly. It was suggested that a fair remuneration would be $2 a day with maintenance and transportation.

Arrangements were also made for badges to be designed in the shape of armlets, which will be given only when the volunteer fulfils her first engagement. The design will probably take the form of a large "O" for Ontario, with the S.O.S. within this.

Officers Elected.

The Provincial Secretary, the Hon. W. D. McPherson, was elected President of the new organization, and Col. J. W. S. McCullough, chairman of the Executive. The Vice-Presidents represent many large organizations and many parts of the province —D. C. J. Copp, Mrs. R. D. Donald, Mrs. A. E. Gooderham, Toronto; Mrs. Hunter Ogilvie, Kingston, Mrs. J. B. McKillop, London; Miss Hazel Todd, Ottawa; Dr. Annie Ross, Guelph; Mrs. A. W. Bowlby, Windsor; Miss Fannie Hodson, St.Thomas; Miss Louise Thompson, St.Catharines; Miss Read, Peterboro; Mrs. Harry Carpenter, Hamilton; Miss A. C. Cadey, Cobourg; Dr. Margaret Patterson, Dr. Helen MacMurchy, Miss Flaws, Miss Potts, Mrs. W. B. Hendry, Mrs. H. B. Plumptre, and Miss Edith Mairs, Toronto.

The Secretary-Treasurer is Mr. C. S. Newman, and the Executive Committee includes Dr. C. J. Hastings and the members of the Toronto Board of Health, the District Presidents of Women's Institutes throughout the province, the Lady Divisional Superintendents of the St. John Ambulance Brigade, of whom there are fifteen in different parts of the province, Mrs. Arthur VanKoughnet, Mrs. Adam Ballantyne and Mrs. J. W. Bundy.

Soldiers Harvest Crops at Camp Dix

(By United Press)

Camp Dix, N. J., Oct. 16.—It's harveet time here, and the crops from the demonstration garden, of the national war garden commission are being taken to cover The demonstration garden has demonstrated that the soldier can raise his own food to a great extent, and that "food f.o.b. the kitchen door" is a valuable asset to any home or camp.

Estimates announced at a harvest luncheon show that dispite a late start, the crop value will be $25,000 At this luncheon were Gen. Hugh L. Scott and staff; Charles Lathrop, Pack, president of the national war garden commission; Col Edmond Tompkins and Col. H. E. Wilkins, New York; E. L. D. Seymore of the foreign bureau of the committee on public information; S. W. Harley of Cleveland, representing the motor transport service; W. S Tyler, federal food administrator for New Jersey; Col. J. E. McIntosh; Col. Norris Slayton and Maj. R. C. Griswold of the quarter-master general's office; Maj. Charles R. Van Etten of the inspector general's office.

All these men are tremendously interested in the demonstration garden that Capt. E. V. Champlin and Lieut. John F. Bonner have made possible. With 5,000,000 men in the army and at a cost of forty cents a day to feed a soldier, food valued at $2,000,000 will have to be handled every twenty-four hours

Indications are that the fine showing here means that hundreds of acres will be put under cultivation at various camps next year. In addition to the vegetable crops, 481,000 pounds of hay has been gathered. There are 300,000 ears of sweet corn, 60,000 pounds of string beans, 480,000 pounds of potatoes.

Owing to the large volume of advertising coming to the Examiner and our inability to get help extra quickly, we must ask our advertisers to place their copy for their advertising in the hands of the printer the day previous to publication. Otherwise we may not be able to handle it satisfactorily.

Engineers' Club Held a Meeting

First Gathering of the Season.

At the first meeting this season of the Engineers' Club, held in the Public Library on Thursday evening, Mr. F. W. Doan of the Bell Telephone Co., gave a most interesting talk on the development of communication over long distance since the dawn of civilization. Beginning with the stone hieroglyphics of the ancients which were carried about for the dissemination of information, Mr. Doan traced improvements in transmitting intelligence down through the centuries to the present day, culminating in the telephone and its intricate devices for enabling ordinary conversation to be carried on over thousands of miles.

Fires on the hill tops were used for war signalling by the ancient peoples, and some very ingenious though primitive devices were shown. The French developed a system of reading signals with the telescope and relaying on to another telescope, thus passing the message on from one high point to another until its destination was reached.

The early types of telephones as developed by Mr. Graham Bell and his assistant, Mr. Watson, were shown and illustrated by models. A series of fifty lantern slides further illustrated the subject.

The members who were present enjoyed the talk, and those who were not able to be present missed a good evening.

The next meeting of the Club will be on the second Thursday in November.

Motorized Hospital for Battlefield Work

(By United Press)

Paris, Sept. 13. (By Mail.)—The first complete mobile operating unit which is expected to save the lives of hundreds of American soldiers by giving them quick medical attention on the field, is now in service at the front.

During heavy fighting the entire outfit is able to move wherever needed within a few hours and begin performing operations. The unit was sent to France by the division of general surgedy in the surgeon-general's office.

The unit consists of five sections, each of which is a complete operating group. The sections move on motor trucks with trailers and the personnel is carried by automobiles. There is a big double canvas tent with metal flooring, which forms the operating pavilion Other trucks, carrying a sterilizing outfit, an X-ray outfit, medicines, drugs and surgical instruments, groups of surgeons, nurses and orderlies. A number of mechanics accompany the caravan to care for the trucks and keep the entire outfit in repair. One truck carries a thirty-horse-power boiler which supplies power for an electric light plant and for operation of the X-ray.

In less than an hour after arriving where needed the operation pavilion can be erected and the operating room ready to receive patients. Each section is capable of handling a hundred cases in twenty-four hours. During slack times the unit is quartered near a base hospital, ready to rush to any point upon call.

In each section of the unit there are three majors, nine captains or first lieutenants, one chief nurse, two operating room nurses and seven assistants, besides sergeants, mechanicians, two cooks and thirty-five privates. For the entire unit there are sixty-two officers, fifty nurses and two hundred enlisted men, exclusive of the mechanical repair unit. The anaesthetists with the traveling hospital took a special six week's course in administering anaesthetics at the Mayo Hospital, Rochester, Minn.

There are four heavy trucks with each section; the power truck, the sterilizing truck and two trucks to haul the operating pavilion and supplies including a complete camp kitchen.

The enlisted personnel is composed largely of students of the University of California, trained at Allentown, Pa.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens so Naturally Nobody can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even colour, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the same troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Yanks Enjoy "Chow Time" Most of All

(By United Press.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 14. (By Mail.)"Chow time" means one of the most picturesque sights along the front, especially with the Americans. It seems to mean more to the Americans than to any other army, perhaps because American "grub" is better.

Happen along through a ruined village or a woods in an American sector, fifteen minutes before "chow time" and you would think their place deserted. Probably there wouldn't be more than one or two stray doughboys in sight.

Come along fifteen minutes ltear and you wonder "where in thunder they all come from."

They'll be lined up, and in front of each line there'll be a field kitchen steaming away with a perspiring army cook dishing out grub that makes you want to "grab some tools and get in line," too

There's lots of animation at "chow time" among the Americans. A crowd of Frenchmen is quiet while eating, the only time French soldiers are quiet. They munch their bread and meat and vegetables and drink their wine in silence.

Not so with the Americans. It's a big time. First of all there's speculation on "what's to chow for today" There's variety in Uncle Sam's army menus.

Then, as they sit around on the ground, on ruins, or under trees, and that satisfied feeling of having eaten a good meal grows upon them, there's lots of life and joking among the doughboys.

"Doughboy chow" is good. Usually there is soup. Then there are meat and vegetables, usually two kinds There are always big slices of white bread and coffee. Nine times out ten there's dessert, probably pudding or fruit.

Each man has a pan with a handle that folds into it, and a cup. Some way they get some of everything in a four course meal into these two instruments and never mix foods. Only one of these "war experts" could do that.

The New Better and Safer Way to Wash Your Hair

Dandruff is the primary cause of falling hair. This disagreeable condition of the scalp and hair glands is almost certain to cause temporary or permanent baldness.

Loss of hair may also be ascribed to the use of improper shampoos containing irritating substances, animal oils and alcohol, any of which may produce gradual decay of the hair.

Don't use a stale liquid preparation that contains too much alkali (a harmful irritant). The surest, safest and easiest way is to make your own liquid. Buy a carton of Velnor at any drug store. Dissolve one of the small packets into half glass of fresh water and you will have an abundance of non-injurious liquid that will relieve itching of the scalp, falling hair and dandruff also improves the natural color of the hair. Velnor being in concentrated form never spoils and will keep forever.

Mrs. Gish and Daughter on Firing Line

Hairbreadth Escapes From German Shrapnel and Gas.

Under actual fire in the British and French trenches at intervals covering a period of more than eighteen months was the nerve-racking experience of Lillian and Dorothy Gish, noted motion picture stars, who with their mother accompanied David Wark Griffith to the very front line trenches of France to secure the important scenes for "Hearts of the World," the new Griffith masterpiece to be seen at The Grand.

The Gish family, with Robert Harron, Josephine Crowell, Kate Bruce, Master Ben Alexander (six years of age), Robert Anderson, George Fawcett, George A. Siegmann and others who appear in "Hearts of the World" were under bombardment on three separate occasions, and in one instance the attack lasted for four hours. It is interesting also to learn that Mr. Griffith was the first American to enter the front line trenches. This was of course before the United States entered the world war.

For eighteen long months these players were with Mr. Griffith, and their stories of suffering are by all odds the most interesting ever told by players for the motion picture camera. As a result of their experience, the two Gish girls were for a long time almost nervous wrecks, while their mother suffered from hysteria for many weeks after her return to the United States.

And yet the very surprise of the Griffith production is the fact that it is not, in any sense, a war picture. To the contrary, Mr. Griffith himself describes the work as "a love story of the war." It is further stated that for more than forty minutes after the story begins, one sees only a picture of peaceful, happy country life, such as one might have found in a small French village before the war broke out. The war that comes after merely is used as a background for the drama. Yet while the picture is not propaganda in any sense of the word, it is a terrific arraignment of the Germans that its principal appeal is said to be something sublime, and it arouses the most intense feeling of sympathy for the unfortunate victims of the millstones of war who were crushed between the opposing armies.

In producing "Hearts of the World," Mr. Griffith has cleverly interwoven stirring battle scenes into a number of the incidents in which the Gish girls and their brave little mother are the principal players. Many of the most beautiful scenes were secured by Lillian and Dorthy Gish on the very battlefields where but a few hours before men had fought and died.

Now that the Gish family and the other players are back in the United States and resting in their comfortable homes in California, they laughingly tell of how Lillian lost fifteen pounds as the result of her experiences near the firing line, and how Mrs. Gish was just thirty pounds lighter when she stepped from the gang plank and planted her foot once more on American soil. Miss Dorothy Gish did not lose any weight, but it is said by those who accompanied her that the young lady invariably went into hysterics the moment the first gun was fired and continued crying until the bombardment was over. Under the circumstances no one will blame Dorothy for being hysterical, for certainly there is no greater instance of personl bravery than to think of these two girls, accompanied by their mother, going into the very danger zone to enact for the screen this great drama of love.

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS MAY BE OVERCOME

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head and ear noises or are growing hard of hearing go to your druggist and get one ounce of Parmint (double strength) and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. The clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy, and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

INDIA'S HOPE WITH ALLIES IN THE WAR

Rustomjee, at State Chamber of Commerce Meeting, Sees Victory Won in East.

Speaker Says His Countrymen Are For British Control Of Line—Mitchel Memorial Voted.

New York, Sept. 11.—After a memorial to the late Major John Purroy Mitchel had been voted by a rising vote, 200 members of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York listened yesterday to an address by Ruston Rustomjee, formerly editor of the Oriental Review of Bombay

Mr. Rustomjee, dressed in the costume of a Parsee, began his address by saying "it was natural that those present should be mainly interested in the war situation on the western front, for it was there that the flower of American manhood was battling with the "scientific barbarians" of Europe.

"I venture to say, however," he continued," that not only when the history of this war is written, but also when another Buckle writes the history of western civilization in the twentieth century, the campaign conduced by Great Britain in Mesopotamia and Palestine will be depicted as two of the most vital factors in the progress of liberty and democracy in the world. I am proud to think that my countrymen, the soldiers of India, are taking an important part in the two campaigns.

The speaker was warmly applauded as he maintained that when Germany was thoroughly whipped, she must not only be deprived of all control over both European and Asiatic Turkey, but the Turks themselves should be driven out of Europe.

"Another question which must be definitely settled," Mr. Rustomjee continued, "is that of control of Bagdad Railways. I believe Germany would accede to any terms of peace if she were allowed to control Turkey and the Bagdad Railways. They constitute the very heart of her scheme of world conquest and she will leave no stone unturned to retain them under her control.

"But they must not be, and I sincerely pray will not be. The question then, vitally affecting the future peace of the world, is: Who should control the Bagdad Railways and be supreme in Mesopotamia? It has been suggested that the railways should be internationalized. International control is indeed a very fascinating ideal, but it is Utopian and impracticable.

"We in India feel that just as Calais is a pistol pointed at the heart of England, so Bagdad is a long range gun aimed at the heart of India. We do not want the progress of our country to be further put to jeopardy by the German control of Bagdad Railways, or the Turkish sovereignty over Mesopotamia.

"The 322,000,000 people of India are being gradually educated along western lines, and their interests ought ternlines, and their interests ought to be safe-guarded, because occupying the central and strategical position as does India, she, when united, strong and civilized, will be a powerful factor in the civilization of the world.

"One of the leading Nationalists of India, S Bannerjee, declared that the future prosperity and advancement of his country were bound up with the British Empire. The only solution of the Bagdad Railways is, I believe, that under proper agreements Great Britain should be permitted to control the railways and keep open the ancient highway of trade and commerce to all the nations."

PERILOUS SERVICE

Optrating a French "Baby Tank" is Very Trying Business

Reference has been made to the new "baby tanks" that participated in the Picardy battle, and that are said to be quicker than a man in running and turning. Some description of these tanks is contained in a private letter just received from "somewhere in France." The writer says:

"Then new French tanks are tiny little things, each just big enough for two men to crawl into. They arrived here on flat cars, and it is the funniest thing to see them off. They look like clumsy baby elephants. They hesitate and wiggle nervously, and finally, with great dignity they walk off the car and waddle off to their stamping grounds, and the next comes along until they are all lined up. This is the only branch of the service more dangerous than aviation. (the baby tanks, not the big ones:) In fact it is so dangerous that each man has to be volunteer and unmarried, the consequence being that as most Frenchmen marry very young, the tank crews are still younger. They wear short black leather coats, tight blue trousers, black leggings, a chasseur officer's berets, a wide brown belt worn shortwaisted, with a revolver and a long thin dagger and just as artillerymen are big and blond, these are very small with black curly hair and bright complexion.

"One of them told me that when they were first sent in they were not armed at all, so the gentle boches used to climb up on top of the tanks and stick their bayonets through the slit that the gunner looks out of, and as the gunner has no more room to blue trousers, black leggings, chasne was rather helpless. So now they are armed with daggers, and they have made narrow slits all over the tanks so when brother boche jumps on the roof, the occupant pushes his knife through a slit and brother boche slides off. I would rather do anything than go in one of those things, for you have to crawl on your hands and knees, and the driver must crouch from then on The gunner can stand provided he stays in the same spot. It is in pitch dark and the mechanism must be worked by feet. You want to scream the moment they shut the door on you."—Argonaut.

As the German line cracks the battle front shifts slowly eastward. As German man-power fails, Allied man-power increases, and there are many who believe that Christmas will find our men on the Rhine in the south and the Meuse in the north. The battle tide has turned with a vengeance. And the worst is yet to come—for the Germans; but it's still a long way to Berlin.— Leslie's Weekly map.

Semi-ready Tailored

The Canada Ulster

No garment ever designed has given more comfort in winter than the Canadian Ulster.

This year's designs are shown in close weaves and in eider-down weaves, with and without plaid inside.

The advantage of the Ulster lies in the fact that it can be worn with comfort in changeable weather, an impossibility in a fur coat.

Special Order Ulsters can be made to measure in four days.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

THE QUESTION OF "BREAKS" AS APPLIED TO BASEBALL

A Sordid Episode as Applied to the Recent World's Series—Interest in Baseball.

The old standby which sounds like a learned mouthful but which really means nothing, except "breaks," was in persistent spoken evidence in the world's series. The "breaks" were against the Cubs. Breaks? Rubbish. In all of the Chicago defeats it was the strictly legitimate, logical result of certain combinations of plays which did the business. Notwithstanding the otherwise splendid pitching of Vaughn and Tyler, in every defeat but the last a battery error by one or the other of them, followed by bunched hits by the Red Sox, gave the latter enough tallies to win. Bunching their hits with a battery error was good baseball by the Red Sox, showing ability and determination to strike at the right opportune time—not "breaks." They knew when the break of the game had come and made their best efforts just there.

That was the only break there was—the break of the game-not "breaks" as colloquially overused in descriptions these days to cover pretty nearly everything that can happen in a ball game, walks, base hits, misplays in general, and about everything which used to be walks, base hits or misplays, as the case might be, but which now comes under the blanket and inadequate term "breaks." A freak occurrence, such as a bad bound from an obstruction, a fielder falling down and unable to make a play, any luck or unlucky happening over which the player had no control, such would be "breaks."

The Red Sox had no more luck in the games I saw than did the Cubs, but they did play steadier and smarter baseball and in pinches brilliant baseball, which is not "breaks" but fine playing. Had the excellent pitching of Vaughn been supported by the batting it deserved, it would have won oftener, but that it was not was because of the fine work by the Boston pitchers, not because there was anything beyond mortal surmounting in the way of "breaks." Incidentally it was the best pitched series, the best played in general detests, if we omit Mathewson's pitchtests, if w omit Mathewson's pitching in 1906.

Interest in Baseball.

The world's series proved conclusively that interest in professional baseball is still very much alive. Attendances at the 20,000 mark and over are convincing evidence of interest in such times as these, when many who would attend are too busy engaged in bigger things. The way the fans flocked to the gates in Chicago on a Saturday showed how willing they were to come out when they could get away. The real reason for the smaller patronage this year was I am sure not lukewarmness on the part of the public toward baseball, but a greater interest in war and because many could not afford to take the time away from war work and other work. The attendances were small as compared with former years, but large under existing circumstances.

A Sordid Episode.

However, there was enough and more for the real lover of baseball to grieve over. The sordid episode in connection with the players' share of the receipts was bad enough on its own accord and could not have come at a worse time. It was a grand display of self-interest and thoughtlessness regarding the good name of the game by leading exponents of the game, to say nothing of the fact that if there was a peculiarly inappropriate moment for such a flare up it was then. The conditions governing the division of the money over which the players raised the row, were not new to them. They knew when they entered the series what the conditions were; the conditions had not been changed. If there was any objection to make it was before, not at the last hour.

Then, forsooth, the players announced that they would "play for sake of the game, for the sake of the public which has always given us its loyal support, and for the sake of the wounded soldiers and sailors who are in the grand stand waiting for us."

It would have been decidedly more considerate of the game, of the public, and of the soldiers and sailors in the grand stand to have been on the field promptly; and if "for the game's sake" had been properly strong the matter either would not have come up at all or would have been presented to the National Commission in a fitting time and manner. As it was it was a bugled, sorry mess, and another instance of the urgent need of commercialism that isn't rampant and of sportsmanship that puts the game above the dollar.

TRICKING SUBMARINES.

Ruses by Which Vessels May Escape Their Torpedo Attacks.

It is the surprise attack which in nearly every case enables a submarine to torpedo a hostile ship. There are several maneuvers by means of which a ship can trick a submarine. Several vessels have diverted torpedoes by swinging round their stern until it points in the direction of the undersea craft. In this way the wash of the propellers has deflected the torpedo from its course and it has sped harmlessly past its mark. Another successful ruse is to stoke up the furnaces of a ship chased by a submarine, and thick, black smoke belches from its funnels and envelops the vessel in a protective shroud. In this way the submarine gunners are confused and cannot perceive the correct direction in which to send their torpedo.

A speedy ship which follows an erratic, zigzag course presents a poor mark to a submarine. When a torpedo is dispatched against a fast traveling vessel it is directed to a point just ahead of its mark, and the craft literally runs into the death dealing device. This obviously cannot happen, however, if a ship is swinging rapidly from side to side and alternately pointing the narrow expanse of its bows or stern to the undersea marksmen.

A submarine seldom attacks a vessel if it is not alone, for it can only attack one at a time, and while it is launching a torpedo at its first mark the second vessel has an excellent opportunity of ramming the submarine, which can be located by its telltale periscope.—Pearson's Weekly.

HIGH POWER GUNS

Long Range Weapons That Are Used in Land Warfare.

TYPES OF HEAVY ORDNANCE.

Field and Siege Guns, Howitzers and Mortars Are Very Much Akin, and It Is Difficult to Say Just Where One Ends and the Other Begins.

There is no sharp and distinct understanding on the part of the average person as to the difference or distinction between the field gun, the siege gun, the howitzer and the mortar. The precise line of distinction or mark of distinction between these classes of weapons might be difficult even for an ordnance technician to define. It is certainly difficult for a layman to tell just where the gun ends and the howitzer begins, or where the howitzer ends and the mortar begins.

Considered in a broad and general way, the special purpose of the gun was and is to destroy other guns in march or in position, to destroy troops in the open and to batter down objects behind which troops find shelter. The projectile of the gun by high powder pressure was given a high velocity and a relatively flat trajectory, which means that the shot passing from the gun to the target did not rise high above the earth or above a line joining gun and target. To withstand the powder pressure required for this work the gun was heavy in relation to the weight of the projectile. From the fact that the shot traveled in a path relatively of slight curve, its slope of fall or its angle of fall was not steep. It would go through a stone wall, or perhaps smash it, or would go deep into a dirt embankment, but it was not easy to put a shot inside a narrow deep trench, or to plant a shot so close behind an embankment as to kill men sheltered there.

The shot from the gun was good at penetration, but ineffective in searching the rear of cover. To accomplish that purpose another style of gun was devised. The pressure per square inch of powder chamber was decreased, the angle of elevation of the gun was increased, the angle of departure of the shot was greatly increased and the shot after reaching the summit of its path fell so steeply that if the range were known and the practice good the shot would land in a trench or fall so close behind an embankment or parapet that men would find no shelter there.

This being possible by a reduction of powder pressure per square inch of chamber surface and consequent reduction in the speed of the projectile, it was found that the weight of the gun in relation to the weight of the projectile could be diminished, thus increasing its mobility or the facility with which it could be moved from place to place.

It was found that the barrel of this gun could be very much shortened, thus effecting a saving in weight. But in making the changes in this gun instead of absolutely decreasing its weight the gunmakers enlarged its bore and increased the size of its projectile, thus increasing its efficiency. This type of gun, though not in the narrow and technical sense a "gun," is ordnance and an element of artillery and was given the specific name "howitzer."

The mortar was a gun that could give a higher angle of fire and a more plunging fire than a howitzer. It was a very short piece of ordnance, fired from a platform and held down by ropes. Forts and mortar boats used it for getting a high angle of fire and a more plunging fire with larger shell than could be had using a howitzer. The range used to be obtained by varying the power charge. At this day mortars weighing at least four tons, fitted with an elevating device and range scale and with recoil and counter recoil or recuperator devices, are hauled around on wheels, set down on a platform also carried on wheels, and producing vertical fire with a high explosive shell weighing 250 pounds with or without a delay action fuse.

The field gun for the purpose of firing over ridges, getting at troops on the reverse slope of ridges or across hills, giving to shrapnel the proper slope of fall for effective distribution and keeping the load light on the horses has veered away from the gun as developed in ship and fortress artillery and in the direction of the howitzer-like properties. Field guns have had their trails split that the breech may be further depressed, thus giving them a higher angle of fire designed for use against air craft, and in effecting a useful compromise between power and mobility the trajectory of shots from this gun is high and the slope of fall quite steep.

Guns of high power—high powder pressure, high velocity and long range—have been built to give vertical fire or nearly vertical elevation against aeroplanes or dirigibles.

So, as announced, it is not an easy question to decide just where gun, howitzer and mortar divide.

Yanks Held Ground

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 20. (By Mail.)— On a certain night in July, just before the Germans had attempted their offensive on Epernay and Chalons, a certain American division was crawling along over one of the dusty military roads that stretch over the level plains back of Rheims.

The division was full of enthusiasm from the general in charge of the movement down to the lowest buck private. It had come from Lorraine, where it was well trained in fighting, boches, and everyone figured the division was going to make an attack. Prospects were good for driving the Germans out of some important positions.

So the division moved eastward by north, and nobody minded the dust or the weight of the packs. The general in charge of the movement thought he was going to attack, until a dispatch rider dashed up. The general read the dispatch and ordered the entire division to stop.

Then he called heads of units together and said, "We'll have to turn turn right around and take the next rossroads for the trenhes. We want to get into position before daylight."

It was about midnight then, and it's no small job to switch a division around and rush it into the trenches in a few hours. The next morning found every man just where he belonged.

Suddenly the Americans found themselves ready for a German attak. Next day some Americans captured some Germans and found that the Hun offensive was to begin next midnight. The Americans and the French artillery were notified and they kept quiet as could be until a quarter to twelve that night. By that time all the Germans that could be crowded into the front line trench were there, ready to come over at the zero hour.

Fifteen minutes before the German party was to begin, the Americans and the French artillery cut loose with everything, heavies and lights, concentrated on thes crammed and crowded German front line trenches. The German artillery opened up on the front line trenches of the allies, from which every man had been withdrawn he result was that while the Germans were massacred, the Americans and the French lost hardly anyone.

The terrific artillery party continued until daylight. Then the remaining Germans started over the top. They were tired and worn, and little prepared for a fight, after the barrage they had gone through. Reaching the allied first line trenches they found no one, and taking heart, they came on carelessly.

In the second line trenches were the American boys with the French chassures, ready with machine guns and rifles. The German wave dropped under the withering fire, and the officers tried to revive its spirit. Then another wave came, and suffered the same fate. It dropped too.

During the day waves came over and waves stopped before reaching the American positions. Only once did the Germans get near enough for hand to hand fighting. The Germans tried tanks, but the American artillery blew them up as they topped the ridge of hills just in front of the trenches. It continued so for three days. One morning the Germans sent seven waves against the Americans one after another. None of them broke the iron resistance.

The Germans concentrated on the American positions and expected to break through to Chalons.

The fourth day the Americans attacked and drove the Germans back to their original trenches, capturing prisoners and guns, and tanks, some of the later being remodeled British tanks the Germans had taken earlier in the summer in Flanders. Having done that, the Americans moved on to make the attack that everyone expected when the general got sudden orders to about face.

SHE WAS SYMPATHETIC.

But Her Attempt to Be Chatty Brought an Embarrassing Moment.

This is an extract from a letter written by a woman who is willing to share a good joke, even if the laugh is at her own expense:

"It was a damp, windy day—the sort of day that turns straight, straggly blond hair like mine into a mass of strings and ends that stick out about the face and neck with frightful effect. I was downtown on a shopping expedition that was exceptionally trying, and I knew I looked so bad that I carefully avoided all chance of glances into mirrors, for I was sure I could not, under the circumstances, improve my appearance much. Recklessly I entered a tearoom with a friend whom I happened to meet.

"As I placed my shopping bag on the floor near the table at which we were to sit, another bag, exactly like my own, was put beside it. Quite naturally my glance followed the hand and arm up to the face of my neighbor, and as I met her look I said to myself, 'She has hair just like mine—sticking out in every direction—and she looks even worse than I do, poor thing!'

"Naturally, my heart went out to her in a great wave of sympathy. We smiled simultaneously as our troubled eyes met, and I said aloud and quite distinctly, 'If we are not careful we shall get our shopping bags mixed!'

"The moment the words were out of my mouth I wished very earnestly that the floor would mercifully open and let me through. It did not require the subdued snicker from the nearby tables to awaken me to the realization that I had been addressing the image of myself in the mirror of which the entire side of the shop was formed. Do you get the picture?"—Youth's Companion.

A Natural Inquiry.

Helen was a very inquisitive child who greatly annoyed her father each evening with endless questions while he tried to read the newspaper. One evening, among other things, she demanded, "Papa, what do you do at the store all day?"

Exasperated at her persistence he answered briefly, "Oh, nothing!"

Helen was silent a moment, and then asked, "But how do you know when you are done?"

How Do You Make a Circle?

The intelligence of people may be gauged by asking them to make a circle on paper with a pencil and noting in which direction the hand is moved. The good student in a mathematical class draws circles from left to right. The inferiority of the softer sex as well as the male dunces is shown by their drawing from right to left. Asylum patients do the same.—London Family Doctor.

Had Followed Directions.

"Now," said the nervous old lady to the druggist, "are you sure you have that medicine mixed right?"

"No, ma'am," said the conscientious apothecary. "I wouldn't go as far as that, but I've mixed it the way the doctor ordered it."

Crushed.

"Yes; we pay spot cash for everything."

"Ah, I often speak to my husband about the time when we had to!"

A Long Sidewalk.

USING TACT NOT SMOOTHING OVER

The tactful woman is she who doesn't know what you want to explain to her! Any man will testify to this. She never "lets on" that she has been to any place or entertainment that you are offering her. Furthermore, she appears to enjoy it immensely and never fails to thank you for it as appreciatively as if it were a very special treat.

"It is remarkable that so many in your own home she never makes the mistage, for instance, of thanking you for cocoa when you are serving chocolate. More likely she asks if you used vanilla to give it such a delicious flavour and listens attentively while you dilate upon your pet company recipe.

She never asks if "you made your dress yourself?" She merely admires its chic and tells you how becoming it is, and then if you confide that you did make it yourself, she admires your cleverness with the needle.

She admires your domestic arrangements, such as "your cosey furnishings" and does not expand upon hers unless asked. Indeed, she doesn't dwell conversationally upon any of her newest or most up to date possessions for fear of making any one uncomfortable by an obvious contrast.

She never sees what you don't want her to see, and this is what makes her an ever welcome friend at all seasons. Yet her tact is not of that peculiar subtlety that makes every one supremely aware that she is "trying to smooth things over."

For all things considered, the tactful woman is your best friend, for she is too tactful to be selfish, gossipy, jealous or rude and she is clever enough to be comforting, quiet, jolly or lovable as the occasion requires!

Note Reaches Germany.

BASEL, Switzerland, Oct. 16.—President Wilson's reply has reached the German Government, who, it is expected, will make a decision on the counter reply after a conference today.

German newspapers point out, the message adds, that President Wilson's note had the effect of a cold douche on hopes for peace engendered by his first note. Some of the newspapers comment on the note in the sharpest terms and with unbridled words, adding that the "language of President Wilson now has become excited after the conference he has had with the Allies."

French Opinion of Wilson's Note to Germany

(By William Philip Simms.)

PARIS, Oct. 16—President Wilson pins prineiple on the wall.

This sums up the French opinion on the terrific straight-from-the-shoulder blow which is universally applauded here.

The impression is that the President's document is one of the most historic of the war. Some newspapers publish it in both French and English, in order that the meaning of not one word shall be misinterpreted.

There is more talk on the note in restaurants, in theatres, and on the streets than there is about the whole offensive. Various comments were heard, among them being: "The answer is more dangerous than high explosives to the Kaiser."

"The note will knock from the skull of the Boches any idea that they can shilly-shally with the Allies."

"The note demands the end of the war nearer. The Huns must immediately admit their whole scheme was a ruse, or else make a surrender."

President Wilson's stock was never higher in France than it is to-day.

Power Trouble This Afternoon

Whole City Thrown Out by a Simple Accident.

The whole city was out of power this afternoon for a time caused by a plank falling at the new Peterborough Cereal Mill across the two Hydro 2nd wires that run into the Peterborough Utilities sub-station at the rear of the mill causing them to burn out.

The trouble was with the Hydro but Superintendent H. O. Fisk turned over his whole staff of the Peterborough Utilities in order to hasten repairs, which were accomplished in a minimum of time. The lines burned were of exceedingly heavy copper wire and the Utilities Truck was hastened to Auburn where the only available supply was kept.

To-day's trouble just goes to show how simple a thing will affect the whole city and the care necessary of avoiding accidents or carelessness on the part of anyone where such results are apt to happen.

Factory Branch of New Victory Loan Campaign Planned

The industrial branch of the Board of Trade numbering 25 were the guests at dinner last night at the Empress of the County Organizer of the Victory Loan, Mr. W. B. Cumming. The dinner was given with the object of arranging for the coming Victory Loan and organization of the industries.

Mr. Cumming addressed his guests explaining the Victory Loan generally and the methods used in different centres where the campaign had been successful in creating enthusiasm and competition for the purpose of getting the volume of business. The object of meeting the manufacturers, he said, was to create competition and have the heads of firms take charge of the organization for their plant and thus insure greater efficiency.

DESIRED RESULT

An enthusiastic meeting was the result and the desired feeling of competition amongst the industries evidently created. Several of the manufacturers spoke with assurance that the manufacturing branch of the campaign will be heard from.

WOUNDED TWICE IN THIRTY-THREE DAYS

Lakefield, Oct. 15. — The Thanksgiving entertainment given by the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church on Thanksgiving night, in the town hall, was a great success. The program was an excellent one and was appreciated by a large and attentive audience.

Mr. W. W. Leonard, manager of the Queen street theatre, gave a special matinee performance on Thanksgiving day, and also an evening entertainment. Both were well attended.

Wounded twice in thirty-three days, is the record set by Pte. Graham Huckell, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Huckell, 10243, 107th street. His parents received a telegram Tuesday stating that he had been admitted to No. 22 Casualty Clearing Station, suffering from a gunshot wound in the hip, on Sept. 29. His previous wound was also from a gunshot and was in the head, being received on August 27. Pte. Huckell left the Victoria High School to join the 196th Battalion. Overseas he transferred to the 1st C.M.R.'s. — Edmonton Journal.

Pte. Huckell is a grandson of the late Robert Graham of Lakefield and is a nephew of Mr. W. M. Graham.

Influenza is Passing West

Despatches Indicate the Epidemic in a Number of Towns—Conditions Improving.

TORONTO, Oct. 16. — Indications that the epidemic of Spanish influenza in Canada is passing westward appeared to-day in despatches from various parts of the country. From Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, where the disease first reached its height, so far as Canada is concerned, reports came to-day that conditions are improving in Montreal, and Toronto and other Ontario cities. The death rate continues heavy, but it has not increased during the past few days, and the Medical Health authorities are hopeful that with continued fine weather the disease may be checked. Announcements from Winnipeg and other points west show increases in the number of cases. Deaths of 15 civilians in Toronto from this disease have been registered to-day up till noon. There were 50 deaths in Ottawa yesterday.

Influenza Seems Checked Here

Dr. C. H. Amys, M.O.H., said to-day that he is very well satisfied with the results of the efforts to check the Spanish influenza. He said that so far no more cases have been reported to him.

Every Victory Bond a Financial Soldier

VANCOUVER, B.C., Oct. 16.—Sir Thos. White last night brought to the Pacific coast his message urging support of the 1918 Victory Loan.

"Every victory bond is a financial soldier fighting against the Kaiser," said the Finance Minister. "Before war broke out not a loan for as much as five millions had ever been floated in Canada, yet to-night I am asking the people of Canada to subscribe five hundred millions, and I am going to get it, and this from a scattered nation of eight million people who already have subscribed seven hundred millions in war bonds."

Daring Operating Gave Cambrai to Canadians

Failure Might Have Caused a Disaster But the Third Division Went Through to Success in a Remarkable Night Attack.

THE RISK WAS HEAVY

(By J. F. B. Livesay, Canadian Press Correspondent.)

With the Canadian Forces, Oct. 15.—Dramatic circumstances attending the capture of Cambrai by troops of the third Canadian Division last week were obscured for the time being by the brilliant achievements at the same time of the Canadian Second Division.

The whole remarkable night attack was largely responsible for the success of the entire division. This attack probably is unique in present open warfare because it was made on an entire divisional frontage under conditions where failure must have spelt irremediable disaster. Great risk was run in order to obtain at low cost a very great tactical success.

The problem presented was twpfold. The first was to capture the bridgehead on the Scheldt Canal, north-west of Cambrai and then push south so as to close in on the city by making contact with the British troops. The second was to establish for this movement, which was wedge like in character, sufficient flank defence facing north along its left flank against counter attack from enemy forces grouped about Blecourt, Cuvillers and Eswars.

UNEXPECTED FRUITS.

The entire operation was not only a complete success but it reaped unexpected fruits, these being no less than driving the enemy out of a strongly fortified triangle formed by the Sensee and the Scheldt. No guides were used, regimental officers working entirely by compass. To one brigade on our right was entrusted the seizure of bridgeheads, and the drive southward through the eastern outskirts of Cambrai. The kick-off was at half past one in the morning of October 9. There was no barrage but only crashes of artillery on the enemy front lines and also on his points of concentration.

Our front extended from east of Tilloy to west of Blecourt, and on our right the enemy lay before us in sunken roads west of Raoilles and in front of Morenches Wood. Before midnight our patrols reported he was pushing forward in strength into no man's land. Our artillery, therefore, concentrated on this pocket for an hour and a half forcing him to fall back to the sunken roads where at the zero hour our crash caught him unprepared, inflicting heavy loss.

INFANTRY SWEEPS FORWARD.

After ten minutes the infantry went forward with the New Brunswickers on the right and Nova Scotians on the left supported by the French-Canadians and a Montreal battalion in reserve. Parties were thrust out to capture bridges, the most important being the still intact crossings at Pont d'Aire, which were seized by the Nova Scotians. The story of the gallant work of the Canadian Engineer officer there has already been told. Both battalions crossed over and then a barrage was laid down beyond while the engineers made the crossings good for heavy traffic.

At half past five all troops were at their final objectives, four thousand yards from the jumping off point, with patrols pushed out one thousand yards in advance, south of the Cambrai-Denain railway. After capturing several hundred prisoners and many machine guns, all with very light casualties, thus this daringly conceived and brilliantly carried out operation had succeeded before dawn in cutting off the enemy's retreat had he still held in Cambrai in force, while only orders not to enter the city prevented its penetration.

Ran Toward British Lines as Bridges Were Destroyed

Enemy Garrison at Menin Surrendered After a Slight Resistance—Felt That They Were Being Sacrificed—Plenty of Evidence Peace is Expected.

BAVARIANS FOUGHT HARD

LONDON, Oct. 15.—Describing the first days of the new offensive in Flanders, the correspondent of the Mail at British headquarters says that the operation has gone ahead with clocklike regularity. The chief German resistance came from the First Bavarian Guards Reserve and the Sixth Cavalry, which fought stubbornly. The correspondent writes as follows:

"The German front line was held strongly. The Bavarians advanced from their trenches in the face of the British barrage and calmly set up their machine guns. They did all that was asked of them, but they met a famous division, which in its charge went clean through and around the enemy and reached the Roulers railroad before the German supports could arrive. Highly valuable ground was thus taken at the outset and bigger objectives were thrown open.

"It is the fact that the enemy has put the most and the best of his men in the front ranks, and when these were forced back the British had much less trouble in advancing.

"German forces at Wervicq and Menin, which guarded the right of the British attack apparently made only slight resistance and surrendered at once. The canal was behind them, and when the British artillery had destroyed the bridges the enemy troops felt that they were being sacrificed and ran toward the British lines.

"Before the end of the first day all the principal industrial towns in western Belgium were being threatened. To the north the Germans along the coast are also in peril.

"During the day there was plenty of evidence that peace was expected by the enemy and that this expectation was operating toward lowering the morale of the German forces.

"The issues of the battle are immense and are already visible on the field.'

GRAIN MARKET

TORONTO, Oct. 16. — An official statement sent out to-day, said the reports published yesterday that the Government would be in the market for November and December options in corn, were absolutely incorrect. Oats also declined, but not to the same extent, the cash oats situation remaining comparatively strong. Hay feed is quoted $1 per ton higher.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards — Receipts today, 122 cars, with 1,698 cattle, 89 calves, 2,229 hogs, and 1,267 sheep and lambs.

There was a slightly better tone to the market to-day, cattle moving out more freely, but at no higher prices. One or two of the packers were in the market buying at steady prices for anything of fair quality, and cleaning up a good deal of the commoner stuff at the lower prices prevailing this week. One or two small bunches of choice heavy steers sold steady to firm, from $13.50 to $14.

Fat cows and canners were slightly firmer.

Calves steady for choice veal.

Sheep and lambs steady.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

RUTH IS VERY HAPPY TO BE BACK IN HER SOUTHERN HOME

CHAPTER XIV

Ruth sang all the time she was packing to go home. She couldn't help it. She visioned her aunt's delight, the beaming face of mammy Rachel; the greetings of her friends and the house servants (each one had been there when she came, a little girl of ten.) Oh, it would be glorious to be with them all once more!

Only three months had passed, but it seemed three years since she had gone to the little church and promised to be the faithful wife to Brian. So much had been crowded in that short time, so much that she hated, as well as so much of joy, that the time seemed long. The housework went more easily than at first, because, with all her ignorance, Ruth was far from stupid, and had quickly learned to do the work which devolved upon her. But how she hated it! the soapy smell when she washed the dishes or the floor; the red hands that no amount of care would render soft and white as they used to be; the cooking over the hot stove, where she often burned herself; the sweeping and dusting, the making of beds, all the homely tasks a poor man's wife must do, disgusted her. Yet for love of Brian, she scarcely complained. Although she shed many bitter tears when alone.

Then came the morning when she left. Brian took her to the train, bought her ticket, and kissed her good-bye.

"Don't stay too long, dear, will you?"

"No, I'll be back before you want, or expect me," she replied, choking back the tears. It was their first parting even for a night, and suddenly her love for her handsome husband rushed over her, and it seemed to Ruth at he was worth all and more than she could ever give, or—give up.

But youth is resilient. The excitement of traveling alone—a new sensation for Ruth; the thoughts of soon being with all the dear ones at home the delight she knew she would experience in making the old, familiar room lovely, soon made her forget her sorrow.

Then when she arrived! Mrs. Clayborne had driven to the station to meet her, although she explained on the way home that she wouldn't.

Mrs. Clayborne noting the warmth gaged a professional decorator instead of an amateur.

When they reached the dear old house, set back in among the giant trees and she saw the old servants grouped on the piazza to greet her, tears filled Ruth's eyes. She hugged and kissed them indiscriminately, to old Rachel's disgust.

"Yo sho'ly ain't no call to kiss ole Pete!" she grumbled. "It ain't ladylike."

"Never mind, mammy Rachel! I was so glad to see them, I would have kissed Pete if he had been twice as old and twice as black."

Mrs. Clayborne noted the warmth of Ruth's greetings, her ready tears and happy smiles, drew her own conclusions.

"Take her up-stairs and clean her up, mammy," she said to Rachel, who carried he "baby off at once. She was none too pleased to share her with the others, "jes common niggers" as she called them.

"Oh, isn't this lovely!" Ruth exclaimed as she lay in the tub of warm water, made fragrant with her favorite bath-salts.

"Who tends to yo bath to home, missy Ruth? I sho'ly would lak to."

"Oh, Rachel dear! I fix my own bath, then get in and out again quickly so that I can get it washed out for Brian. It isn't half so nice as having you."

"Yo wash yo own tub?" unbelief in the question.

"Yes. And I'll tell you a secret, Rachel: I guess I am lucky to have one to wash—considering."

Poor old mammy was puzzled. She half understood, but thought Ruth was joking. That her "chile," her baby should do menial work, was beyond her comprehension.

Ruth insisted upon going to work at once, although Mrs Clayborne urged her to wait until she was rested. Her keen eyes had not failed to note the weary look in Ruth's eyes, the red and roughened hands.

"She does her own work—I wonder if he can't afford even a single servant?" Mrs. Clayborne mused, but said nothing.

Ruth threw herself heart and soul into the plans of beautifying the old living room. She went for painters and decorators to follow out their own original designs. She ordered brocades and wonderful stuffs for recovering the furniture and designs. She hardly took time to return the calls made upon her, or to receive her friends, so enthusiastic was she.

Then one day Peggy Sutton said to her:

"The first thing we know, I reckon we will be hearing you have gone into business. They say it is quite a fad up No'th!"

"Oh no! But I do love to do over rooms and houses." Yet, in spite of her denial, Peggy's careless remark remained with her; and there wasn't a day that she didn't think how much happier she was doing such work, than in doing the homely tasks in Brian's home. If only he were there, with her, she would be almost happy.

SERIOUS IN LONDON

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The epidemic of Spanish influenza continues serious in London and while, the rate of increase in the number of cases is not as great as it was a week ago, the fatalities are more numerous and demand for more drastic action by the health authorities is becoming more insistent. It is estimated tonight that approximately 800 cases of the disease have developed in the city.

A number of Belleville industries are badly crippled; there are said to be seven hundred cases of influenza in the city.

Pte. Roy Ernest Gould of Napanee, a military policeman of the Depot Battalion, formerly a Grand Trunk foreman, has succumbed to pneumonia following influenza.

You Can't Brush Or Wash Out Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completey dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky, and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

WIDOWS ARE BURNED

Attempts Have Been Made to Have End Put to Hindoo Custom

On Monday, August 30, 1833, at Udaipur, in the North-west India its Maharayah, or "great king," Junan Singh, died, and when his body was consumed on the pyre, two of his queens and six of his concubines were burned to death at the same time. Such selfsacrifice is called "suttee," or properly "sati," meaning "good woman" or "true wife," because it was expected as a proof that she was faithful to her deceased husband. It was regarded as showing the affection that she had felt for him during this life, and that she desired to attend him, if he needed any such parner, in the future one. It has been thought, however, that women were taught this duty as a means of the necessor get rid of the burden of supporting them especially as they might not marry a second husband. Lord William Cavendish Bentinck, when Governor-General of India from 1828 till 1835, had formally abolished these "suttees" on December 7, 1829, but they continued occasionally to take place as on this occasion. On March 1, 1877, several wives of Sir Jung Bahadoor, Prime Minister of Nepal, a state on the north-west slopes of the Himalaya hills thus perished. The Greeks found this custom in India when they reached it under Alexander the Great, in B.C 327, but the original ancient laws of India required of a widow only to lead a chaste life. Akbar, the greatest sovereign of Hindustan, from 1556 till 1605, made the earliest attempt to stop it. But as late as 1905 a "suttee" was held in Behar, a district of Bengal, and the British rulers were obliged to sentence to penal servitude those who assisted on the occaion.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Sugar Shortage

By BERTHA CURRIE PORTER

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"I don't see what you said we'd give them tea for, when you know we haven't any sugar!"

"What difference does that make? Some of our best families don't have sugar nowadays."

"Well, I'll bet the Clarkson girls are rolling in sugar!"

"If they are, all we need to do is to shake them over the cups, and there you are!"

"You needn't joke about it, Anne. I have some pride if you haven't, and I'm not going to have those rich Clarksons coming here and thinking we're not as well able to have things as they are, even if they do carry fifteen dollar knitting bags, all covered over with pin-cushion fruit, and tassels."

"I don't know how you're going to get it. I've telephoned to every store I can think of and they all say the same thing—'no sugar.'"

"Telephoning and asking face to face are two different things. I'll run out and see what I can do."

"Josephine Bruce, not in this bad weather!"

But Josephine had vanished into the bedroom of the little flat.

It was the worst day of that "never-remembered-such-a" winter. There had been a heavy snow fall, a thaw and then a sudden freeze, with thick, black ice over everything. And in the night the weather had moderated and rain had fallen in torrents on the ice. This morning it was still raining, with a heavy wind. It was a day when sensible folk wore creepers over their rubbers, and other people lost their pride in the good old Biblical way.

Josephine appeared, clad in a very becoming brown raincoat and little tan hat. She wore brown boots and ridiculous low rubbers, and carried a brown umbrella.

Sister Anne stood at her tower window and watched Josephine slip down the hill, using her folded umbrella as a staff. Anne began to chop nutmeats for sandwiches, wondering what her erratic sister might be doing. The reality was this:

In the nearest store, Anne marched bravely up to the counter.

"Two pounds of sugar, please," she said, with her sweetest smile.

"No sugar in the store," growled the harassed clerk for the one hundred and thirty-seventh time that day.

"There's no sugar in the store," the next grocer told her, "and more than that, there's no sugar up to my own house, and I'm in the grocery business. What was yours, madam?" to a sleek-haired Italian woman in a red shawl.

Josephine went out on more ice.

For an hour she slipped and slid from one store to another, and heard the same story in fifty-seven varieties. Josephine paused on a corner to collect her forces and decide where to attack next. This particular corner was at the foot of a hill—this city was built on more than seven hills—and the sidewalk sloped at an unpleasant angle; also the building on that lot projected in such a way that pedestrians coming down the side street were completely hidden from those on the main thoroughfare. Josephine had seen so many people fall that day that she now mechanically watched them all. Perhaps that was why she noticed the gray raincoat behind the big market basket.

"New style coat," she thought, and looked again at the basket. She gasped! Not for months had she seen a sight like that. She looked again. It was absolutely true. In that basket, camouflaged by a flapping paper covering, but with tell-tale little yellow sharp corners sticking out, were six two-pound cartons of sugar! And the food commissioner had ruled that no dealer should sell more than ten pounds to any one person. And she, Josephine Bruce, had not one single grain!

She looked above the basket to see who this plutocrat might be, and met a pair of serious blue eyes staring straight into her brown ones. She had only time to realize that this law-breaker was young and very good-looking when his feet appeared where had been his face—he bounced up and down, landing on the woman who had slid down the side street, and vanished, in the midst of arms and legs and bodies that came faster and faster until they piled up in a slipping, slopping snarl of humanity. And high in the air, flying merrily toward the blue sky before descending to the soaking sidewalk, went the six packages of sugar.

Josephine dodged. She escaped the pedestrians because they all slid into the gutter, but a couple of pounds of sugar landed on her stylish little tan hat and bounced down into her yawning knitting bag. Josephine had no recollection of opening her bag, but she knew exactly when she closed it. And then, with the most outrageous politeness, she stooped and picked up two of the other packages. She handed them to the young man in the gray raincoat, crawling out from the chaos.

"Your sugar, sir," she said, smiling, and went on her way, entirely unrepentant.

Perhaps the precious ballast in her bag preserved her equilibrium. She hurried toward home, and after dinner Josephine and Anne awaited the Clarkson girls. In the little kitchenette a teapot waited, with a fat little red jug of cream and a plate of nut and cheese sandwiches. And four cheerful little red Chinese cups and saucers. And a sugar bowl that didn't match, but whose glass sides displayed proudly its white and glistening contents.

"The walking isn't a bit better," observed Josephine, looking out the window. "I suppose they will come in the machine. I'll bet the chauffeur has a hard time getting up this hill."

But no struggling automobile preceded the ring at the bell. The Clarkson girls called up from the door. "Just a minute till we take off our creepers. We don't want to scar your stairs—take your's off, Jim—hurry."

There was a deep tone among the voices in the lower hall. Anne peeped over the railing.

"Jo," she whispered, "hustle out another cup. They've brought a man."

"May Jim come to the party, too?" said Norah Clarkson. "He held us up all the way over, and I know he is exhausted."

"Certainly," replied Anne, shaking hands with big, good-looking blue-eyed James Clarkson, "but I'm afraid it will be rather stupid for him, because we are going to knit."

"Perhaps I could learn—you might start me, on a nine-inch square, isn't that what they call them?"

"Maybe Josephine will teach you. She's the instructor," said Anne, as Josephine came in from the dining-room. "My sister, Mr. Clarkson."

"How do you do?" bowed Mr. Clarkson, gravely unaware of Josephine's hesitant hand.

"Brother is daffy over everything concerning the war," explained Gladys. "I suppose that makes you wonder why he isn't in uniform. He's doing all sorts of especially important government work. This morning he had to get after some grocers who weren't living up to the regulations of the food commissioner—sugar shortage, you know. Don't mind if I tell, do you, Jim?"

"No, you can't have too many warnings."

Josephine was frantically casting on stitches.

But it was really a very pleasant afternoon, Anne thought. Mr. Clarkson held four skeins of yarn for her to wind, and didn't mind at all when she began at the wrong end of one and got it all snarled up.

At last came tea—and the transparent sugar-bowl!

"Help yourself to sugar," urged Anne. "Jo got two pounds this morning. Wasn't it lucky?"

"Very," solemnly agreed the side of the food commissioner. "Anyone who ventured out on this treacherous walking deserved to pick up some sugar. It is exceedingly hard to find just now."

Norah pulled Josephine aside while the others were saying good-by. "I hope you don't care because we brought Jim," she whispered. "He insisted on coming when he found out it was you. He's been asking about you ever since he brought those bundles to the Red Cross rooms. He's all right, Jim is, even if he is my brother!" And she gave Josephine a hurried little kiss.

Next day a package arrived for Miss Josephine Bruce. It bore the card of Mr. James Clarkson, and it was a five-pound box of perfectly good granulated sugar! Josephine was furious.

"I don't see anything to be cross about," remonstrated Anne. "That's a valuable present in these times."

"I won't have him buying me sugar," stormed Josephine.

But he did, just the same, and later he bought her flour and grapefruit and coal and summer and winter coats—for years and years and years—but not until a long time after the wedding did Anne learn the real reason why her brother-in-law's favorite name for his wife was—"Sweetness."

Large doses of pills for the liver are not as efficient as small doses.

The big dose purges its way through the system fast, but does not cleanse thoroughly.

The small dose (if right) acts gently on the liver, and gives it just the slight help it needs to do its own work, and do it well.

Take one pill regularly, until you know you are all right.

A Stitch in Time

THERE is a homely old proverb which tells us that "a stitch in time saves nine."

If the man who said it first had been thinking of health, he would probably have said that a stitch in time saves nine hundred and ninety-nine, so important is it to repair those first tissues that become impaired by ill-health.

This is no new doctrine. It is as old as man. Unfortunately (to paraphrase another proverb), we too frequently put off until to-morrow what we ought to do to-day.

Failing to repair the first tissues that need repair, allowing the malady to continue unchecked, other tissues become impaired, for all parts of the body are sympathetic.

The trouble spreads. And—then comes the rent. Nervous disorders may show themselves in various ways, such as sleeplessness, headaches, neuralgic pains, nervous prostration and exhaustion, while later developments take the form of paralysis, locomotor ataxia, or some form of helplessness.

Strangely enough—all these symptoms are preventable, if that stitch had been taken in time. It is here that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food becomes important. We do not say that it is the only means of preventing the rent, but we do say that many years of experience have proved its value as a repairer of wasted nerve tissues that have become weakened by overwork, anxiety, or other causes.

When we say that the value of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has been proved we are speaking by the book. We might, at considerable length, tell you why Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will make that stitch if taken in time and prevent the rent, but we have always proceeded upon the idea that people are more interested in knowing what has been done in cases similar to their own.

Mrs. W. T. Abbott, 536 Paterson street, Peterboro', Ont., writes: "My system was in a run-down condition, and I was troubled with nervousness and sleeplessness. For some time also I had been bothered with neuralgia, and although I tried many remedies, it was without success. Upon the advice of a friend I commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and soon found that my neuralgia was cured, and I have not been troubled in this way since. I also find that now I can eat and sleep well, and I give full credit for this great benefit to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I might also mention that I had lost considerable in weight, but after using the Nerve Food I gained back the flesh I had lost."

You can obtain Dr. Chase's Nerve Food from any dealer at 50 cents a box, six for $2.75, or from Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

Canned Ostrich Eggs.

Signs reading "Newly canned ostrich eggs for sale" may soon meet the eyes of the housewife looking into the windows of grocery stores in London. This statement is based on the fact that ostrich eggs are being packed experimentally in South America for shipment to England in liquid form. One ostrich egg is equal to about two dozen hen's eggs. If the canning of these eggs proves successful, it will mean the salvation of the ostrich-growing industry, which has suffered considerably as a result of the war. It will take a large family to consume one breakfast egg.—Popular Science Monthly.

Snake's Reputation Undeserved.

The beginning of all religious ceremonial is magic. Thus Aaron with his rod. He turns it into a snake.

Most surprising, but not wholly novel. "Old stuff!" say the priests of Pharaoh. "Watch us!" They, in like manner, transform sticks into serpents. But Aaron's snake gobbles up the snakes of Pharaoh's clergy, and that settles the argument.

The snake is nearly, if not quite, the least intelligent of animals. To speak of the "wisdom of the serpent" is a joke. Yet, through all the ages this stupid and almost mindless reptile has been credited with a sagacity approaching the supernatural.

Handicapped.

"Down in my part of the country if a man lays 50 cents on a stump and hoots like an owl he can get a quart of wildcat whisky."

"That wouldn't help me any. When I'm very dry I can't hoot."—Baltimore Sun.

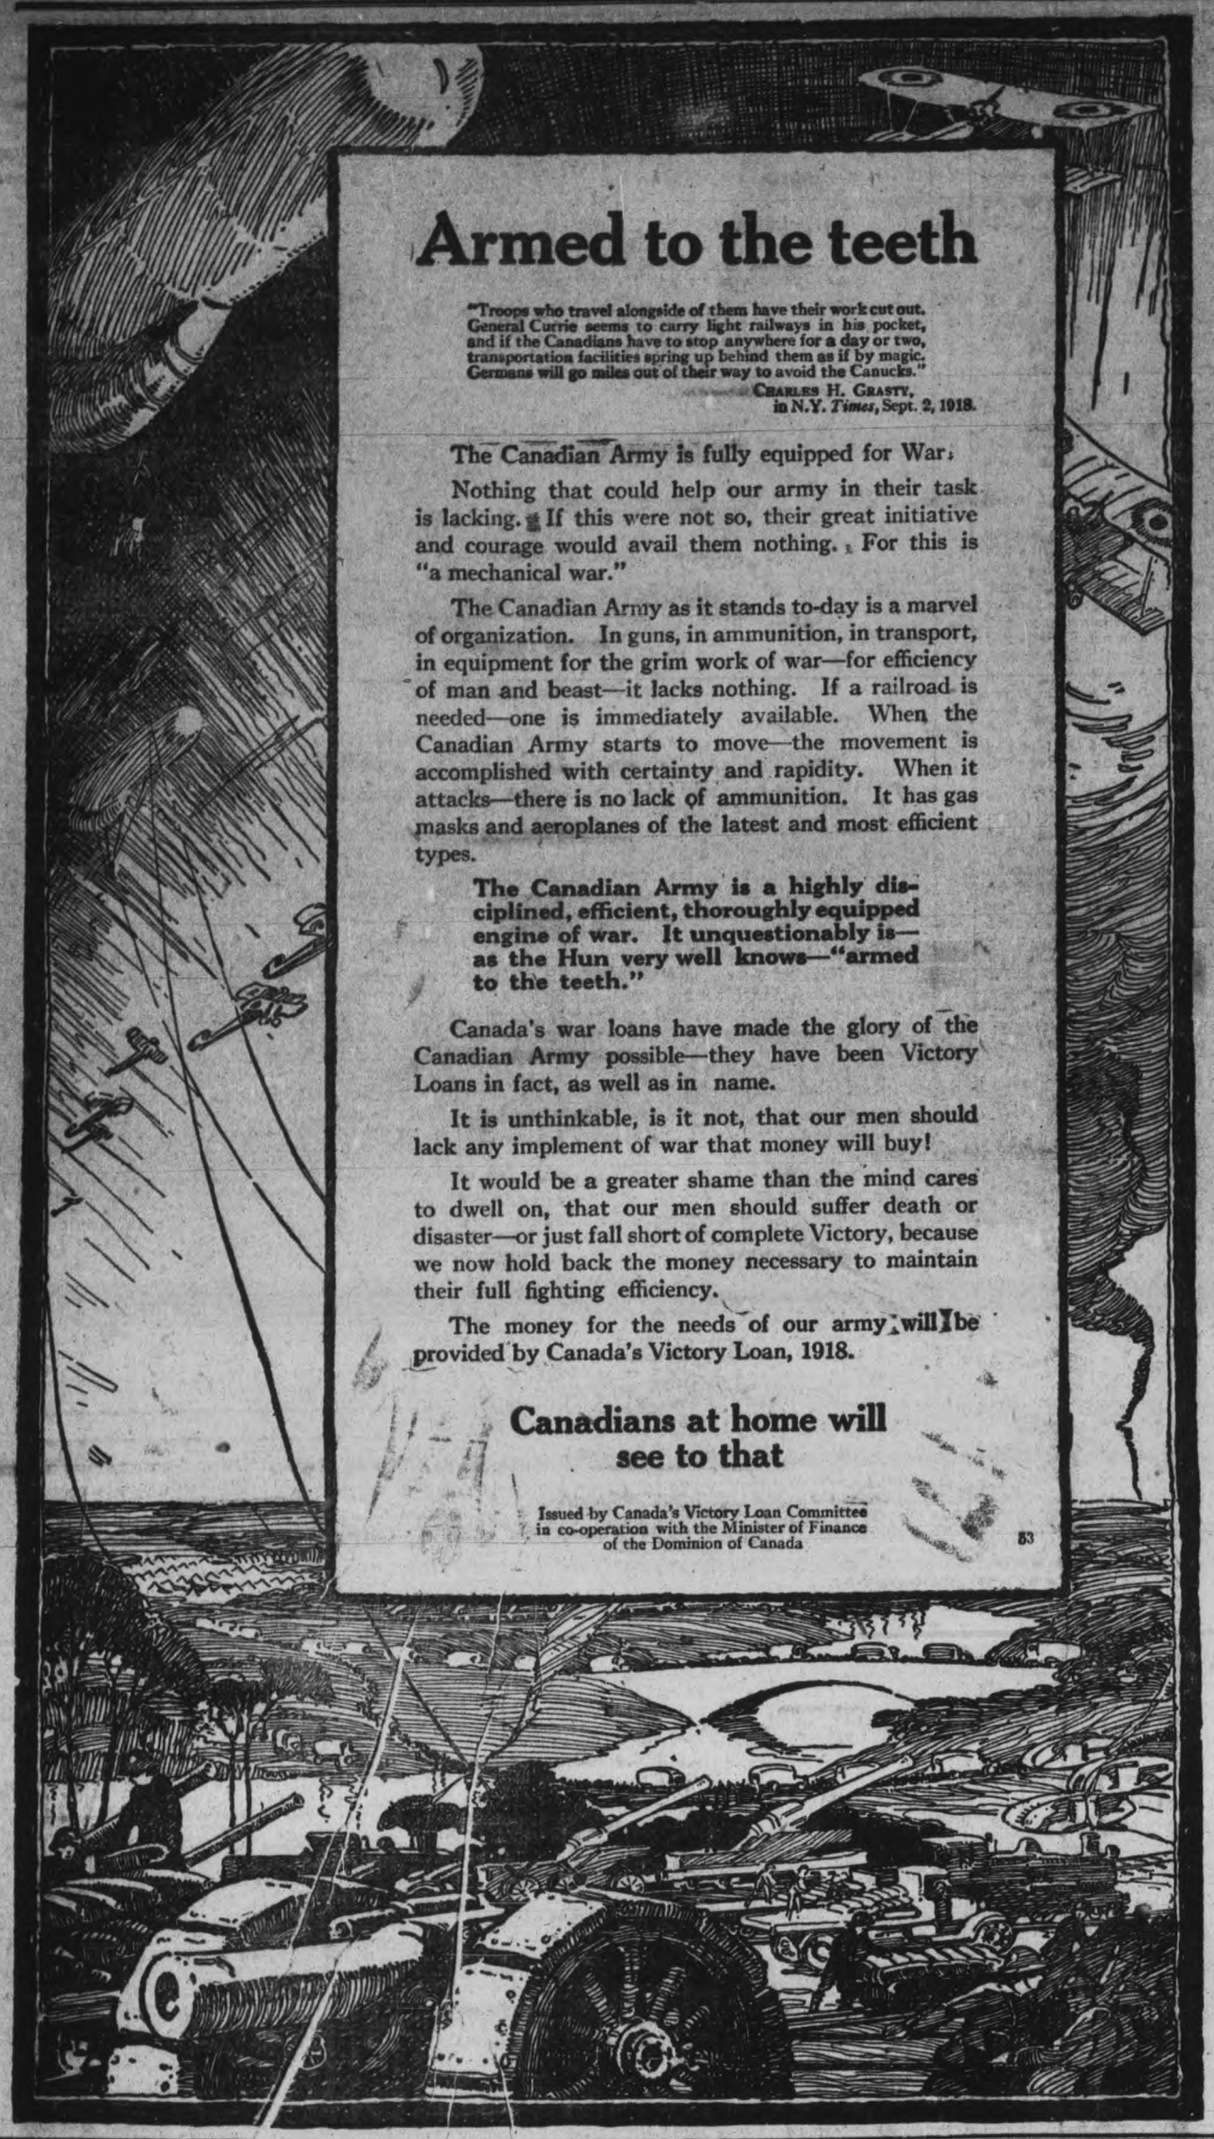
THAT SON-IN-LAW OF PA'S——Pa Succumbs to a Gas Attack

By Wellington



Armed to the teeth

"Troops who travel alongside of them have their work cut out. General Currie seems to carry light railways in his pocket, and if the Canadians have to stop anywhere for a day or two, transportation facilities spring up behind them as if by magic. Germans will go miles out of their way to avoid the Canucks."

CHARLES H. GRASTY, in N.Y. Times, Sept. 2, 1918.

The Canadian Army is fully equipped for War.

Nothing that could help our army in their task is lacking. If this were not so, their great initiative and courage would avail them nothing. For this is "a mechanical war."

The Canadian Army as it stands to-day is a marvel of organization. In guns, in ammunition, in transport, in equipment for the grim work of war—for efficiency of man and beast—it lacks nothing. If a railroad is needed—one is immediately available. When the Canadian Army starts to move—the movement is accomplished with certainty and rapidity. When it attacks—there is no lack of ammunition. It has gas masks and aeroplanes of the latest and most efficient types.

The Canadian Army is a highly disciplined, efficient, thoroughly equipped engine of war. It unquestionably is—as the Hun very well knows—"armed to the teeth."

Canada's war loans have made the glory of the Canadian Army possible—they have been Victory Loans in fact, as well as in name.

It is unthinkable, is it not, that our men should lack any implement of war that money will buy!

It would be a greater shame than the mind cares to dwell on, that our men should suffer death or disaster—or just fall short of complete Victory, because we now hold back the money necessary to maintain their full fighting efficiency.

The money for the needs of our army will be provided by Canada's Victory Loan, 1918.

Canadians at home will see to that

Issued by Canada's Victory Loan Committee in co-operation with the Minister of Finance of the Dominion of Canada

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief — no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffing, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of his fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh.

MOTHER! DON'T TAKE CHANCES IF CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED

If cross, feverish, sick, bilious, clean little liver and bowels.

A laxative to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups, plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

GIRL'S JUMPER DRESS.

The short waisted or Empire style of dress seems to be becoming to the majority of little girls, but when it is featured in a jumper dress the effect is irresistible. In No. 8880 the tiny jumper is cut low in U shape at front and back, and the armholes are also cut quite low. The one piece skirt with straight lower edge is gathered to the short waisted jumper and the dress slips on over the head. As the guimpe is separate, it may be made of contrasting material. The closing is at centre front and a wide Dutch collar finishes the neck. The sleeves may be either long or short.

The girl's jumper dress pattern No. 8880 is cut in five sizes, 2 to 10 years. The 8 year size requires 2⅝ yards of 36 inch material for the dress and 1¼ yards of 36 inch for the guimpe. Price 15 cents.

PETERBOROUGH THURSDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1918

The Capture of Lille Is Reported

London—flash—3 p.m.--British Occupy Ostend

Lille, Tourcoing, Roubaix — All on Verge of Falling Before Advancing Allies

British Practically Hold Douai and the French and Americans are Pushing Toward Mezieres—France Looks to the Future Serene and Determined.

KNOWS GERMANY IS BEATEN

(By William Philip Simms.)

Paris, Oct. 17. — Lille, Tourcoing and Roubaix are in precisely the same fix as Laon was a week ago—on the verge of falling.

King Albert's troops composed of stubborn Belgians, French and British, are threatening Ostend and the entire coast in that region. The British practically hold Douai while in Champagne the French and Americans are steadily marching northward in the direction of Mezieres.

FRANCE IS PREPARED.

The Allies are flat cuing out the Hun opposition all along the line. Yet President Wilson's last note to Germany still dominates the press here. There is no word of disapprobation, Paris is calmly awaiting the next act, with full knowledge that Germany must break off negotiations, or capitulate, in either event France is perfectly prepared. Never have I seen France more regal. From staring disaster in the face the people with stately dignity are accepting the prospects of victory and an early peace.

After years of the soul trying monotony of trench warfare, they are now living in days when at any minute anything may happen; yet their serenity is unperturbed.

GERMANY IS BEATEN.

After all they are not surprised. They have been expecting just this thing all along. While they believe the Hohenzollerns will shortly disappear, and look for an early surrender of the Huns, they seem perfectly prepared to keep up the struggle as long as necessary. Their contention unhesitatingly expressed is:

"Germany is beaten; if she does not admit it now, we will keep on fighting until she does."

OUTBREAKS IN MOLDAVIA.

Population of Northern Roumania Are Openly Hostile.

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Oct. 17.—Outbreaks against Germans have occurred in Northern Roumania, in the province of Moldavia, says a despatch to the Journal from Zurich. The population suddenly assumed an openly hostile attitude to German authorities, according to advices which come by way of Bucharest.

Submarines Gone From Their Bases

Special to The Examiner:

WITH THE ALLIED ARMIES IN BELGIUM, Oct. 17.— Bruges, Turcoing and Roubaix have been emptied of all civilians, and the Germans have removed their military establishments from those cities. All submarines have been hastily removed from U-boat bases at Ostend and Zeebrugge.

MUST CONSERVE COAL.

Difficult Problem of Supplying People Faces Fuel Controller.

TORONTO, Oct. 16.—Ontario is still many thousand tons short in its coal receipts. A representative of the Fuel Controller has been in the mining districts for several days, and last night Deputy Controller Mr. Cousins was to have left for Ottawa for a conference with the Dominion Controller, but an attack of the "flu" compelled him to remain at home. The entire Ontario situation will be gone over at a conference soon and recommendations made by the Ontario committee on Public information will also be taken up. This committee is dealing with the economical heating of homes and the necessity of urging more bituminous for hard coal in public institutions and large buildings.

Meanwhile the Ontario administrator is urging everyone to take advantage of the present mild spell, and, except in cases of sickness or the presence of small children, he urges the utmost degree of conservation.

Revolution in Turk Capital

Germans Reported to Have Rushed Up Black Sea Fleet and Threaten Constantinople.

Geneva, Oct. 17. — A revolution has broken out in Constantinople against the Young Turks, the Tribune de Geneva reported to-day. The Germans are said to have rushed 20 warships from the Black Sea to protect the adherents of Enver Pasha. Turkey's friendship with Germany dates from the time the Young Turks came into power. Enver Pasha was until recently the Turkish War Minister. He faithfully served the Kaiser's interests in Constantinople.

SHIPS TAKEN FROM THE RUSSIANS.

The German warships in the Black Sea are principally vessels taken from Russia. It has been reported in this country that the Germans, determined to hold the Turks in the Central Alliance, announced that they were ready to bombard Constantinople (if necessary) to halt any movement against Germany.

SITUATION IN GERMANY IS EXCEEDINGLY BAD

Signs of Important Events Transpiring in Enemy Country.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.— Through a maze of rumours, unofficial reports and some official data to-day, diplomats and government authorities read the signs of important events transpiring in Germany. Without direct word of the subject, Washington was expectant that a new move toward peace would mark the immediate future. All advices agree that internal situation in Central powers is increasingly serious and that the Liberal-Conservative elements contemplate some action to prevent a Bolshevist movement within the empire. Information, not regarded as official, reached the State Department that the Bundesrath— the Federal Council of Germany— has approved a constitutional amendment restricting the Kaiser's power to declare war and make treaties, indicating a radical change in the German political system. But officials said they would form no judgment until the information was more substantial, and until the Reichstag was shown to have approved the reported action of the Bundesrath.

KAISER IS STILL ON JOB

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 17.—Official denial that the Kaiser has abdicated, is contained in a despatch from Berlin received here to-day.

UNDERTAKERS ARE RUSHED

"Public Doesn't Realize Seriousness of Epidemic," Says One.

TORONTO, Oct. 17.—"The public does not realize how serious the epidemic of Spanish Influenza is," said an undertaker. Private ambulance owners and undertakers are working night and day, while the casket companies have been working overtime, including Sundays. The cemeteries are open for a considerable time each night and bodies for which graves cannot be prepared are being placed in vaults. Clergymen are urged to conduct brief services, be punctual in arriving for services and to not expect the undertaker to send a conveyance for them, while doctors are urged to leave certificates of death at the place of demise in order to facilitate the work of the undertakers.

LILLE IS CAPTURED

Report to This Effect Reaches London—Allies Have Made Complete Break in Germans' Second Defence Line in Belgium.

CAVALRY IN ACTION

LONDON, Oct. 17.— Lille has been captured by the Allies, according to information received here to-day.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—(12.56 p.m.) — A complete break-through has been effected by the Allies in the German second defence line in Belgium, according to battle front despatches received here to-day. Dense masses of cavalry are pouring through the breach and are reported to have advanced nine miles.

The Official Statement.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—Text of the official statement reads:

On the 16th inst, despite a storm, Belgian, British and French troops continued their attacks between Dixmude and the Lys river. Brilliant assaults over a front of thirty-one miles enabled them to advance an average depth of over three and one half miles. Belgians crossed the Yser river north of Dixmude and occupied Schooroke. British crossed the Lys, pushing beyond Menin to a depth of several kilometres on the right bank.

Thourout was captured by the Belgians, Lichtervelde and Ardoys were taken by the French, while the British captured Menin.

According to the latest report British troops have entered Courtrai. Twenty villages were delivered from the enemy. No figures are as yet available regarding captured prisoners and booty.

The break through probably was in the region of Thielt, where the Belgian cavalry is reported to have entered that city after a sudden advance of more than three miles. An additional advance of nine miles in this vicinity would carry the Allied cavalry to Nevele, only six miles south-west of Ghent. If the breach were made farther south it would bring the Allies within two miles of Audenarde, while if it were to the northward the Allies will have reached the outskirts of Bruges.

The reports were received through despatches from the battle front, which stated that British troops had completed the occupation of the great fortress and industrial city.

Marching on Ostend.

LONDON, Oct. 17.— (1.55 p.m.) — The Belgians are marching on Ostend, the former German submarine base, according to battle front despatches received here to-day. The nearest point in the battle line to Ostend is in the region of Nieuport, about eight miles distant.

OFFERS LECTURER TO INSTRUCT VOLUNTEER NURSES FOR EPIDEMIC

Mayor Duncan received the following communication from Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, Provincial M. O. H., this morning:

Mayor Duncan:—

Please supply at once the following information:

How many cases of Spanish influenza have you? Are they increasing? Have you sufficient professional assistance of doctors, and nurses? If not, what further assistance do you require? State fully. Are you arranging to establish a branch of the newly-organized Ontario Emergency Health Auxiliary Volunteers? Volunteers' classes have been most successful. Strongly advise you to follow suit. If you require a lecturer to help qualify your applicants, we will provide a lecturer .Lectures given to voluntary classes are printed in full in to-day's Toronto papers. Recommend you to save considerable quantity of copies to instruct your volunteers. McCullough.

To Dr. McCullough's telegram, His Worship the Mayor replied that the Medical Board had got together and had received several promises of voluntary assistance from several ladies. Should the situation develop and require such steps, a building will be opened up. Miss Read, the Vice President of the society is to daily give the lectures prescribed and doubtless call the ladies who have volunteered to meet the crisis for daily instruction.

AVOID CROWDS

Dr. Amys stated this afternoon that he was not in a position to announce the date of the re-opening of the schools. Hence, there is nothing to be gained by telephoning him this enquiry. The children will be notified when the M.O.H. decides that the danger of the influenza epidemic is passed.

AVOID CROWDS

The advice of Dr. Amys and other doctors in the city, and elsewhere, cautions the people particularly to avoid crowds. There has been considerable criticism of the re-opening of the theatres. Peterboro had felt something of a thrill of satisfaction with the direct, fearless closing of public assembly halls as a measure designed to prevent the spread of the epidemic in this city. Subsequently the theatres were permitted to open, and it is understood that Dr. John W. S. McCullough ,the Provincial Officer of Health, at least did not approve of the restrictions which had been applied here. The churches and the Brock street tabernacle could also have opened, but they decided that in the interest of the people they would discontinue the services this week. There has been considerable comment on this sudden relaxation of the precautions which are credited with protecting Peterboro in the first critical days, and it is maintained that this city must insist on freedom to decide its own plans of protection. Kingston, Brantford, Toronto and many other cities dallied with the epidemic until it had spread practically beyond control. The press of these cities contain stories of conditions that have fortunately not been Peterboro's exepriences persons dying unattended because of the great scarcity of nurses. It was to meet this appeal that the Ontario Government has organized the volunteer nurses who have already done splendid work.

Until the danger has passed, keep out of crowds. Remain at home. or walk in the country. And if you become ill don't rashly decide to fight La Grippe, Influenza or whatever you choose to call it.

HIRSON IS THE OBJECTIVE OF NEW FOCH DRIVE

Allied Generalissimo Is Attempting One of the Most Ambitious Strokes of the War—Success Will Seriously Interfere With Enemy Communications.

AN IMPORTANT MOVE

(By J. W. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, N.Y., Oct. 17.— The British offensive, launched this morning between Le Cateau and Behain, is along the line of the railway. This movement is supplementary to the new advance of the French fifth army north of Laon, reported yesterday afternoon to have started, under command of Gen. Guillaumat, former military governor of Paris. Marshal Foch is now attempting one of the most ambitious strokes of the war. His purpose is to run two armies toward the Hirson fortress, one from the south and one from the west. The capture of Hirson, which is the key to the south-west corner of the Argonne massif, will prevent the Germans from keeping up direct communications between their retreating armies in Belgium and Western France and their armies in the Champagne. It will at the same time compel Von Hindenburg to direct his present retirement entirely by way of Belgium, where terrific congestion is bound to result. The mere fact that the double attack against Hirson has been started will of itself force Von Hindenburg to hurry his evacuation of Western Belgium and North-western France.The danger not only exists of the severance of the communications of the German armies, but also of the capitulation of most of the German forces in the Champagne. The latter possibility depends on the continued success of the American push north of Verdun. If, coincidentally with the occupation of Hirson and the western end of the Ardennes massif, Gen. Pershing were to close the Luxembourg frontier at the eastern end of the Ardennes, sixty miles away, disaster would overtake the Germans between these points.

HOME BURNED CHILD LOST

Patrick McMurray's House in Douro Was Destroyed by Fire Last Night—Mother in Critical Condition.

A NARROW ESCAPE

Patrick McMurray's seven year old daughter Stella, is dead, his home is in ashes and his wife is suffering from severe burns sustained in saving her six other children last night about 11.30 o'clock. Mr. McMurray after finishing the day's work on his farm on the 6th Concession of Douro, about two miles south of Lakefield, left home to make a sick call upon a nephew. His wife and children went to bed at their usual hour. An hour or more later, the mother was wakened by the smoke and crackling of the fire which had broken out while they slept and made rapid headway through the frame house. Information this afternoon as to the mother's efforts to lead her children from their burning home was meagre but it was learned by telephone that the seven year old girl Stella had been burned to death and the mother was in a critical condition.

The origin of the fire could only be surmised, and it was believed that it was caused by overheated pipes. It was learned later that Mrs. Murray had not noticed that Stella was missing until she had brought the other children out of the house, under the impression that all of them were with her.

Ask Sanction for New Rates

Bell Telephone Company Make Application to Dominion Railway Commission.

OTTAWA, Oct .17. — An application has been received by the Dominion Railway Commission from the Bell Telephone Company for sanction of the new rates which it is proposed will become effective on November 20th next. The new rate contemplates a flat increase of 20 per cent. in existing rates; they also provide for a new charge known as "service connection" to be paid for installation, and which ranges from $2 to $6, according to the cost of the phone. The long distance rates are also to be increased. The minimum charge is ten cents for 8 miles, with an additional charge of five cents for every 8 miles or fraction thereof. For change of name an extra charge of $2 is provided. Greatly increased cost of labor and materials is advanced as the reason for the proposed increases.

Will Follow Course Adopted by U.S.

OTTAWA, Oct. 17. — The government here is awaiting with interest to learn the fate of the United States bill calling for a continuance of daylight saving, for whatever action is taken by the United States in the matter will be adopted by Canada. In both countries under the existing laws the clocks go forward to mean solar time on the 27th of the present month. But a bill was recently introduced into the United States Senate providing for a continuation of the present condition in order to save coal and light. This bill has not yet, however, passed Congress, and in official circles here it is not expected that it will. Should it succeed in doing so then Canada will immediately pass an order in council providing for the continuance of daylight saving.

"Vorwarts" Makes Bitter Admissions

(Special to The Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 17. — "The war is coming to an end, and in such a manner as no one in Germany desires," said Vorwarts, of Berlin, on Monday.

"Let us say it candidly," this newspaper continues. "During all these terrible four years, the aim of our efforts and sacrifices were to prevent such an end."

Drawing Near Dutch Frontier

Belgians Reach Coolscamp, Only 21 Miles From Holland—Rapidly Advanced.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17. — The Associated Press this morning issued the following:

"Germany's hold on the Belgian coast has been loosened. Fighting their way forward until they have reached Coolscamp, only 21 miles from the Dutch frontier, the Allies seem to be rapidly cutting off the coast cities, and compelling the enemy to hurry out of the trap which is closing about him.

"Tangible evidence that the Germans are retreating from the Coast which they have held so long, and which has been the chief rendezvous of the submarines preying on transports and other vessels in the English Channel, may be found in the advance by the Belgians north and east of Dixmude yesterday. In this region the Germans have lost positions to a depth of three miles and the Belgians have carried their lines over the lowlands at a rate of speed which would appear to indicate little, if any, opposition from the enemy. Important successes have been gained at the ape xof the wedge driven into the German line to the north of Lille.

Lakefield Schools Closed for the Week

(Special to The Examiner)

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 17.—The public school has been closed for the remainder of the week on account of Spanish influenza. Over 15 cases have been reported although none of them are regarded as serious.

The closing tableau was the finest of its kind ever presented in Lakefield. About $50 was collected for the K. of C. Hut Fund

The Girl's Auxiliary of the Baptist Church had an afternoon tea and apron sale in their Sunday School on Wednesday afternoon but owing to the influenza the attendance was small.

Strict Measures Taken in Toronto

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 17.—All theatres, including movies, will give their final performance until further notice on Saturday night. All confectionery, pastry, cooked meats, fruits exposed in stores must be properly protected from contamination. Gauze is not sufficient protection. Circulation of public library books is stopped, but the libraries are not closed. The Board of Health will confer with the Fuel Commissioner in an effort to get coal delivered to sick families.

PARIS IS JUBILANT.

Tone of Sentiment Favorable to Wilson's Reply.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—President Wilson's reply to Germany was given to the public in extra editions of the afternoon newspapers published at noon yesterday. It immediately became the absorbing topic of discussion in all public places. The tone of the sentiment was distinctly favorable to the reply, the prevailing note being one of jubilation.

The President's firm position against an armistice without guarantees particularly appealed to prevailing French opinion.

British Troops are in Courtrai, the Enemy's Important Base Near Ghent—Lille May Not be Defended—Belgian Soldiers Regain Territory Held by Germans four Years.

MOVE FROM MUD FLATS

LONDON, Oct. 17. — (Official.)— British forces entered Courtrai during yesterday's fighting. Twenty villages were captured by the Allied forces in Belgium during the day.

(By Lowell Mellett.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FLANDERS, Oct. 17.— British troops are in Courtrai, the great enemy base south-west of Ghent. At the same time it is reported that the British are in the outskirts of Lille. This has not yet been officially confirmed.

May Not Defend It.

The centuries old moat has been fortified, but there are no indications that the Germans intend to use these defences. It is understood that the Huns have taken away all the men and boys in Lille between 15 and 60, leaving only the women.

British Break Through.

In the Lille region, the British were last officially reported to have broken through the line which the Germans built to defend the city, and were nearing the ancient defensive moat, which was its principal protection in medieval times. General Plumer's men have captured the hill positions which dominate Tourcoing and Roubaix.

The enemy is removing military stores from Lille to Tourcoing and Roubaix. Fires have been observed in Lille, but it is not certain yet whether the Germans are seeking to destroy the city. Pressure is continuing on all sides of the salient, which contains three important French industrial cities. The evacuation of this territory seems imminent. In most places pursuers and pursued have moved out of the devastated mud flats into a fair, green country. The Belgians, for the first time in four years, are getting a glimpse of their country as they knew it before the war. Few buildings have been destroyed and none of them harmed.

Citizens Indicate Mines.

When Roulers was occupied 1,200 civilians ran about with peril to themselves, pointing out hidden mines and shouting, "'Here's one, there's one." One captured German engineer was compelled to remove mines. American relief stores, valued at $20,000, were taken to Germany before evacuation.

Soldiers Approve Reply.

President Wilsons reply is contained in newspapers which arrived from the coast last night. Many soldiers say it expressed their exact views, others suggested it might have been "'queried," but said they recognized the necessity of diplomatic language to gain diplomatic ends. Regarding an armistice, they all agreed with Wilson.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 17TH, 1918.

CANADA'S GOOD NAME.

Canada must be true to the reputation that the Canadian army has made overseas. The testing time is coming at the end of the month when the people of the Dominion will be asked to live up to the reputation of the Canadians in France by subscribing five hundred millions of dollars to Canada's 1918 Victory Loan. It is a large sum, but the citizens of Canada have the money and can pile up the amount asked if they show the same spirit as General Currie's corps have exhibited in the three big victories of Amiens, Arras and Cambrai. There is a victory for Canadians to win at home, that of oversubscribing the Victory Loan. The people of Peterborough should make up their minds to see that this district does its share in piling up the total. Peterborough with its glorious record in recruiting, will be everlastingly disgraced if at the end of the 1918 Victory Loan campaign this district has not earned one of the Governor-General's honour flags. Peterborough's flesh and blood offered themselves willingly. Surely Peterborough's money is available to back up the efforts of those brave lads who have endured so much that victory might come to the allied cause.

ONLY BY SURRENDER.

No armistice can be granted to Germany on the terms she proposes. They would allow her to extricate her armies from positions growing every day more perilous, where immense losses or actual destruction confronts them. They would permit her to withdraw in safety her men and material of war to new and much shorter lines of defence, where, employing every moment of the respite in organization, her diminished man-power could be much more effectively employed to resist the enemy's advance. Incalculable military advantage would accrue to her from the cessation of arms at this time.

Surrender, not an armistice, must be the condition precedent to any talk about peace. Let Germany give guarantees that by withdrawal from invaded territory she means withdrawal from the war, disarmament, demobilization, that she confess defeat, has no purpose to resume hostilities. Let her give up Metz and Strassburg to be occupied by allied garrison forces. Metz is in Lorraine, Strassburg in Alsace. There can be no peace, there should be no armistice, until the two provinces, both fortresses, have been restored to France. But it must be an armistice on land and sea. Let Germany give her navy, with all her submarines, into the keeping of the United States and the nations associated with us in the war, to be held in trust subject to the decree of international disarmament and to the requirements of the League of Nations for a naval police force.

No peace can be made with the Hohenzollerns. They are "without honour"; they "observe no covenants." We do not think the same "thoughts or speak the same language of agreement." A peace with them would be delusive, insecure, worthless. Peace must be signed in behalf of Germany by an authority having neither the will nor the power to seize the next favourable occasion to begin a new war of Imperial ambition.

The operations of war and preparations to continue the war to the end cannot be suspended or diminished utnil Germany gives up the fight. It is not to be supposed that Marshal Foch will assent to a cessation of arms that would give the enemy a resting spell to repair and reorganize his shattered forces for a stouter resistance. To repair that worst of blunders, months of efforts would be demanded and thousands of brave men would have to give their lives. Memories of the millions who have fallen to bring Germany to defeat will fortify us against yielding the advantage won by their courage and their devotion. No armistice without surrender, no peace with the Hohenzollerns.—New York Times.

THE RED CROSS CAMPAIGN.

At this late date in the war it seems almost unnecessary to say very much in favour of the activities of the Canadian Red Cross. So magnificent has been the work of the Red Cross, so free from criticism in spire of the vast amounts handled, has been the administration of the organization that it would appear almost an insult to the intelligence of the citizens generally to dilate upon what the society is doing. All that is necessary to point out is that the annual campaign of the Peterborough branch of the Society will be held next week and that this city is asked to subscribe $30,000. That amount is none too large in view of the scope of the work of the Society.

A large share of the objective will be needed to carry on the absolutely necessary work of looking after the prisoners of war. There are some fifty Peterborough and district soldiers in German prison camps whose very existence practically depends upon the parcels that come through the Red Cross. Anyone who has read of the conditions in German war concentration camps knows how necessary are these parcels of comforts from the Canadian Red Cross. The expense of these boxes for the prisoners has steadily increased, and it requires a large monthly sum to take care of the half a hundred local soldiers who are so unfortunate as to be prisoners in the hands of the enemy.

And the prisoners of war department represents only one angle of the Red Cross work. The hard fighting of the past summer has made exhaustive demands upon the organization, but it has never failed and will not do so as long as the people of Canada extend the same generous support as in the past.

The talk of peace should not prevent anyone from giving. The Allies are determined to fight until the Huns unconditionally surrender, and the Red Cross operations will continue after that until every wounded or sick soldier has been discharged from hospital, and until every Canadian prisoner has been repatriated.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Peterborough has sent as many soldiers in respect to population as any place in the Dominion. How many financial soldiers in the shape of Victory Bonds will the city send in the coming campaign?

Canadian dollars must fight as well as Canadian soldiers. Buy Victory Bonds and watch Canada's financial army overwhelm the enemy.

CULTIVATE JUDGMENT.

Its Possession Is What Makes a Man Successful In Business.

It was one of the intellectual shocks of my young manhood to discover that an analytical chemist could often get only $50 a month. I had long looked with awe upon the accurate percentages and detailed reports of the analytical chemist. This water contains 2.341 grains of such and such substance per gallon. I wondered at the marvelous man who could get out such fine results, and to learn that he at times gets but $50 a month was a shock.

The explanation is this. The chemical analysis of ordinary specimens is a technical process of a perfectly definite character. If a work is definite and therefore capable of being reduced to clear cut instructions the pay that it commands is not likely to be high, even though the work itself is complicated. It requires good memory and painstaking obedience to instructions. Many persons have these qualities. The scarce attribute is judgment, that indefinable quality capable of meeting a new situation and handling it with common sense or gumption, to put it in a homely term.

Judgment is indefinite. We cannot lay out instructions in advance to tell the manager how to meet situations. To buy good raw material he must learn to know the raw materials, and many of the tests he applies are too fine for words to reduce to instructions. He must decide for indefinite reasons that now is a good time to enlarge or retrench; that here is a good place to open up business; that now is a good time to buy or to run low on stock; that this man needs to be hired; that this man needs to be fired.

It is in the making of decisions that successful management lies. And most of these decisions are beyond rule. They are indefinite. They are judgment.

New York "Draft Riots."

The "draft riots" occurred in New York city during the Civil war. In July, 1863, pursuant to orders by the national government, a general draft was begun to re-enforce the army. At the commencement of proceedings a great riot broke out in New York city, and for three or four days raged uncontrolled. Buildings were burned, stores and houses were looted, colored persons were killed on sight and anarchy prevailed until troops arrived and restored order. A thousand persons were killed and injured.

"PATS" LOSE COMMANDER.

Lt.-Col. Charles J. T. Stewart Last "Original" Officer.

OTTAWA, Oct. 16.—The Princess Pats have lost another commanding officer. News has been received in Ottawa of the death in action of Lt.-Col. Charles J. T. Stewart, D.S.O., who was recently promoted to be commander of this famous Canadian battalion.

Col. Stewart was born in Amherst, N.S., 45 years ago. He was educated at St. John's School, Montreal, Bishop's College, Lennoxville, and the Royal Military College. He spent a number of years trapping and mining in the northwest and in the service of the Northwest Mounted Police. He was an all-round athlete and sportsman. A veteran of the South African War, he joined the P.P.C.L.I., as a captain, when the famous unit was raised. He was with the Pats in all their heavy fighting and was severely wounded at St. Eloi in 1915. He was second in command for some time, recently being promoted to be commander.

The original commander of this regiment was Lt.-Col. F. D. Farquhar, who was the military secretary of the Duke of Connaught when war broke out. He was killed by a German sniper early in the war. He was succeeded by Lt.-Col. T. H. K. Bulkeley, who was also killed. As far as Ottawa is aware, Colonel Stewart, now killed, was the last of the original officers of the battalion still with the unit.

TO FARMERS

The Government has sent out an appeal to the Canadian people to buy at home. Why? Because when we buy abroad more than we sell we have to pay a premium on the excess, in addition to the price of the goods. This is known as an adverse rate of exchange. We have bought four hundred million dollars' worth more from the United States than we have sold to it. The rate of exchange is 2 per cent. against us. In other words, we are paying 2 per cent. on four hundred millions of dollars, or eight million dollars, which means that if we owe a great deal of money for goods bought we have to pay extra for the privilege. If we keep this up Canada will bleed to death. Please inquire into this matter at once.

THREE BROTHERS MEET: OFTEN NEAR THE FRONT

By FRANK J. TAYLOR
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 2 (By Mail.)—War has made the world infinitely smaller, as the following tale of remarkable reunions along the front shows. It is the story up to date of three brothers, and it began back in California, where they were in college, two years ago.

Several months before America entered the war, these brothers were seized with a desire to come to France At that time the big possibility was the volunteer ambulance service, but owing to financial circumstances but one brother could come to Europe. Brother Number One was then sent along, the other two thinking they might never see him again.

About the time America entered the war, Brothers Two and Three had the opportunity to come to France in the same service, and started for New York to embark. There brother Number Two joined the aviation service, and parted from Three, the trio figuring it was broken.

LUCK IS WITH THEM

Three continued to France, where by luck he encountered Number One on a permission from the French battlefront. It was then both One and Three were transferred into the same unit, and sent to the Balkans, to serve with the French army of the Orient. They served there until their unit was recalled, wandering all the time if they would ever see Brother Number Two, the aviator, who mthey knew to be in England somewhere through the single letter which reached them.

Crossing Macedonia, Greece and the Mediterranean, Brothers One and Three arrived in Italy, where the Frenchman at the desolate army post where troops embark from trains to boats and vica versa handed one of them a telegram. It was from the aviator brother, who was at a little Italian town on the road to Rome, through which their train passed en route for France. He was in an aviation school.

The train stopped forty minutes in the Italian town, time enough for Brothers One and Three to find Two, and to get permission for him to ride to Rome with them, returning next day alone. It was the first reunion of the "league," as they called it. Before the train reached Rome, wrecks stopped it, and in a muddy, wet Italian town, Number Two had to leave at midnight They parted, not expecting to get together in wartime.

TRAILS CROSS AGAIN

In France, Number One was sent to a training school, and Number Three was assigned to work in a Paris bureau. The three were now separated, and months passed, during which One was in a hospital for a long time, and Two stayed in Italy, with three in Paris. Then one day, within ten minutes of each other One and Two walked into the office in which Three worked It was a reunion of surprise.

Again they parted, this time One staying in a Paris military bureau, Two going to an aviation centre in France, and Three to the front. Months again passed, until Three had a chance to leave the front for a couple of days. He went south of Paris to a town where he knew One was again in school.

Another surprise was again in store. Two had flown over a hundred miles in an airplane over the week-end from his aviation school, where he was now instructor, to the location of Number One arriving at the same time as Three. Needless to say, they celebrated a spontaneous and entirely expected reunion, two of them, meantime, having become officers and the third being within easy range of "bars."

Reunions, unexpected and surprising are constantly occurring along the front, usually in the course of the army's work

Brothers One and Two and Three, having no plans, but being optimistic, agreed that their next meeting shall be "behind the American lines in Germany, and not too distant in point of time."

THE WAR IN THE AIR

(Unofficial Weekly Resume)

It is no exaggeration to say that so far as air-fighting is concerned the past week has been one of the most remarkable and eventful of the war.

While it would be inadvisable to discuss here some of the probable developments of the present air-fighting, there are at least three aspects of the week's work which must have given the enemy furiously to think, and which will take a good deal of explaining away by the German apologists:—

1. The R. A. F. Independent Force dropped more bombs over Germany in 5 days, than had been dropped by them at any previous time in a fortnight

2. In 12 hours, British airmen took more aerial photographs of German positions behind the Hindenburg line, than any previously recorded day's total.

3. In a single air-fight over the German coastal defences in Belgium, British airmen destroyed or drove down out of control 18 enemy machines, or nine for each of the two British machines reported missing.

Regarded as single facets of a week of many-sided British activity in the air, these significant figures reveal the hollowness of Germany's pretensions to aerial supremacy, and show that the initiative in the air, as on land, has passed definitely into the hands of the Allies.

BRITISH AIRMEN'S GREAT EFFORT BEHIND THE ST. MIHIEL SALENT.

Foremost among the achievements of the week must be placed the remarkable effort of the R. A. F. Independent Force against the enemy railways serving the German armies near Metz and in the St. Mihiel Salient.

A more formidable or sustained assault from the air has probably never been experienced, the R. A. F. Independent Force easily breaking all its own records, both as regards the number of objectives attacked and the weight of bombs dropped.

Acting in conjunction with the Franco-American offensive, no fewer than 35 separate raids were made between Friday morning the 13th, and Monday night, the 16th instant. Of these, 13 were directed against the vital railway junction and triangle at Metz-Sablon, 4 against the junction at Courcelles, 8 against the railways at Ormy, Arnaville, Treves, Ebrange, Saarbrucken, Kaiserslautern, and Mainz, while heavy attacks were also made upon the important enemy aerodromes at Buhl, Boulay, Frescaty, and Hagenau.

BLOCKING THE GERMAN STRATEGIC RAILWAYS

The significance of these very considerable operations can only be appreciated fully by consulting a large scale map showing the inter-communications of the German strategic railways, crossing the Rhine between Coblenz and Karlsruhe, and feeding the entire German front from Verdun to the Swiss frontier.

Attacks from the air upon [illegible] im- Mainz, Sab- affect the sup- dis- rapid wing from able ans- ar of im- able ance were and the rail- tion last night with more the has been generated at an By since midsummer. At Karlsruhe, 17 direct hits were registered upon the docks and sidings, while extensive fires were started at Metz Main Station, the station at Karlsruhe and Kaiserslautern, and Frescaty aerodrome. At the other hostile aerdromes, five fires were started, three hangars completely destroyed, many other hangars damaged, three hostile machines on the ground wrecked, and a transport convoy hit four times with marked effect. Highly satisfactory results were also observed at the Daimler Works at Stuttgart, and the poison-gas factory at Mannheim.

HEAVY AIR FIGHTING IN FRANCE

On the northern battle front, in France, notwithstanding the unfavourable weather which prevailed towards the end of last week, British airmen seized every practicable opportunity of pressing home the advantages gained during the recent operations.

On Sunday, September 15th, an improvement in the weather led to very marked aerial activity, a large number of enemy machines being encountered on the German side of the line, Having regard to their recent heavy losses in the air, the enemy squadrons again operated in large formations, and some bitter combats took place.

In the course of two day's fighting, no fewer than 72 German machines were destroyed; 27 sent down out of control, and one hostile kite-balloon shot down in flames, making a total of 100 enemy aircraft accounted for in 48 hours. During the same period 32 British machines were reported missing

Simultaneously with this heavy fighting in the air, British bombing squadrons were very active dropping over 70 tons of bombs upon military objectives behind the battle line.

In all British airmen upon the Western battle-front during the past week have dropped upwards of 120 tons of bombs, (exclusive of those dropped in Germany) have destroyed 101 enemy machines, and driven down 37 more out of control. 50 British machines were reported missing.

ENEMY'S SEVERE LOSSES OVER BELGIUM.

While operations in Italy and the Mediterranean theatres have been upon a minor scale, British airmen working in conjunction with the Navy have maintained a vigorous offensive against the German military works at Bruges, Ostend, Stahille, Nieuport Ghistelles, Maria-Aalter, Uytkerke Zevecote, etc. 19 tons of bombs were dropped with good effect, and some destructive fires started. In the course of heavy air-fighting over these coastal defences, no fewer than 17 enemy machines were destroyed ,and a further 9 driven down out of control. Five British machines were reported missing.

NEW ATTACK GAINS GROUND

LONDON, (3.03 p.m.) — The British attack begun between Bohain and LeCateau this morning, already has resulted in an advance of two miles, battle front despatches reported this afternoon.

EFFECTS OF THE EPIDEMIC IN PETERBORO

Many Industries Are Crippled as a Result of Sickness.

Industries and most places of business in the city are crippled with the present epidemic of so called Spanish influenza. Most of the manufacturers report at least half of their employees are laid up and they are worrying along as best they can on depleted staffs. The Auburn Woolen Mills, Barries Ltd., Bonner Worth etc., all report work going on with half the usual number. At Mathews-Blackwell, twelve of the office staff are laid up, one girl alone remaining on duty. In the stores several of the clerks are absent from almost every one.

A direct proof that numbers foster the disease is the fact that increase is a report made of any of the staff being laid up where there are few working. The disease is conclusively proved to be spread with numbers working together.

Mail Route Crippled.

As a result of two of the postmen being laid up with "Flu" the mail distribution has been slightly crippled. However, their fellow workers are falling in and helping out.

The Express Companies have also suffered from the epidemic and both staffs are depleted.

Killed Her Children and Took Own Life.

TORONTO, Oct. 17.—In an insane moment last night, Mrs. Neilson, a Swedish woman living at 30 Juniper Avenue, strangled one of her boys, 2 1-2 years old, and drowned a one-year-old son in a wash boiler, then ended her own life by holding her own head in a pail of water, while her husband, a Finlander, lay upstairs sick almost to death with double-pneumonia. The bodies of the three unfortunate victims are now in the Morgue, where an inquest will be held. Mr. Neilson was removed to the Western Hospital in a delirious condition, but happily ignorant of the terrible tragedy enacted in his home.

According to the police, intimation of the tragedy was first given by the husband himself, who, getting out of bed in search of his wife and children, discovered their absence. He was in a semi-delirious condition, and in a moment of apprehension, climbed out of the bedroom window, and asked the neighbours for news of his family. One neighbour told him that she had seen his wife on the lawn about six o'clock that evening, and that she believed Mrs. Neilson had gone down toward the lake. Partly satisfied with this explanation, Mr. Neilson was persuaded to return to his bed. This was about eight o'clock. A few minutes after that hour Mrs. Neilson still being absent, and her husband calling frantically for her from a bedroom, led the neighbours to investigate. They, with Police Constable Collier, found Mrs. Neilson kneeling on the floor of the kitchen with her hed buried in a pail of water. She was quite dead. Near her was a wash boiler, in which the body of her one-year-old boy was immersed. Searching further, the neighbours came upon a heay of bedclothes in the corner of the kitchen, under which they found the dead body of the other boy, his baby face bearing the terrible evidence of suffocation. Both the boys were naked.

Five Years Needed to Repair Damage to the Lens Area

Will Be Two Years Before Coal Can Be Taken From Mines.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—It will be from eighteen months to two years before it will become possible to take out any coal from the mines in the Lens region, which the Germans damaged to the best of their ability before they retired from the city, an inspection of the mining properties has revealed. It is estimated that it will take five years to restore the normal production of the pits.

The inspection was made by Albert Le Brun, the minister of blockade, and Louis Loucheour, the minister of munitions, together with M. Periet and M. Basl, chairman and vice-chairman respectively of the committee on lines, of the Chamber of Deputies. They visited Lens itself and the adjoining mining towns of Sallaumines Lieven.

They found the mines flooded in those localities, and although every possible measure is under way to restore the operating plants by the state, it will be two years, it is estimated, before the mines can be cleared of water. The mining plants have been systematically destroyed, the destructive process having been carried to the most extreme limits.

At Courrieres, north-east of Lens, the Germans had blown up the mines before retiring. Of the ten thousand homes in Lens the visitors found not one left standing, the town having been completely razed.

We Must Follow Up!

THE Story of the Gallipoli Withdrawal is a tale of inadequate support. Like Salamanders clinging to the Red Hot Bars of a fiery furnace, the boys of Australia and New Zealand clung to the slopes of Anzac. Desperately, heriocally they clung. No troops under any circumstances ever displayed greater soldierly qualities or upheld more sacredly the best traditions of England's Army. But they had to withdraw because the FOLLOW UP WAS NOT THERE.

To some of us it has been given to march with the columns of troops that go to France and to others it is given to wave God speed but he who marches and he who stays is equally a Citizen of this Great Dominion and equally responsible for its success in its endeavours in this great struggle.

Then let us at home consider how necessary we are, how useful we must be. Those who go to fight cannot hope to win by naked bravery unless every individual at home does all he can.

We must have NO Gallipoli in the

On the eve of Victory we must recognize the fact that the price of Victory is greater than a defensive fight. The RED CROSS CAMPAIGN IS NEXT

Fuel Commission Refuses to Alter the Quarter-Ton Clause

Meeting of Representatives of the Churches Will be Held to Discuss Means of Conserving Coal—Applications Were Dealt With.

That the public must abide by the Fuel Commissioners original ruling that some coal is better than no coal was the decision reached at last night's meeting of the Board and the writers of several communications regarding a shortage received will be so informed.

It was decided that while one man may have some chestnut coal on hand, it is not fair to send him more of another kind while his neighbour is absolutely without fuel.

NO INSPECTOR ....

Mr. R. H. Hicks stated in a communication referring to the delivery of coal that the company has neither an inspector in their employ nor the right to enter any cellar. To this the Secretary was instructed to reply that the Board is getting the records written up as quickly as possible and that in the meanwhile the Board expects the dealers to carry out the regulations of the Board.

Bolshevism Grows Among Germans

(Special to Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct .17. — Unless peace is effected immediately a Bolshevist revolution will break out in Germany, according to despatches received here to-day from sources said to be authentic. The despatches were received by the Express from Amsterdam; the Daily News' from Stockholm, and the Chronicle, from Geneva. All came here from their staff correspondens.

Bolshevism has been noted among the middle classes. The regular Socialists are alarmed, and have drawn up a government which they will seek to establish in the event of the Kaiser's abdication, hoping to head off anarchy and Bolshevism.

SPANISH INFLUENZA OF ANCIENT HISTORY

Probably This Infection Dates Back More Than 400 B.C.—Present Outbreak in Practically Every Section in Europe.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Spanish influenza, Public Health Service scientists believe, is very similar to the epidemic of grippe which swept the country during the winter of 1889 and 1890.

Very probably, the infection, resurrected in Europe, and after sweeping the war-torn countries, now has appeared in the United States, has a very ancient history, taking it back to the day of Hippocrates and Livius more than four hundred years before Christ.

The best means of treatment of influenza cases were communicated to the country a few days ago by Surgeon General Blue through the Associated Press. Now General Blue has issued a leaflet which tells something about the strange malady.

"It seems probable that in 1918, a in 1889-90, the earliest appearance was in eastern Europe, it says." By April cases were occurring on the western front. In Spain, according to reports, 30 per cent., of the population were attacked in May. The 1889 epidemic, starting in northern Europe also fell heavily on Spain; the present ruler, then three years old, being one of the first attacked in Madrid. The King of Spain is said also to have been attacked in the present epidemic. The epidemic of 1918 was at its height in Germany in June and July. It has appeared in practically every section of Europe. In England the epidemic prevailed in May, June and July.

"Outbreaks have been reported from various sections of the United States, but the spread has been by no means as rapid as in 1889, when the disease occurred in America almost simultaneously with its appearance in western Europe

"The symptoms in the present pandemic have been an acute onset, often very sudden, with bodily weakness and pains in the head, eyes, back, and elsewhere in the body. Vomiting may be a symptom of onset and dizziness if frequent. Chilly sensations are usual, and the temperature is from 100 to 104 degrees, the pulse remaining comparatively low. Sweating is not infrequent. The appetite is lost, and prostration is marked. Constitpation is the rule. Drowsiness and photophobia are common. The fever usually lasts from three to five days ;but relapses are not uncommon, and complications partiularly pulmonary, are to be feared. The death rate is usually given as extremely low; but in the latter periods of an outbreak an increased number of deaths, presumably due to complications, has been reported in Spain and in the United States. Besides bronchitis and pneumonia, inflammation of the middle ear and cardiac weakness may follow the disease.

"The short course of the fever, (always less than seven days), in uncomplicated influenza is an aid in diagnosis. All ages are attacked, young active adults being especially susceptible. In Germany there has been such a preponderance of cases among the young that it is supposed that the 1895 epidemic conferred an immunity on most of those at present over 30 years of age. This has not been observed elsewhere."

PERU IS PRO-ALLY.

Mr. Bruce Lees, who has Returned Home, says Germans have Been Displaced.

Mr. Bruce Lees, son of Mr. Richard Lees, was in the city the early part of the week, having reached home on Saturday from Peru, South America, where he has been for the past three years in the employ of a large copper company. Mr. Lees has seen some stirring times in South America. Only a short time ago a revolution broke out in his locality, but it was soon put down with the aid of machine guns and other arms. The German business men have been practically frozen out, and the whole country is with the allies.

He returned home by way of the Panama Canal, and had a long but interesting trip.

Until recently the copper company have retained their men for urgent work in the production of copper for war purposes but a short while ago they released a number who had previously applied to go overseas, and Mr. Lees was one of them. He has gone to Toronto, where he is joining the Flying Corps.

Trades and Labour Council Hear Complaints That Orders for Both Coal and Wood are Refused by Dealers—Protest Latest Order-in Council.

OTHER BUSINESS TRANSACTED

The Trades and Labor Council, most of the members wearing their overcoats, discussed the fuel situation last night with more heat than has been generated at any meeting since midsummer. A delegate protested against the order of the Fuel Commission forbidding deliveries to any persons who have one-quarter of a ton in supply. He stated that he had five hundred pounds of pea-coal of first-class quality, which he was saving for the zero weather of January. Because he happened to have exactly the specified quantity he was banned by the dealers, while neighbors who had no coal were receiving allotments of two tons. This delegate maintained that the regulation was too arbitrary, the discrimination too fine, and finally, that it was a detriment to those citizens who had virtually no coal.

Mr. Alex. Murray replied that while this delegate deserved some consideration, there were many citizens without any coal who had a prior claim on the available supplies.

One suggestion was made that the member should consume the troublesome quarter ton, and then he would be in the happy position of the thousand families who are living in hope and anticipation of the promised allowances of two tons each, which they may, or may not, obtain.

THE WOOD SITUATION.

Some members stated that they could get neither coal nor wood. They declared that the dealers had ample supplies of wood, but they refused to accept orders now, giving as an explanation that they had more business than they could handle in the next two weeks. The commission, it was stated, had no control over the distribution of wood and, realizing that limitation, the Labour Council evidently concluded that there was no means of relieving the present scarcity in the midst of plenty. It was reported that Ald. A. A. McIntyre was one of those who had failed yesterday to obtain wood, which he intended to use as a substitute in his furnace.

MR. MURRAY'S REPORT.

Mr. Murray told the Council that the Fuel Commission had not yet secured a complete tabulation of the deliveries of coal that have already been made in Peterboro. When this information was prepared the Commission would be in a position to instruct the dealers in regard to future deliveries.

In the meantime, Mr. Murray had skimmed over the card index at the City Hall and had found that the Peterboro Club had 23 1-2 tons of coal in its bins.

Members of the Club, he discovered, had from 15 to 30 tons of coal in their homes, and yet each member was keeping two places heated—one of which he did not need.

Mr. Murray remarked that there should be "some kick made against that state of affairs," and the council agreed with him. It was even suggested that the Peterboro Club should be closed for the winter, and the 23 1-2 tons of coal distributed where it was urgently needed.

Chairman J. J. Hartley said that one of the Club members had expressed that opinion, and a delegate added that he was glad to know that one of the Clubmen had a conscience.

In regard to the citizens who have comparatively large quantities of coal banked around their furnaces, Mr. Murray told the Council that he had been informed that these persons had received only their seventy per cent. allowance.

One disappointed delegate remarked that the Council had been discussing the coal question for nearly a year without any material progress.

"You should have had a commission before this," Mr. Murray commented. The Council's attitude is one of co-operation with the Commissioners. It was stated that they should have every encouragement, and that criticisms should be withheld until they had sufficient time to acquaint themselves of the local situation.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

The delegates from the locals reported an unanimous decision to support Labor candidates in the approaching municipal elections. The Machinists have proposed the name of Mr. Murray, but it is intended that there should be, if possible, four nominees of Labor for the aldermanic contest. Further reports will be received at the next meeting, when it is expected that a "slate" may be considered.

PROTEST NO STRIKE ORDER.

A resolution was passed protesting against the Order in Council forbidding, with stringent penalties, strikes and lock outs. Copies of this resolution will be sent to Sir Robert Borden and Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P. Opinion was strongly against this drastic action by the Government. One delegate asserted that the McAdoo award had not yet been applied to the railways, granting among other conditions, an eight-hour day, and he feared that this order was a movement to defeat the railway employees. By one delegate it was termed "modified Kaiserism," and by another "magnified Kaiserism," directed against the workers.

The Hon. Frank B. Carvell's declaration that the men at home should be satisfied with four or five dollars a day, called forth a statement that on such wages the average man was simply living from hand to mouth.

While no recommendation was made, a delegate said that approval should be expressed of Chief Grange's efforts to secure better working hours for the firemen. Another member remarked that the firemen seemed to be content to let others agitate for them. "If they desire better conditions, they should form a union, and demand them."

THE ANTI-STRIKE DECREE

The Editor of the Examiner, City.

Dear Sir:—

I have been asked by some of the citizens who are interested in the rights of labor, to draw to your attention the Order-in-council preventing strikes. I have not seen the original Order-in-council, but according to the press reports of the Minister of Labour's statements there has been introduced a law which is more drastic than anything that has ever been passed in any civilized country, concerning the contractual relation of employer and employed. It is significant that at this time, which may be close to the conclusion of the war, capitalistic tendency is so evidenced to such an extent that this Order-in-Council has been passed preventing a man, although the cost of living may rise one hundred per cent, from taking issue with his employer as to the amount of wages he is receiving and decide to give up his employment by reason of his not receiving sufficient pay to satisfy him.

The following editorial in one of the Toronto papers of yesterday which is supporting the Government indicates what a startling departure has been made in this case, and particularly having in mind the Labor leaders were not consulted in the matter. The following is the editorial from the Toronto Globe:

THE ANTI-STRIKE DECREE

The Federal Order-in-council prohibiting, under penalties of fine or imprisonment, or both, strikes and lock-outs during the war is more drastic than any war-time measures in Great Britain or the United States which have for their object the minimizing of industrial disturbance.

The new regulations apply to industries mentioned in the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, and to "industries and railway operations which are essential to the efficient performance of Canada's duty in the prosecution of the war." In making this announcement, the Government, through Senator Robertson, calls attention to the provision for the reference of Labor cases to Boards of Conciliation, and to the creation of a Court of Appeal to which either party in a dispute may resort if dissatisfied with the finding of the Conciliation Board.

In effect, the Government has introduced compulsory arbitration for the period of the war. The system was at one time much debated in Canada. It had some advocates, but organized Labor pronounced against it, and the Government was in accord with public opinion in rejecting it in favor of the principle embodied in the Industrial Disputes Act. It has now been adopted as a war measure, though the country was not aware that such a step was seriously contemplated, and Labor representatives were not given an opportunity to confer with the Government on the subject. The President of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress is justified in protesting against this summary and secret method of deciding a question bearing vitally and directly upon the interests and liberties of the working classes.

In the first number of the Canadian Official Record which reached the newspapers a few days ago, the Minister of Labor dilated on the difficulties of enforcing the rulings of Labor tribunals—the very policy upon which the Government has embarked. In the light of the Government's decision, this passage from the Minister's statement makes curious reading:

"There has not been any country, except in such countries as Germany—the ukases of whose Governments are put into effect by force of arms—means devised to implement the work of Courts of Labor except by voluntary acceptance. Even in Australia, where it is supposed Labor legislation has reached its highest development, the decisions of courts have been rejected over and over again. Australia has failed in its supreme test of Labor experimentation."

Canada has adopted the plan which the Minister says has failed in Australia, and if it enforces the law it will be doing something which is only done "in such countries as Germany." The Minister in the same statement, went on to say that "we have reached the stage when we must seriously consider how much farther in Canada we can go in the way of enforcement." It may be said that these words foreshadowed the Government's "ukase," but Mr. Crothers proceeded to indicate the serious natures of the obstacles to compulsory measures: "I have received hundreds of scores of representations by letters, personally and otherwise, urging coercion. But if we reached a situation where a hundred thousand, or several hundreds of thousands, of men refused to accept a decision, how is the Government to deal with them? You can easily place a comparatively few employees in jail, but how about a hundred thousand employees?" It is to be hoped the Government will not have to answer Mr. Crother's question, but it is taking the risk of being confronted with it.

The Minister of Labor propounded another query. Would public opinion, he asked, back up the Government "by physical aid if necessary" in carrying out the award of a Labor Court if one of the parties to a dispute refused to accept it? As the Minister remarked, "without a strong, enlightened public opinion to back up a Government on a definite policy of right or wrong, a grave Labor issue cannot successfully be dealt with." But what steps has the Government taken to instruct the public? It did not consult the people of Canada, or even the leaders of organized Labor before making its decision. It has invited the grave difficulties mentioned by the Minister and will expect public opinion to back it up, without first having taking the public into its confidence.

A vital principle of personal liberty is involved in this question—the right of a man to chose his occupation and his employer, and dispose of his labor as he pleases. It may be reasonable and necessary in war time to compel a man to work or fight, but anti-strike laws compel him to work at a particular thing, and may make him the chattel of a particular employer. In war time infringements of individual rights are sometimes essential in the interest of the State, and here may be an argument for prohibiting strikes in certain industrial or railroad systems when it is demonstrated that these strikes suspend war work or the transportation of troops and war supplies. The Government's Order-in-council is not restricted to these operations. The operatives on a street railway, for instance, could be fined or imprisoned for quitting work. The nature of the employment affected by the new regulations should have been strictly defined and brought within the narrowest limits consistent with the object of preventing any drag on Canada's war effort. But before so revolutionary and extreme a proposal was given the force of law the question should have been thrown open to public discussion and an effort made to secure the co-operation of the working classes. The government has done an arbitrary thing in an arbitrary manner.

Yours Truly

Flight Lieutenant Jackson Forced Down in Air Fight

Was Attacked by Two Enemy Machines, and When His Engine Was Hit He Was Compelled to Descend—Landed Within Enemy Lines.

IS AT KARLSRUHE

Mrs. James Jackson, 232 Perry St., has received the following letter from her son, Flight Lieutenant W. E. Jackson, of the Royal Air Force, who was taken prisoner early in August—

Germany, August 21, 1918.

Dear Mother and Father—

I suppose you will be a little surprised to hear that I am a prisoner of war. I sent a cable by way of Switzerland yesterday and I also sent a card to Cox and Co., to cable to you. I was taken prisoner on August 10. I was out on a patrol and we got into a big fight and I had two enemy machines to fight. We were at it for quite a while and I got several holes in my machine, but fortunately I was not hit. Some of my wires were shot away and then my engine was hit. All I could do then was to break off the fight and glide as far as I could, but I landed right in the front lines. I am quite well and our treatment has been the very best. As officers, we have no work to do, so we put in our time reading most of the time. I will not be able to write as often as before, as we are allowed two letters and four post cards each month. Our food is not the same as we have been used to, but we get parcels from the Red Cross in England, so we have plenty to eat. We can cash cheques also and buy stuff at the canteen. We are also issued with a little clothing by the Red Cross, but I believe that my kit will be sent to Cox and Company and I will have them forward my clothing.

I am not at a permanent camp yet, but I expect to go in a week or two. The camp where I am now is very nice and we are allowed to walk all about the grounds. Our quarters are first class and we have English orderlies to look after us. The prisoners are all officers, so we have a pretty good time. I think that the best way to send parcels would be to write to the Royal Air Force, Prisoner of War Fund in care of the Air Board, London and request them to send parcels which you would send them the money for. They would get here much sooner and as they send a number of parcels they would not get lost as easy. You could also request the Red Cross and Prisoner of War Fund to send parcels.

The camp where I am at now is quite a nice place. We are allowed out around the grounds all the day long. There are nice shade trees and flower gardens. In the camp there is also a billiard room, reading-room and a library where we can get books to read. So you see it is not too bad at all. At present I am not so bad off for clothes as I happened to have my top boots and my good breeches on and also an open tunic.

I guess I shall close for now, so please don't worry about me, as I am quite alright and am having a good time. There are several chaps here that I knew before, so we get along fine. Well please write as often as you can. So good-bye—

BILL.

CLOSE CONFERENCE BECAUSE OF THE FLU

Methodist in Session at Hamilton to Conclude Sessions Today.

HAMILTON, Oct. 17.—As a result of the proclamation about to be issued by the Board of Health, closing churches, schools and theatres, and banning all public gatherings, the Methodist General Conference decided yesterday to bring its business to a close by tonight. The announcement was made this morning by Rev. Dr. T. Albert Moore.

The report of the educational committee recommended that Wesley College, Winnipeg, should not have the right to appoint a committee with power to dismiss a professor. Dismissal must come from the board of the college which is under jurisdiction of the conference.

The matter arose out of the summary dismissal of Rev. Dr. S. G. Bland and Rev. Dr. Irwin on account of alleged radical views. No mention was made of reinstatement. The recommendation was adopted.

The establishment of an archives department and the appointment of an archivist at a salary of $500, to preserve relics of Canadian Methodism, was agreed upon. Rev. D. D. McLean of Winnipeg was appointed to the position.

Changes in the text of discipline were also adopted. The term Holy Ghost gives place to that of Holy Spirit and the Lord's Day replaces the old name of the Sabbath.

5,000 DEAD FROM FLU IN NEW YORK CITY

Over 50,000 Cases Reported, But Death Rate Shows Decrease.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—More than 5,000 persons have died from Spanish influenza and pneumonia in this city within a month over 50,000 have been ill, and the new cases developed during the past 24 hours show a big increase over those reported yesterday, according to the figures given out to-day by the Health Department. Fatalities are slowly decreasing, however, the deaths from both diseases being 25 fewer on to-day's lists than on Tuesday morning's.

Including this morning's figures the department stated, the death roll since Sept. 18 has been 2,296 from influenza and 2,806 from pneumonia. The cases of illness from influenza have totalled 48,034, and from pneumonia 5,047.

Since Tuesday's report was made public 633 persons have died, influenza claiming one more victim than pneumonia. The increase in new cases of influenza is more than 800; the lists to-day show 5,113 new cases while pneumonia prostrated 585 persons—a rise of 106.

REACHED CREST IN TRENTON, N. J.

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 16.—The influenza epidemic in New Jersey has apparently reached its crest. Reports compiled from all parts of the State show there have been 88,256 cases, with 907 deaths. There have been 3,352 cases of pneumonia, with 892 deaths.

Philadelphia, Oct. 16.—The number of new cases of influenza reported for the 24 hours ending at noon was 1,686 as against 1,990 reported yesterday. In the same period there were 466 deaths from influenza, and 245 from pneumonia.

DR. MAYO HAS SERUM TO BAR PNEUMONIA

Big Physician Says More Than 1,000 Persons Treated and No Disease Appears.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 16.—Dr. William J. Mayo, advising the Board of Regents at the University of Minnesota that the university should not be opened to civilian students, in view of the epidemic of influenza in the State, announced that a serum treatment has been perfected at the Mayo institution at Rochester that thus far has prevented a single case of pneumonia developing following attacks of the Spanish influenza.

"More than 1,000 cases have been treated with this serum, and in no case we know that had preventive inoculation has pneumonia developed," Dr. Mayo said. "We are not absolutely sure, except that we know the inoculation can do no harm."

Referring to the possibility of the serum being used in the army barracks, and elsewhere, Dr. Mayo said, the Government probably will not be able to obtain the serum in quantities until the supply is developed. He said the anti-pneumonia serum had been combined with another preventive serum, and that the experiments now are being watched closely.

"Moreover," Dr. Mayo continued, "Spanish influenza is just the old-fashioned grippe, and should run its course in a month or a little more. We are now in the second lap in this country, and in few weeks we should be clear of the epidemic. In the East, where so many deaths are occurring, they just now are reaping the harvest where the influenza itself already has pretty nearly run its course.

"Grippe always has been much worse wherever there are large groups. There has been some criticism of serum not being used at the army barracks, but I am satisfied the officers in charge will do all that is humanly possible."

Dr. Mayo said the serum used as a preventive of pneumonia had influenza bacillus added to it and that this now is being tried.

KAISER HEAVILY GUARDED.

Machine Guns Before and Behind Him When He Goes Out.

THE HAGUE, Oct. 17.— The New York Times correspondent learns from a person closely connected with the Krupps that when the Kaiser made his famous speech to his "friends" at Krupps he made it from a carriage which was surrounded by machine guns, and that he always goes out now guarded by machine guns in front and behind. When 5,000 men were recently drafted to be sent to the front they left singing the Marsellaise.

Many people in Germany expect a revolution of the German populace in about two months. It is said that he has already bought up enormous stores in Holland to be ready for his flight from Germany when the time comes.

German Right Wing Has Been Wrenched From Coast

Operations in Flanders Have Vital Effect on Whole Western Front —It Can Now Be Outflanked— Enemy Cannot Retrieve the Situation.

ARDENNE LOSS A DISASTER

PARIS, Oct. 17.— The fate of the German defences along the Belgian coast and in the great Lille industrial area has been sealed by the continued advance of the allied armies under King Albert on the thirty mile front in Flanders. The significance of the evacuation of the Belgian coast line is far greater than the gain of Flanders territory, with its many airdromes and submarine bases.

The extreme right wing of the German defences in the west has been wrenched away from the protecting sea. Henceforth, the immense line which has been buttressed by the sea on one end and by the Swiss frontier on the other, forcing the allies always to attack frontally, can be outflanked.

It is believed here that the allied attack in Flanders did no surprise the Germans, but the rapidity of the advance did. The enemy is now powerless to retrieve the situation. The allied rush has been so quick that the hope is expressed that Lille, Turcoing and Roubaix will be found almost intact.

The operations in Flanders are bound to have a vital effect on the whole western line. While the British attack across the Lys will bring about the evacuation of the Lille salient, the march of the Belgians on Ghent will have a marked influence on the general retreat in the west to which the Germans are irrevocably condemned by the Flanders advance.

Gen. Ludendorff will be obliged to seek to re-establish his fast crumbling front far in the rear of the present operations. The Lille-Mezieres line will be out of the question, as it will be outflanked, and Ludendorff probably will have to defend the German frontier on the Antwerp-Namur-Metz line. To reach this line, however, he will have to retreat swiftly on a wide front. Such a manoeuvre, it is believed here, would be most perilous, with Marshal Foch hammering unrelentlessly on the retreating armies.

In any case, the German commander has to preserve at all costs the Ardenne pivot. That is why the Germans are offering such determined resistance to the French north of Vouzieres and to the Americans on both sides of the Meuse. The enemy might give way on other parts of the line with little strategic loss, but to fail in defending the Ardenne pivot would mean disaster.

"RUBY, OTTAWA 623," WHEAT IS INTRODUCED IN CANADA

New Hardy Grain Ripens Earlier Than Red Fife—Cross-bred Oats Without Hull Also Announced.

OTTAWA, Oct. 17.— Several years ago Dr. Saunders, Dominion Cerealist, after a long series of experiments, produced a new hardy wheat which he named Marquis. Experiments were made with it in Western Canada and they proved exceptionally successful. The new variety ripened earlier than Red Fife, then the favourite western wheat, and proved to be equally good for milling purposes and as splendid a producer. A hardy wheat means everything in the short summers of the West and to-day Marquis is the leading Western wheat. Much Marquis wheat was raised in Ontario this year and the big Ontario yields were chiefly from this variety.

Now the Agriculture Department announces that the Dominion Cerealist has introduced a new variety produced as a result of many years of cross-breeding at Ottawa. This wheat has been named "Ruby, Ottawa 623." It is considered to be the best variety extant in the extra-early ripening class. It matures even earlier than Marquis and is expected to prove of great value in districts where Marquis does not ripen satisfactory. Ruby produces hard, red kernels and displays those fine qualities in milling and baking for which Canadian wheats are famous. Marquis wheat has already meant millions to Canada, and Ruby may prove equally as valuable. In the production of these varieties of wheat the Experimental Farm has justified its existence many times over.

Another very interesting cereal, also a cross-bred variety produced by the Dominion Cerealist at Ottawa, has been announced. This is a hulless oat called "Liberty, Ottawa 480." Scarcely any distribution of this has been possible thus far, but provision has been made for sending out a number of samples next season. This variety loses its hull when threshed and will, therefore, be of great value for the feeding of young chickens, pigs, etc. Its field characters are also good. While it does not produce as large a yield as the best standard sorts, it is exceptionally early in ripening and has stiffer straw than most other varieties. It may also be mentioned that this oat can be ground for household use in any ordinary small mill and produces, in this way, oatmeal of admirable quality.

Protect Yourself Against Spanish Influenza

A Dangerous Epidemic That Is Prevalent Throughout Canada

This disease which is now prevalent throughout Ontario, is "Epidemic Catarrh," characterized by acute inflammation of the mucous membrane of the air passages, attended by severe constitutional disturbances followed by general debility and frequently develops into an attack of pneumonia.

It is highly infectious and every precaution should be taken to avoid contracting this dreaded disease.

Don't put unclean things into the mouth. Keep the hands clean, and wash the mouth and gargle the throat once or twice a day with "PYROLL."

While this epidemic is prevalent, people cannot be too cautious and careful and everybody, and especially those attending schools or places where a number of people gather, should use "PYROLL," which is recommended by doctors and dentists as the best antiseptic and mouth wash to prevent this disease. mwf-6d 82

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts yesterday, 58 cars, with 443 cattle, 55 calves, 1,871 hogs, and 879 sheep and lambs.

There was a fair market to-day for choice butcher steers and heifers and for heavy steers, at steady prices. For the common stuff the market is still slow and draggy, and there were quite a few lots left unsold at the end of the day.

Demand for feeders and stockers very slow.

Milch cows are cheaper, declining from $10 to $15 per head this week.

Calves steady.

Sheep and lambs steady.

Hogs weak. A further reduction of 25c. is predicted for next week, with the chances that the decline may go still further.

We Must Follow Up!

THE Story of the Gallipoli Withdrawal is a tale of inadequate support. Like Salamanders clinging to the Red Hot Bars of a fiery furnace, the boys of Australia and New Zealand clung to the slopes of Anzac. Desperately, heriocally they clung. No troops under any circumstances ever displayed greater soldierly qualities or upheld more sacredly the best traditions of England's Army. But they had to withdraw because the FOLLOW UP WAS NOT THERE.

To some of us it has been given to marcn with the columns of troops that go to France and to others it is given to wave God speed but he who marches and he who stays is equally a Citizen of this Great Dominion and equally responsible for its success in its endeavours in this great struggle.

Then let us at home consider how necessary we are, how useful we must be. Those who go to fight cannot hope to win by naked bravery unless every individual at home does all he can.

MRS. CLAYBORNE PAYS RUTH GENEROUSLY FOR HER WORK

CHAPTER XV

Finally the room was finished. Ruth had been South a month. At first Brian had written cheerfully, almost gaily, about keeping bachelor hall, etc. But the last two or three letters had told of his loneliness, and had wondered when she was coming back.

"You haven't left me for good, have you, dear?" he asked, pretending to joke, "because if you have, I shall set the police on to you with orders to bring you back. But really, Ruth, I don't believe you have any idea of how lonely I am, or you would pack up and come by the next train. I can't bear to go home lately; it grows more and more lonely without you."

"I really must go!" she told her aunt. "It was good of Brian to let me come, and I feel abominably selfish when I think of him there, all alone, while I am having a glorious time here and being waited on like I used to be. I reckon you all have spoiled me again"

Her aunt did not urge her to remain. But she figured up what she would have paid a decorator for the work, and insisted that Ruth take a check for the same amount

"'The laborer is worthy of his hire,' you know," she quoted.

"But I LOVED to do it!" Ruth returned, "And really would you have paid a really truly professional man all that?" the check was a large one.

"Yes, perhaps more."

This second parting was in some respects harder than the first had been. Ruth had so easily slipped back into the old groove; so readily fallen into her old habits of luxury, and had been so loving, as well as beloved, that they could not bear to see her go. Mammy Rachel especially lamented long and loudly. She had expected to return with Ruth from the moment she knew she was coming South. Her disappointment was very keen and she took no pains to hide it.

"It sho'ly am wicked, she am, nothin' but a baby, and her all 'lone up No'th."

Only Mrs. Clayborne said nothing. She fairly ached to keep her niece with her; to feel that once again she belonged to her, and was happy. She noted the softness of her hands, the gloss of her hair, the look of perfect groomnig which had always been associated with Ruth, and which had been absent when she came

"How does she endure it?" she muttered. "She must love him very much."

Ruth did. As she drew near New York, she could scarcely wait to see Brian to be clasped in his arms It seemed to her that something must be the matter the train went so slowly. It fairly seemed to crawl. But finally they were at the station, the train stopped and she saw Brian, tall, handsome, distinguished-looking waiting for her.

Clasped in his arms, regardless of who saw them, she told him how glad she was to be back, how she didn't believe she could ever leave him again, and many things that emotional people say at such times. And Brian! How he told her how he had missed her, how the day and nights were, each, forty-eight hours long. That he had considered commiting suicie if she remained longer; and all the foolish things a man very much in love with his wife is apt to say.

They had dinner at a nice little restaurant. And as Mrs. Murphy had scrubbed and cleaned the little flat until it was spotless, Ruth's homecoming was really quite a gay and festive affair. But the next morning, just as she was happily dreaming of some old castle which she was to redecorate, Brian woke her:

"You'll have to hurry if I am to have any breakfast," he told her.

For a moment Ruth lay trying to realize where she was. It was only half past six. She had been sleeping until eight; then her coffee and bath. But this wasn't Aunt Laura's. This was home, her home and Brian's. So she sprung out of bed, threw on a kimona and hurried into the kitchen to the once more unaccustomed and unwelcome task of getting breakfast.

All day Ruth's thoughts were very busy.

"I reckon the first thing, we all will be hearing you have gone into business. I hear it is quite a fad up No'th."

Peggy Sutton had all unconsciously set her thoughts in motion. Now they wandered on and on of their own volition Try as she would, Ruth could not divert them into another channel.

She went to the drawer where she had laid it, and took out the check her aunt had given her.

"She said it was no more—not as much, perhaps—as she would have given a professional. She says my work is equal to theirs. And—it is twice as much as Brian earns, even in his best months."

All through the day she wondered. Then:

"Why not?" she said to herself, "Others do such things because it is a fad with them. Why not do it because it is necessary and—because you love it—had rather do it than—this!" looking around at the kitchen, and, because of her straying thoughts burning her arm as she lifted the potatoes from the stove.

"I believe I will!" a frightened look in her face. "I won't say anything to Brian until I see if anyone will have me. Then I can hire this sort of work done. Ugh—how I loathe it!" as, once again, she burned herself on the hot dish

SLEEPLESS NIGHTS WITH ECZEMA.

Mrs. Link, 12 Walker Street, Halifax, N.S., states:—"After three years of miserable torture and sleepless nights with terrible eczema, and after trying over a dozen remedies without obtaining anything but slight temporary relief, I have been perfectly and entirely cured by using Dr Chase's Ointment. After the third or fourth application of this grand Ointment I obtained relief and a few boxes were sufficient to make a thorough cure

Something Saved.

"What success did you have raising chickens?"

"Very little. Some escaped, thieves stole others and a large number died of a mysterious disease."

"That was tough luck."

"However, I beat the jinx to the last one."

"How was that?"

"Before anything could happen to it I had it killed and put in a pie."

Many Species of Banana.

The banana as a substitute for the potato would have one drawback. It has been found that those who live mainly upon this article of diet soon tend to become what is politely called "tubby." The banana with which we are all familiar is only one of many useful species. Cochin China produces a single fruit that is an ample meal for three men, and in East Africa an intoxicating drink is made from the native banana.—London Chronicle.

The Reason.

"The first year of married life is always the most troublesome. After a couple passes that safely the great danger of separation is over."

"Why do you say that?"

"It usually takes a man a year to learn the futility of arguing with his wife."

Tearing Sounds.

The ear can be trained to accustom itself to the sound of the tearing of various materials. The noise accompanying the tearing of cotton is unlike that of linen. The warp has its voice and the filling quite another, the former being shrill, while the latter is apt to be dull.

These Dear Girls.

Alice (just engaged)—What do you think Jack said to me last night? That if he had to choose either me or $10,000 he wouldn't look at the money. Marie—Dear, loyal fellow! Wouldn't like to risk the temptation, I suppose.—Boston Transcript.

Curiosity.

Gladys—Why are you going to all that trouble to open that letter so carefully, Maud? Maud—Oh, I had a quarrel with George and intended to send his letter back unopened, but I just thought I would see what he said before I returned it.

THE ENTRANCE HALL.

Make It Suit Not Visitors, but the Occupants of the Home.

Is anything new to be said about the entrance hall? The smallest room in most houses, it is usually given in the plans an amount of attention that might seem out of all proportion to the rest of the house. And yet the ordinary entrance, whether it be a mere vestibule, a spacious hall of the colonial style or, as in our present day fashions, a part of the living room set off by an archway, is quite unsatisfactory. It is unsatisfactory for this reason—that the entrance way is designed and decorated from the standpoint of the impression it makes on visitors whereas the impression we should seek is not that made upon guests, but upon ourselves, the occupants of the house

Too often we give the entrance a severe treatment that impresses the student of beauty or that amazes the less discriminating visitor by the other extreme of lavish display. But how does either of these two types of entrance affect those who come into the house many times every day, the good man and his good wife and their children? Is it a room that by its suggestion of rest and repose tempts one after a hard day's work at the office to drop into the first easy chair that comes along, or does it irritate the nerves and keep one going, restless and uneasy, wandering from the entrance to the living room and from the living room to the study and thence to the attic by way of the basement?—Good Health.

Suppressing Swearing.

Profane as well as legal oaths have been the subject of many parliamentary measures in England. No fewer than five separate bills having the prevention of swearing for their object were presented during the reign of James I., but it was not until 1623 that an enactment was finally carried defining and controlling the offense In 1635 a public department was established to collect the fines enforced by this law. The officials of this department, of whom one was appointed in every parish, were allowed 2s. 6d. in the pound on the money thus collected, and the balance was paid over to the bishop for the benefit of the deserving poor. These penalties ceased to be enforced after the restoration, but were revived by a statute of William and Mary and still further increased under George II.

Stereoscopic Surveying.

There is in use a stereoscopic method of photographic surveying. Photographs are taken at two points with a surveying camera, the plates being exposed in the vertical plane passing through both stations. The developed plates, or positives from them, being then placed in a stereoscopic measuring machine that combines the pictures, a brief calculation gives the exact position of any desired point. The effective range of the instrument is put at about five miles, and the method is said to be of particular advantage in mapping large areas of mountainous country.

A Real Grievance.

Magistrate—How comes it that you dared to break into this gentleman's house in the dead of night? Prisoner—Why, your worship, the other time you reproached me for stealing in broad daylight. Ain't I to be allowed to work at all?—London Telegraph.

Her Idea.

"The spelling book's all wrong, mamma."

"Why so, Ethel?"

Your Labor Counts—every ounce of work you do helps some soldier who is fighting over there! This war is being fought as truly in the household and in the work-shop as it is in the trenches.

Some of our Canadian women are borne down physically and mentally, by the weaknesses of their sex. They suffer from backache, dragging sensation, very nervous and pain in top of head. If they ask their neighbors they will be told to take a Favorite Prescription of Dr. Pierce's which has been so well and favorably known for the past half century.

Weak women should try it now. Don't wait! Begin today. This woman's tonic and nervine will bring vim, vigor and vitality. Send Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 10c for trial pkg., tablets.

Paris, Ont.—"About three year ago I was ill in bed and suffered severe pain. The doctor said I had gall stones, but his medicine did not help me. A neighbor had been taking 'Favorite Prescription' and it had benefited her so much that she urged me to try some of hers, and that first dose helped me so much that I sent at once for a bottle. I was very much surprised at the prompt relief this medicine gave to me after the doctor had failed, and I have never had such a spell since, but whenever I feel the least bit run-down or in need of a tonic I take the 'Favorite Prescription' again for a few days. It has never failed to restore me to perfect health."—Mrs. Elizabeth Brown, P. O. Box 754.

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S JUMPER DRESS.

The short waisted or Empire style of dress seems to be becoming to the majority of little girls, but when it is featured in a jumper dress the effect is irresistible. In No. 8880 the tiny jumper is cut low in U shape at front and back, and the armholes are also cut quite low. The one piece skirt with straight lower edge is gathered to the short waisted jumper and the dress slips on over the head. As the guimpe is separate, it may be made of contrasting material. The closing is at centre front and a wide Dutch collar finishes the neck. The sleeves may be either long or short.

The girl's jumper dress pattern No. 8880 is cut in five sizes, 2 to 10 years. The 8 year size requires 2⅝ yards of 36 inch material for the dress and 1¼ yards of 36 inch for the guimpe. [illegible]

Making Lenses.

There is absolutely no other human occupation that requires the accuracy of observation and the delicacy of touch that are requisite for the making of the finest lenses. These are the most perfect products of human hands. It may convey some idea of the labor required in the making of a large lens to say that at least one year's time is required for the grinding and polishing of a thirty inch object glass. A little lens two inches in diameter requires the unremitting care and attention of a skilled workman for two or three days. It is easy, then, to see why it is that even lenses for high class photographic work are costly. A forty inch object glass for a large telescope cannot be made in much less than four years' time, and if everything does not go just right it may require much longer than that.

"Yaas. I said I was awfully sowwy not to ask her to mawwy me, but dad would cut me off if I did, and all she said was, 'You needn't imagine I'm the kind of a girl that accepts an apology for a man.'"—New York Tribune.

Where the Fault Lay.

A newspaper man tells of a friend who edited, with more or less success, a paper in a small town. That he was somewhat discouraged by the lack of interest shown in his journal was evidenced by this notice which one after noon appeared on the editorial page:

"Burglars entered our house last night. To the everlasting shame of the community for whose welfare we have labored, be it said, they got nothing."—Harper's Magazine.

A False Alarm.

"I know something, I do, about a member of this family," said little Bobby Slithers triumphantly to his older sister, Maud.

"Oh, dear!" exclaimed Miss Slithers "Half a dollar is all I have, Bobby. Will you promise not to tell if I give you that?"

"Sure, I will," answered Bobby in surprise. "But it ain't nothin' on you sis. It was the cook and the iceman."

An Englishwoman who is giving readings in this country boasts that during twenty-three years she never accepted a farthing from her husband without promptly repaying him. If that husband doesn't boast that he has a model wife he must be a queer one.

A NIGHT OF TERROR

Peculiar Experience With a Deadly Mexican Tarantula.

PENNED IN A DARK BEDROOM.

The Trying Ordeal Through Which a Woman Tourist Passed in a Hotel at Vera Cruz—Awaiting the Bite That Meant Madness and Then Death.

The tarantula is much larger in Mexico than in Italy. His four pairs of fuzzy legs, his speckled bulging belly, his abnormally fat head, armed with vicious nippers and equipped with eight eyes arranged in transverse rows, suffice to fill you with a wholesome desire to give him the right of way without ado.

Owing to the fact that he has an unwelcome habit of leaving his own realm in the tropical vines to make sociable little visitations to the corners of your bedroom it had always been my custom to search every nook and crevice of my sleeping room before retiring for the night. Twice had I seen native laborers, peons, in the agony of death due to a tarantula bite. So it was not surprising that this creeping thing headed my list of the many dangers to be shunned in Mexico.

I had just reached Vera Cruz from Mexico City, very tired, and decided to seek my room early in the evening, which, indeed, is the only safe and proper thing for an unaccompanied woman in Mexico to do. That part of the diligencias in which my room was located was evidently undergoing repairs, for a pile of timbers was included in the furnishing of my apartments.

No particular reason occurred to me why I should investigate this lumber, and, little realizing that it might shelter lurking danger, I flung my weary head on the dirty pillow. But as I lay quietly dozing off to sleep I suddenly heard a soft little noise, which one might describe as a cross between a hum and a hiss.

As a precaution against the many venomous things that creep and crawl even in the well beaten paths of Mexico I had made a careful study of the arachnids, to which class the tarantulas belong. I recognized that soft unostentatious warning that announced a roommate as undesirable as one could well wish.

Cautiously I stretched out my hand to see if by chance there were some matches on the little stand near my bed, with the result that I knocked the unlighted candle upon the floor. That was enough for my mettlesome roommate; he had been personally insulted by the noise, and suddenly in the utter darkness, that black stillness which one feels in a strange room, I detected a sickening odor, the warning of the angry tarantula.

I strained my ears to detect the soft, characteristic click that the male, the deadliest of the species, employs as a fancy trill to his malicious song. My blood chilled as I heard his muffled hum-click, hum-click, hum—apparently not three feet away. I held my breath, incidentally my nose, and lay wondering how long it would be ere I should feel his big fuzzy feet sneaking up the side of my neck or before his soft woolly body would light upon my face. It was not at all comforting to remember that one of a tarantula's eccentricities is to find his way to a point on the ceiling directly over the object of his anger and then to drop unceremoniously upon his victim.

It was the only time in my life when I longed for the bliss of ignorance. Would to heaven I had not studied this hideous horror of the tropics! But I had. Moreover, I had seen the awful effects of his worse than fatal bite, whose work of destruction was mercilessly long drawn out.

If the bite of a male tarantula infects a large artery it throws the victim into a dreadful state of crazed nerves. The incipient stages of the poisoning are accompanied by accentuated melancholia, followed by a shattering of the mentality. On gradually absorbing the venom the unfortunate subject reels and raves in a mad whirl until he swoons from pure exhaustion. The tarantella, the graceful Italian dance so often described in musical literature, derives its name from this hideous poisoning.

All this and more darted through my mind as I lay there in the darkness wondering if I, too, were doomed to die like a dervish. As the night wore on the buzzing grew less sedulous. I lay motionless during the thousand years till dawn, which came at last, a divinely soft, blue, shimmering shaft of light, which made things faintly visible. Cautiously I drew myself up to a sitting posture and craned my neck in a searching survey about my chamber of horrors.

There, in torture worse than mine, hung my roommate, four of his legs pinioned beneath the timbers. There he sprawled, a maimed but angry prisoner. His eight eyes winked me a militant "Good morning," and I forthwith returned the compliment with the slender shaft of my hatpin.—New York Sun.

The Easiest Way.

"I want the wages of a man; that's all I'm asking," said the "Votes For Women" orator.

"Then," said a man as he arose to speak, "I contend it isn't a vote that the lady wants. All she has to do is to get married."

Prefer loss before unjust gain, for that brings grief but once; this forever.—Child.

CARLYLE'S TEMPER.

It Was the Very Reverse of Bad, Said His Old Maidservant.

Carlyle had tempered? Not at all, if we are to place any belief in the testimony of the maid behind the broom. One of Carlyle's servants, Jessie, who on marrying became Mrs. Broadfoot, has left a very favorable impression of her old master, says the London Standard.

"I could have lived with him all my days," she says, "and it always makes me angry when I read, as I sometimes do, that he was bad tempered. He was the very reverse, in my opinion. I never would have left him when I did if I had not been going to get married. I took great pride in attending on him and studying all his wants and wishes.

"It was one of my duties to rush out and move on all street organs and things of that kind. Many a time in the morning before he rose I used to fill his pipe, the short clay he used in his bedroom, for him and strike the match to light it. I always cut up his tobacco (he bought it in flat cakes) and kept his tin box regularly supplied. He was always so grateful for these little services."

So much for popular belief and the dictum of the democratic servant biographer.

Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

Tells Safe and Simple Way to Treat and Relieve at Home.

If you have catarrh, catarrhal deafness or head noises caused by catarrh, or if phlegm drops in your throat and has caused catarrh of the stomach or bowels you will be glad to know that these distressing symptoms may be entirely overcome in many instances by the following treatment which you can easily prepare in your own home at little cost. Secure from your druggist 1 ounce of Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. An improvement is sometimes noted after the first day's treatment. Breathing should become easy, while the distressing head noises, headaches, dullness, cloudy thinking, etc., should gradually disappear under the tonic action of the the treatment. Loss of smell, taste, defective hearing and mucous dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms which suggest the presence of catarrh and which may often be overcome by this efficacious treatment. It is said that nearly ninety per cent. of all ear troubles are caused by catarrh and there must, therefore, be many people whose hearing may be restored by the simple, harmless, home treatment.

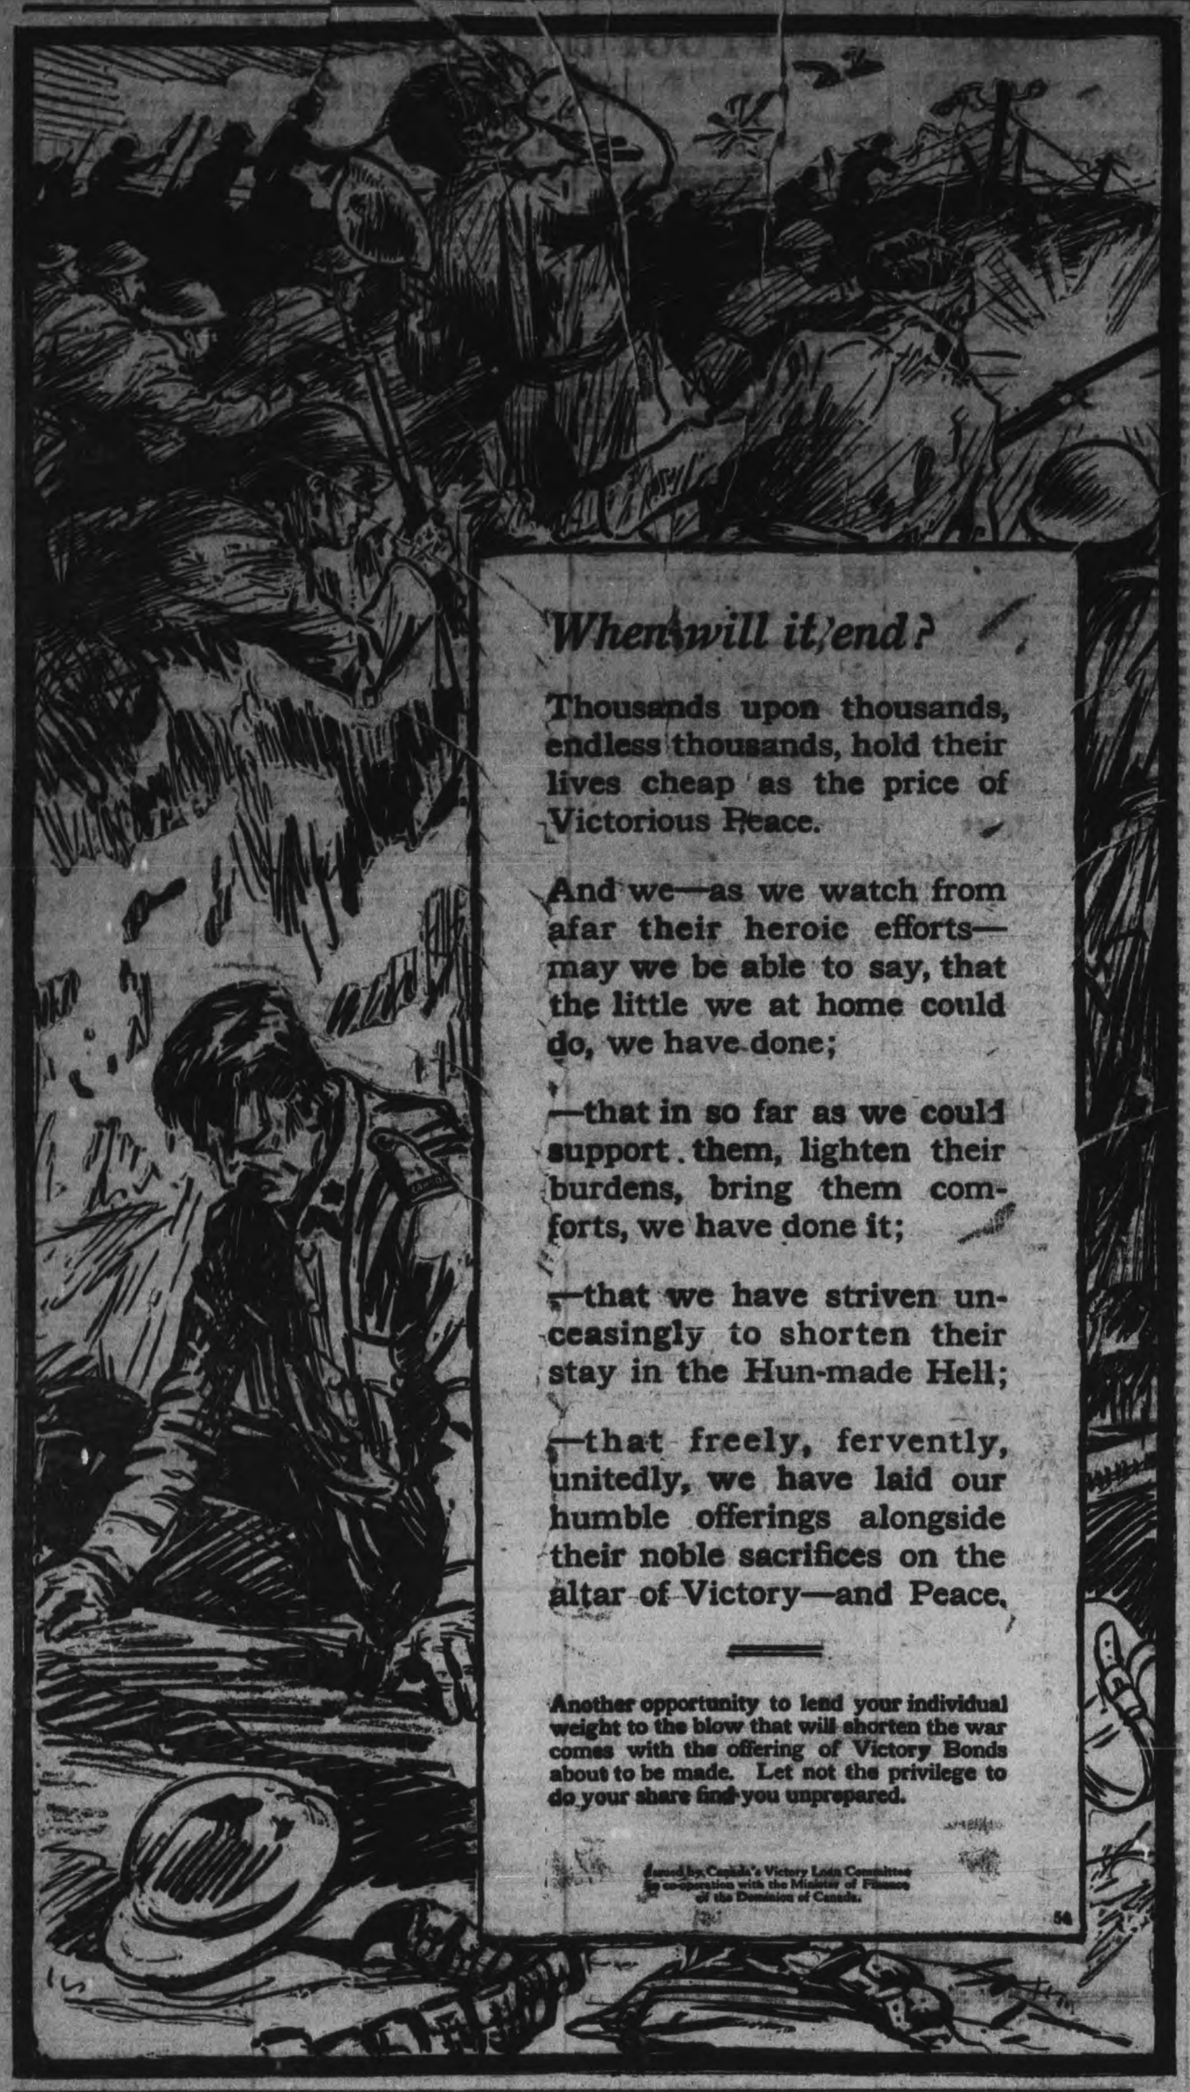
TO FARMERS

The Government has sent out an appeal to the Canadian people to buy at home. Why? Because when we buy abroad more than we sell we have to pay a premium on the excess, in addition to the price of the goods. This is known as an adverse rate of exchange. We have bought four hundred million dollars' worth more from the United States than we have sold to it. The rate of exchange is 2 per cent. against us. In other words, we are paying 2 per cent. on four hundred millions of dollars, or eight million dollars, which means that if we owe a great deal of money for goods bought we have to pay extra for the privilege. If we keep this up Canada will bleed to death. Please inquire into this matter at once.

28d-70 J. H. BURNHAM.



When will it end?

Thousands upon thousands, endless thousands, hold their lives cheap as the price of Victorious Peace.

And we—as we watch from afar their heroic efforts—may we be able to say, that the little we at home could do, we have done;

—that in so far as we could support them, lighten their burdens, bring them comforts, we have done it;

—that we have striven unceasingly to shorten their stay in the Hun-made Hell;

—that freely, fervently, unitedly, we have laid our humble offerings alongside their noble sacrifices on the altar of Victory—and Peace.

Another opportunity to lend your individual weight to the blow that will shorten the war comes with the offering of Victory Bonds about to be made. Let not the privilege to do your share find you unprepared.

Issued by Canada's Victory Loan Committee in co-operation with the Minister of Finance of the Dominion of Canada.

TEST "ALL WOOL" BY FIRE.

To Detect Cotton Fibers Burn a Sample of the Cloth.

Until the proper labeling of textiles has been made compulsory there are certain simple tests by means of which one may determine whether an "all wool" fabric is really all wool or not. The old way of telling by feeling and looking is no longer reliable, for cotton can be made both to feel and look like wool. The only sure way is to take samples of the goods home with you and make tests of them there.

If a piece of cotton cloth is ignited it will be found to burn rather rapidly with a bright, steady flame. There is no disagreeable odor, and when the material is completely consumed there will be left only a small amount of light gray, fluffy ash. If a piece of pure wool is lighted it will be found to burn much more slowly and with a less steady flame, emitting a characteristic, mild, hissing noise and a strong odor very similar to that of burned horn. There will be much more ash remaining than in the case of cotton, and it will be in the form of a crinkly, black, crisp ball.

In applying this test to a fabric the whole sample should not be burned at once, for if it is a so called wool piece containing considerable cotton it will be very difficult to determine whether it is burning more like cotton or wool. Threads should be taken from the sample, several each from the warp and the woof, and burned separately. With a very little practice one will be able to detect the cotton threads by the characteristic manner of burning. Sometimes it is well to pick a thread apart with a pin and test the individual fiber with the flame to determine whether the thread is entirely wool or mixed with cotton.

QUAINT OLD INN NAMES.

Some of the Peculiar Signs One May Read in England.

"Man Loaded With Mischief" is the name of an inn in the Madingley road, Cambridge, but it is not stranger than many others. At Underwood, Notts, is an inn called "The Toad In the Hole," and in the neighborhood of Somercotes, "The Old House at Home." Another inn at the same place is called "The Old English Gentleman."

It is a debatable point whether the sign of "The Man Loaded With Mischief" was painted by Hogarth. But it is like his satire, for it represents a man carrying a woman.

Many peculiar signs are the result of a misconception. "The Bag o' Nails" is really "The Bacchanals." "The Goat and Compasses" is an ignorant shot at the old motto, "God encompasses us," while "The George and Cannon" is a modern corruption of George Canning, who was prime minister when the inn was built.

One of the funniest of these corruptions is "The Iron Devil," a corruption of "Hirondelle" (swallow). It is said that the inn called "The Pig and Tinder Box" was originally "The Elephant and Castle," but a very poor artist was engaged to paint the sign, and somebody said it looked like a pig and tinder box, and the name stuck until it ousted the old one.

"The Plum and Feathers," an inn in Oxford, should be "Plume of Feathers," and "The Rose of the Quarter Sessions" was originally "La Rose des Quatres Saisons." One might think "The Ship and Shovel" belonged to the same category, but it does not. The reference is to Sir Cloudesley Shovel, the powder monkey who became an admiral in the reign of Queen Anne.—London Tit-Bits.

Italics in the Bible.

Words in the Bible printed in italics indicate that the words so printed do not rightly form a part of the original text, but were adopted by the translators to make the sense of the original clear, remarks an exchange. As used in the Bible, italics have no relation to the common practice of using them for the purpose of emphasizing certain words. In the early history of printing those portions of a book not properly belonging to the main work, such as introductions, prefaces, indexes and footnotes, were printed in italics, the text itself being in Roman.

Peculiarities of Worms.

Many creatures supposed to have some of their "senses missing" are not so insensitive as people often think. Worms have neither eyes nor ears and yet are sensitive to light and music (vide Darwin's "Earthworms"). A bluebottle, in spite of not having a nose, finds out a piece of bad meat easily enough. In short, many of the lower animals contrive to see, hear, taste or smell sufficiently for their purpose, and often in a high degree, without being able to point to any special organs of these senses in their bodies, and to suppose they are devoid of a sense because we are unable to discover it is frequently to confess our ignorance.

Misplaced Sympathy.

Through the busy Glasgow streets a stalwart policeman led a little child by the hand.

A motherly looking woman paused before them for a moment. Then, in a sudden burst of sympathy, she bent over the child and kissed her.

"Puir wee lamb!" she breathed softly. "She looks sae cauld and starved like, and she hianse been washed fur a week. Some folks canna be trusted wi' bairns, wicked, cruel things they are. Whaur did ye fin' the wean, policeman?"

"Find the wean, wuman?" snorted the policeman angrily. "I didna find her at a'. She's ma ain bairn!"—Dundee Advertiser.

COMPETITION IN SAVING.

A Challenge a Wife Accepted and a Contest in Economy.

The following is an account of what competition did toward encouraging a bank account:

"I am on a newspaper. I have always made a salary in excess of simple living requirements, but I was a free spender and did not save.

"A baby came, and I felt an added responsibility. I was afraid—actually frightened for the first time in my life. Then I gave the matter of saving some thought, but I could not decide upon any course of action.

"At the office one day a business discussion made me see that what I needed in my home was competition.

"That night on my arrival home I said to my wife that I would begin the next Saturday, give her half of my salary and I would keep the other half, and we each take an equal share of the household expenses.

"At the end of the first month I left my bank book on the library table. I wanted to surprise her. That evening she handed it to me and said she thought I was doing fine. Looking at her closely, I saw that she realized she was challenged. She did not speak, however, of any intention she might have had in mind.

"A month later I found her bank book on the library table identically as I had left mine. She had beaten me, for her savings showed $10.50 more than my own for the corresponding month and $15 in excess of my deposits for the first month.

"We are now in a race. We both have the saving habit. We have enough to buy a home if we should join funds."

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an inside bath.

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to such in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Men and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Beloved One

By JASPER WRIGHT MARLOWE

Whenever Miss Aida Worth visited the law office of Wade Guthrie she exhibited a hauteur and mandatory incivility that cut the young attorney to the quick. Not that he cared for the young lady in the least, but it hurt his sensitive nature to realize how faithful he had been to the interests of the imperious beauty and how unappreciated were his efforts.

There was a manifest contempt on her part, a certain latent threat in her cold glance, as though she knew something of his past. Her younger sister, Jessica, was quite the reverse. She had never forgotten the day when her father died. As she leaned over him to kiss him, he said solemnly:

"My child, it has been necessary to leave Wade Guthrie with full power to manage my estate. Trust him implicitly. He is a man among men, and our family owes to him lasting respect and gratitude."

More than once Jessica had remonstrated with her sister for her treatment of Wade Guthrie. "He is the hired servant of our father," Aida said, indifferently. "Besides—" but there she paused and failed to enlighten Jessica as to what further was in her mind. Now, Aida was about to marry, and her money exactions from the estate had become extensive. She flounced into the office of Guthrie one afternoon, a red spot on either cheek, an angry expression in her eyes.

"I sent for some money yesterday," she began, stormily.

"Yes, Miss Worth," responded Wade, "and I very much regret that I could not supply it."

"Could not supply it?" repeated Aida, contemptuously. "You perhaps forget that the estate you handle for my father is the property of myself and my sister."

"Miss Worth," spoke Wade, gravely, "you have forced a crisis that I have hoped to avoid. Not only has the estate exhausted all of its present ready cash, but is in debt, and only by the most rigid economy and careful management can we be able to carry it to a point where it will pay out."

Miss Worth grew white to the lips, but with anger, suspicion and resentment.

"Mr. Guthrie," she said, "it is your business to have money on hand. You will either get me what I require or I shall secure another lawyer, go to court and demand an accounting of the affairs of the estate."

Now he, too, had a bloodless face.

"I beg of you not to do that," he said. "As to resigning my trust and making a full private accounting you have only to send me your lawyer."

"You are trying to avoid the direct issue," snapped out Aida, "but I shall force you to the wall and expose you."

"You will expose me?" repeated Guthrie, vaguely.

"Yes. I know your position precisely. I know that you are an ex-convict upon whom my father took pity. Why a man of his judgment was swayed to place his estate in your charge I cannot imagine."

Wade Guthrie gripped his hands and set his face in a rigid mask. The deadly insult of the moment, the envenomed fury of his client stirred him to the depths.

"But for your sister, whose interests must not be imperiled by your rash act," he responded, "I would summarily go into court and surrender my charge of the estate. As it is, you will please send me your legal representative and I will satisfy him."

It was a remarkable story which Wade Guthrie recited to the new confidential advisor of Aida Worth. It told of how he had for three years made up for a continuous deficiency in the estate income. His own money had gone to cater to the expensive caprices of the elder sister. There was no promise whatever of the estate paying out unless collection could be made of a decidedly desperate claim.

"For the sake of Miss Jessica Worth," said Guthrie, "I am willing to continue to bear the burden of maintaining the estate. I will give her sister five thousand dollars to relinquish her claim to the estate, out of my own means."

Aida accepted the tender. She married. Then it became the one impelling motive of Wade Guthrie's life to see that the interests of Jessica Worth were cared for. He saw her rarely, because he loved her, little knowing that she esteemed him as her true and nearest friend.

The desperate claim unexpectedly paid out. Just after that Jessica came to his office one day in a state of considerable agitation.

"Mr. Guthrie," she said, tremulously, "my sister had more than once hinted to me of a certain dark passage in your past life. Today I found among my father's papers a letter that enlightened me. To save my dead brother from the penalty of a crime you assumed his guilt and took his sentence. Oh, that you should have borne the contumely! Oh, how base the ingratitude of my sister!"

Her eyes were suffused with tears. Her hands, placed in his, remained there. Wade Guthrie had kept silence through the years. He maintained it now.

But Jessica Worth understood and, understanding, venerated him, loved him. He knew it soon, and all his loyalty and self-sacrifice were rewarded at last.

The New Better and Safer Way to Wash Your Hair

Dandruff is the primary cause of falling hair. This disagreeable condition of the scalp and hair glands is almost certain to cause temporary or permanent baldness.

Loss of hair may also be ascribed to the use of improper shampoos containing irritating substances, animal oils and alcohol, any of which may produce gradual decay of the hair.

Don't use a stale liquid preparation that contains too much alkali (a harmful irritant). The surest, safest and easiest way is to make your own liquid. Buy a carton of Velnor at any drug store. Dissolve one of the small packets into half glass of fresh water and you will have an abundance of non-injurious liquid that will relieve itching of the scalp, falling hair and dandruff also improve the natural color of the hair. Velnor being in concentrated form never spoils and will keep forever.

Water Damage to Flour.

It is a well-known fact among sailors that flour will not only float after immersion in sea water, but suffers very little damage. To ascertain the actual damage, says the Northwestern Miller, a baker in New South Wales submerged a bag of flour in the ocean and left it in the water 67 hours. A 98-pound weight was necessary to sink a 150-pound bag, which would have supported 25 pounds on top of the water. It is estimated, or half its own weight. When lifted and weighed the bag scaled 155 pounds. It was dried for four days and yielded 120 pounds of perfectly dry flour, the bag and waste weighing 28 pounds. Baked into bread, it gave perfect results.

Badly Cut Up.

"I saw our old friend Meekby today. Poor fellow, he semed considerably cut up about something."

"No wonder; he has been married 20 years to a woman with a sharp tongue."

Otters Catch Fish.

The Chinese fisherman relieves himself of a lot of hard work by training otters to catch fish.

Athletic Vocalization.

"Is a ventriloquist a person who throws his voice?" asked Mr. Lobrow.

"So to speak."

"Well, we've got one next door to us. She hasn't thrown it yet, but she is giving it a terrible struggle."—Washington Star.

Proof that Some Women do Avoid Operations

Mrs. Etta Dorion, of Ogdensburg, Wis., says:

"I suffered from female troubles which caused piercing pains like a knife through my back and side. I finally lost all my strength so I had to go to bed. The doctor advised an operation but I would not listen to it. I thought of what I had read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and tried it. The first bottle brought great relief and six bottles have entirely cured me. All women who have female trouble of any kind should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

How Mrs. Boyd Avoided an Operation.

Canton, Ohio.—"I suffered from a female trouble which caused me much suffering, and two doctors decided that I would have to go through an operation before I could get well.

"My mother, who had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, advised me to try it before submitting to an operation. It relieved me from my troubles so I can do my house work without any difficulty. I advise any woman who is afflicted with female troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and it will do as much for them."—Mrs. MARIE BOYD, 1421 5th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio.

PARENTS AND CHILD FOUND DEAD IN CAMP

QUEBEC, Oct. 15.—A man, his wife and a child were found dead Sunday in a fishing camp near L'Islet, while two little children were dying from Spanish grippe. The camp belonged to the Club St. Anne, and the dead are Mr. and Mrs. Robichaud. There were seven children in the camp when hunters accidentally discovered the awful situation.

STOMACH TROUBLES ARE DUE TO ACIDITY

Tells Safe, Certain, Speedy, Relief For Acid Indigestion.

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, gas, sourness, stomach-ache, and inability to retain food are in probably nine cases out of ten, simply evidence that excessive secretion of acid is taking place in the stomach causing the formation of gas and acid indigestion

Gas distends the stomach and causes that full oppressive burning feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the excessive development, or secretion of acid.

To stop or prevent this souring of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid and, make it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a good and effective corrector of acid stomach, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after eating or whenever gas, sourness or acidity is felt. This sweetens the stomach and neutralises the acidity in a few moments and is a perfectly harmless and inexpensive remedy to use

An antacid, such as bisurated magnesia which can be obtained from any druggist in either powder or tablet form enables the stomach to do its work properly without the aid of artificial digestents. Magnesia comes in several forms so be certain to ask for and take only Bisurated Magnesia which is especially prepared for the above purpose.

FIRST AIR BALLOONS.

Dr. Johnson's Description of the Way They Were Inflated.

"The chemical philosophers have discovered a body (which I have forgotten, but will inquire) which dissolved by an acid emits a vapor lighter than the atmospherical air. This vapor is caught, among other means, by tying a bladder compressed upon the bottle in which the dissolution is performed.

"The vapor, rising, swells the bladder and fills it. The bladder is then tied and removed and another applied till as much of this light air is collected as is wanted. Then a large spherical case is made, and very large it must be, of the lightest matter that can be found, secured by some method like that of oiling silk against all passage of air.

"Into this are emptied all the bladders of light air, and if there is light air enough it mounts into the clouds upon the same principle as a bottle filled with water will sink in water, but a bottle filled with ether will float. It rises till it comes to air of equal tenuity with its own if wind or water does not spoil it on the way. Such, madam, is an air balloon."—From Dr. Johnson's Letter, Sept. 22, 1783, to Mrs. Thrale.

Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata."

The story runs that Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata"—always so called, though he so rarely gave a descriptive name to any of his works—was composed on an occasion when he had been playing to some stranger folk by chance. Walking with a friend, he overheard in a humble house some one playing with much feeling a bit of one of his sonatas. He paused to listen. In a moment the music ceased, and a girl spoke longingly of her wish to hear some really good concert. The voice was so appealing that the composer stepped without hesitation to the door and knocked. Admitted to the wondering host, he said, "I will play for you," and played wonderfully till the lamp burned out. Then with the moonlight filling the room he began to improvise—the mysterious delicate breathings of the beginning of that wonderful sonata, then the tricksy elf-like second part, and the glory of the close.

The Circular Saw.

In technical journals considerable discussion has taken place as to who invented the circular saw. The claim is made that this kind of saw was invented and used by a wood turner named Murray at Mansfield about the year 1820. The first saw is described as having been about six inches in diameter and was used on a wood turning lathe operated by water power. James Murray, the inventor, is said to have been the son of old Joe Murray, the favorite servant of Lord Byron.

The Hungarian Crown.

The Hungarian crown worn at their accession by the emperors of Austria as kings of Hungary is the identical one made for Stephen and used at his coronation over 800 years ago. The whole is of pure gold, except the settings, and weighs almost exactly fourteen pounds. The settings above alluded to consist of fifty-three sapphires, fifty rubies, one emerald and 338 pearls. It will be noticed that there are no diamonds among these precious adornments. This is accounted for by the oft quoted story of Stephen's aversion to such gems because he considered them "unlucky."

GIRLS! LOTS OF BEAUTIFUL HAIR

A small bottle of "Danderine" makes hair thick, glossy and wavy.

Removes all dandruff, stops itching scalp and falling hair.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—it costs but a few cents—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you can not find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp, and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small stand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries it.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural colour dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

SPANISH INFLUENZA RAPIDLY SPREADING

Persons Weak and Rundown Easy Victims—Fortify Yourself Against it by Taking Tanlac.

According to late reports issued by State and Federal health authorities of the United States the Spanish influenza epidemic is rapidly spreading to all parts of North America, and it now seems that practically all of Canada will be seriously affected before it runs its course.

It has not only become a great and terrifying menace to the public health but unless checked, it is apt to seriously affect progress of war work in all its various departments. Already the American Shipping Board has announced that ten per cent. of its workers had been affected.

The disease has made its greatest progress in the East, where it has claimed its victims by the thousands. Reports from other sections, however, are equally alarming; and both civil and military authorities have warned the public to take every precaution to prevent its further spread. In many cities schools, churches and theatres have been closed and public gatherings of all kinds forbidden.

Medical authorities agree that people who are weak and rundown are the earliest victims of the influenza epidemic. If you find yourself tired, weak and losing flesh, or if you are in a generally run-down condition, or if you catch cold easily this warning should be heeded promptly. You are really in great danger,—because the germ of this disease is very catching and you are apt to fall an easy victim if you come in contact with the germs. People who are well and strong are not likely to contract the disease because they are able to throw it off. The common-sense way to keep from taking it therefore is to fortify the system against attack by building up the constitution.

In other words to use the old adage, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." And if you are in a sub-normal condition the proper thing to do is to begin immediately to build up your powers of resistance. To accomplish this, nothing on earth will strengthen you and build you up like Tanlac, the powerful reconstructive tonic, which contains the very elements needed by the system to give you fighting strength and ward off the influenza germ.

First of all Tanlac begins its action by creating a good healthy appetite for wholesome, nourishing food, and assists every organ of the body to perform its natural functions, thus helping to build up health and strength in the natural way.

Tanlac is also the ideal strengthening tonic for persons who are suffering from the after effects of influenza, grippe, or bronchial troubles and hundreds of thousands are using it daily with the most gratifying results.

In connection with the Tanlac treatment, it is necessary to keep the bowels open by taking Tanlac Laxative Tablets, samples of which are included with every bottle of Tanlac. It is also important that the every day rules of hygiene be observed; that is, sleep in well ventilated rooms, get plenty of fresh air and exercise and keep away from crowds.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Abraham giving Isaac to God. Gen. 22:1-14.

Golden Text: I will give him unto Jehovah all the days of my life. I. Sam. 1:11.

1. Verse 1. How many meanings are there to the word "tempt," and in what sense did God tempt Abraham?

2. Abraham had passed through some great tests of his faith; what does it suggest that God tested him still further?

3. Would you or not say that tests of our faith will continue as long as we live?

4. Verse 2. Would you or not say that God told Abraham to offer up his son Isaac as a burnt offering or that Abraham only thought so? Why?

5. Should we in thought give God the right to tell us to do wrong? Why?

6. If under deep spiritual emotion, we feel that God wants us to lie, steal, kill or violate the Christian standard of virtue, should we obey the prompting, or banish it as a temptation of the Devil? Why?

7. How may we with certainty distinguish the voice of God from every other spiritual influence?

8. Verse 3. If verily assured that God tells us to do a thing, why are we or not under obligation to do it, no matter what the consequences?

9. What do you suppose Abraham's thoughts were while on the three days' journey to the place where he intended to kill and offer up his son to God as a burn offering?

10. If Abraham were now living can you conceive of him having a command from God to slay his son? Why?

11. Verses 4-6. What would appear to be Abraham's motive in not allowing his servant to accompany him and Isaac to the place of the expected burnt offering?

12. Verses 7-10. It was a custom of the Semitic races to offer up their first born as a sacrifice to God; Would you think it probable or not and why that Abraham got that suggestion to offer up Isaac from that source?

13. Suppose Abraham was mistaken as to the origin of his purpose to offer up Isaac, to what extent would that change your opinion concerning Abraham's sublime character and the strength of his faith?

14. Verses 7-10. What reason, if any is there to believe that Abraham had told Isaac of what God had commanded him, and that he had consented to be the innocent victim?

15. If you had been in Abraham's place with his faith in God, how would you have acted? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the Club.)

16. If Abraham had actually offered up Isaac, would he have been the adcenturies?

17. Verses 11, 12. What proportion of the dreadful things that somemiration or the execration of the times oppress us like a nightmare, happen?

18. Why may we rest in perfect assurance that God will never require us to do any deed contrary to the law of love?

19. Verses 13, What does the ram that was caught in the thicket teach us concerning God always coming to our rescue?

Allies Are Advancing on Zeebrugge

ALLIES ARE RAPIDLY RETAKING MANY IMPORTANT BELGIAN CITIES

Turcoing Evacuated by the Enemy —British Have Overrun Courtrai and Germans, Fighting Hard, are Retiring Towards Audenarde.

DRIVE IN OISE REGION

LONDON, Oct. 18.—(6.10 p.m.).—Tourcoing has been evacuated, it was reported from the French front to day.

Special to the Examiner:

(By William Philip Simms).

PARIS, Oct. 18.—Allied infantry, supported by British monitors, is advancing upon Zeebrugge. Franco-Belgian forces, south-east of Thielt, are marching toward Deynze (eight miles south-west of Ghent). The British have overrun Courtrai, and the Germans, fighting hard, are retiring toward Audenarde (thirty miles west of Brussels). Tourcoing has been completely encircled, and Roubaix virtually has been taken.

The Allied drive in the Oise region particularly menaces Ribemont (seven miles south-east of St. Quentin). Once this town is taken, it will be easy to push on to Guise. The Germans are precipitously abandoning their positions north-east of La Fere. Paris shows intense but grave emotion over the recapture of Lille, Douai and Ostend. The boulevards are decorated with flags.

Lieut. Sidney Lang Was an Omemee Boy

Omemee, Sept. 17. (Special.) — News reached Omemee on Monday last of the sudden death of Lieut. Sidney Lang, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Lang, formerly of Omemee, now in Toronto. Lieut. Lang was seized with Spanish influenza, to which he succumbed, after a short illness, in the officers' hospital at St. John, Que.

The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon from the undertaking parlours of Wm. Speers, Dundas St., to Prospect cemetery, Toronto.

Lieut. Lang received his early public and high school education, in Omemee, later moving to Peterboro. Later he attended the University in Toronto. In 1913 he graduated from the S.P.S., and went to Chili, South America, as a mining engineer, returning to Toronto one year ago to enlist in the Canadian army. He joined as a private but was only a short time in the service when he was given a commission with the Engineers. Lieut. Lang was unable to go overseas, owing to a defective knee.

Left to mourn his loss are a loving father and mother, one sister and one brother, who have the sincere sympathy of the citizens in general.

Smyrna Wants Separate Peace

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The plenipotentiaries of Rahnil Bey, Governor of Smyrna, have arrived in Athens for the purpose of negotiating for the surrender of that Turkish province, according to a despatch from Athens received here to-day. Word was received several days ago that Smyrna, the most important province in Asia Minor, was seeking a separate peace.

Butchers Are Charged With Profiteering

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Accused of profiteering, 234 butchers of Manhattan, Bronx and Brooklyn were arraigned here to-day for trial before two Federal Food Administrators. Over-charges of from ten to fifteen cents a pound for lambs were alleged.

FRANK JENNE SAYS:

When you are choosing your suit and overcoat for fall and winter wear, you must put more thought in the selection than ever before. You wish to economize intelligently; therefore, keep these ideas in mind in selecting your clothing—good materials and workmanship telling in faithful wear—correct style, models designed by experts—prices as low as the quality will allow. The new Semi-Ready Suits and Overcoats at my shop embody these three ideas. Have a look at the clothing in my shop windows this evening and tomorrow. "Come to me."

GERMANS HAVE BEEN DRIVEN FROM BELGIAN COAST

Enemy Forces, Defeated and Virtually Demoralized, Are Said to be in Full Retreat Towards Antwerp —Much Booty Captured.

ADVANCING IN SOUTH

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—The Associated Press this morning issued the following:

Germany has apparently lost the whole of the Belgian coast, which for four years has been the base of submarine and aerial attacks against England and British shipping. German forces, defeated and virtually demoralized, are said to be full retreat towards Antwerp.

Over a wide section of the front in Belgium and Northern France, British, French and Belgian armies have swept forward with relentless speed, crushing rear guard detachments left behind by the Germans to retard pursuit. Immense quantities of materials have been captured by the Allies and the number of prisoners taken is steadily mounting. Keeping step with this movement, although at a slower pace, the Allied forces further south have been moving ahead. From reports it would appear that two American contingents are operating on front east of Cambrai and St. Quentin. One is working with the British and aiding in the advance into the German defences east of Le Catelet. The other is with the French, and is materially assisting in the attempt to smash in the right flank of the German salient north-east of Laon. In both these regions the Allies have found the German resistance very stubborn and have been forced to fight their way ahead in the face of withering gusts of bullets and shells from the German armies, which have apparently turned at bay.

It is probable that east of Le Catelet the Germans are standing on the Hunding line, a defensive zone established to support the Hindenburg system, which is now gone.

CANADA IS SWEPT COAST TO COAST BY THE EPIDEMIC

OTTAWA CITY HALL A SEWING FACTORY.

"Worst Week the Capital has Ever Seen," Coments Mayor Fisher.

OTTAWA, Oct. 17. — Reports received at Ottawa show that the Spanish Influenza has now spread from Halifax to Vancouver. There is not a province free from the disease, although the cases are but few in British Columbia. It is now raging so badly on the prairies that Sir Thomas White has cancelled his Victory Loan speaking campaign, and is returning immediately to Ottawa.

The situation is apparently worse in Ontario and Quebec, and Ottawa seems to be the hardest hit of any large Canadian city. In the past two days there have been over one hundred deaths here, nearly all from pneumonia, following influenza.

"This will be the worst week Ottawa has ever seen," said Mayor Harold Fisher to-day." Next week will be less terrible if we get the necessary help to combat the epidemic. It will be worse if we do not. The mortality is terrible."

Mayor Fisher has made a fresh appeal for more voluntary workers, whose services are required to nurse the many sufferers. It is estimated that there are five thousand cases in Ottawa, although it is believed the epidemic is not spreading so rapidly as it was.

Two new temporary hospitals were opened to-day and several hundred women led by Mrs. T. W. Crothers, wife of the Minister of Labour, have turned the City Hall into great sewing factory, making pneumonia jackets, sheets, quilts and supplies of all kinds. A soup kitchen has also been opened in the City Hall.

MUCH SUFFERING AMONG REFUGEES ON FLANDERS FRONT

Germans in Their Retreat Have Carried Off All Men and Boys, and Women and Children Have Been Left to Their Fate.

FOOD SUPPLY SCARCE

LONDON, Oct. 18.—(British Admiralty wireless).—The German wireless service alludes to (flight of masses) of population as a result of Allied attacks in Flanders and Northern France. It says: "Even if everything possible is done to alleviate the lot of these Belgians who have been driven from house and home, and who have to cover one stage after another on foot along the water-logged roads with the scantiest of provisions, yet for such a flight en masse means of transportation cannot be provided, and food supplies are not sufficient for such terrible distress."

The wireless also takes occasion to inform the world that the population has to look out for itself, as Germany will not help it by transportation facilities or food supplies.

The Germans in their retreat have destroyed people's homes and have driven back all men and boys between 16 and 60, whom they use as forced labourers on their military defences. The women and children are left to any fate. In Roulers the Germans seized 20,000 pounds of food belonging to the Belgian Relief Commission. They carried off all they could and spoiled or destroyed all the rest. They also carried off all poultry and cattle and all furniture belonging to the richer classes.

The unmeasured joy of the populations which the Allies have been able to liberate is sufficient comment on their terrible experiences with the German armies.

THE PROGRESS IN BELGIUM.

This map shows the area in which the Allied forces are cleaning up Belgium. Courtrai (seen in the centre of the map) has been taken, and the German communications with Bruges (to the north) have been cut. Menin (to the left of Courtrai) has been taken by the British.

One Child Burned to Death Other in Grave Danger From Byersville Fire This Morning

Mother Left Three Children at Breakfast While She Went Out to Borrow Clothes Pins—Strong Fire in the Stove Believed to Have Set the House Ablaze—Discovered by a Man Passing.

FIRE BRIGADE WAS HELPLESS

Dead—Thelma Weaver, 8 months old.

Severely Burned—Lily Weaver, 2 years old.

Cause—The destruction of Charles Weaver's Home, on New Chamberlen street, at 8.54 a.m. to-day.

An eight months old child is dead, and a two year old girl is lying in the Nicholls Hospital so badly burned she may die, as the result of a fire which completely destroyed the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Weaver, New Chamberlen Street, Byersville, at 8.45 this morning.

From the information gathered Mrs. Weaver went out to borrow clothes pins from a neighbor, leaving her two little daughters, and her four year old son Edward,at breakfast. The stove was well filled with cedar sticks, and it is believed that, left to its bent, the fire generated such a heat that the pipes which had been loosely fixed in the wall and unwired, expanded and fell to the floor. At the same time it is likely that the wall itself caught fire from the pipes.

A passer by heard screams at the front door and forcing an entrance rescued Lily Weaver, who was terribly burned about the face and arms. The inside of the house was then ablaze. In some unknown manner the boy Edward had escaped from from the house unhurt. Although the house is outside the city limits the fire brigade responded promptly, but owing to the lack of water the firemen were unable to check the fire.

Dr. Morgan was called by Chief Grange and the little girl, Lily, her arms and face burned almost beyond recognition, was rushed to the Nicholls Hospital.

The mother who had arrived on the scene, together with the spectators, stood helplessly watching the progress of the flames, which left nothing but the wreckage of the stove.

The charred trunk of the infant was found at the spot where the kitchen table had stood. Head, legs and arms had been incinerated.

The house was a small two story, unpainted board structure, having no excavation beneath it. Mr. Weaver, who has just recently moved into the house, is an employee of the Peterboro Fuel and Transfer.

From Dr. Morgan this afternoon, it was learned that Lily Weaver had a fighting change to recover.

CORRESPONDENTS FIRST TO ENTER

(Special to The Examiner)

(By Lowell Mellett)

WITH BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE Oct. 17.—(Night.)—The great luck of personally witnessing this restoration of Lille was mine. George Bye, a British Correspondent and I were the first persons to enter city after German evacuation, with single exception of Lieut. Charles De Selle, a French aviator, who flew from Dunkirk during afternoon to visit his father, the Mayor of Lille. The latter hurried to Champs du Mars to meet him. It was the first time they had been together since the start of the war. British troops did not enter the city until several hours later though they passed to eastward and on both sides. Apparently there was an unwritten agreement under which the Germans refrained from shattering Lille.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 18. — No more submarines have gone to sea since Chancellor Max's armistice was offered, according to unofficial reports received here to-day.

PARIS, Oct. 18. — Admiral Rounach, commander in chief of the French army, a squadron of air planes and a British destroyer, have arrived at Ostend, which is gaily decorated with flags.

LONDON, Oct. 18. (4 p.m.) — Belgian infantry has entered Bruges, receiving an enthusiastic welcome, a despatch from the British front announced to-day.

PARIS, Oct. 18. (1.20 p.m.) — Both Tourcoing and Roubaix are reliably reported to have been captured by the allied troops.

ENEMY COMMENCES A NEW RETIREMENT

Anti-Toxin a Specific

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.— Dr. Louis J. Pint, former state bacteriologist, told the Chicago Medical Society last night that he had succeeded in isolating germs responsible for the influenza epidemic, and that regulation diphtheria anti-toxin is an absolute specific for the disease. He said the epidemic was mainly caused by the present war diet, and especially by the curtailment of the usual consumption of sugar. Dr. Pint said that he had treated seventy-five cases with diphtheria anti-toxin without the loss of a single case.

Germans Have Begun a Retreat Between Laon and Cambrai, While French are Pursuing the Enemy Rear-Guards.

FRENCH CROSS AISNE

PARIS, Oct. 18.—The Germans have begun a new retirement movement in the area between the Oise and Serre Rivers, between Laon and Cambrai. French troops, advancing from Achery and Choigny, are in pursuit of the German rearguards. Anguilcourt has been occupied by the French. In the Argonne region the French have crossed the Aisne near Vouiziers. Fighting continues in the area west of Grand Pre.

On the right bank of the Oise the enemy confined his reaction to artillery fire. Between the Oise and the Serre the French pressure continued during the last few days, has obliged the enemy to begin a new withdrawal. Debouching from Achery and Cheigny towards the end of the night, French troops pursued the German rearguards and occupied Anguilcourt. West of Grand Pre the battle continues with extreme stubbornness, and was extended this morning as far as the heights of Vouziers. The French have crossed the Aisne in this region.

ENEMY MAKING SHOW OF MEETING THE PEACE TERMS

There is Much Question, However, as to Whether the Teutons Have Taken a Sufficiently Broad Course to Satisfy the President's Conditions.

THEY MAY BE SINCERE

Special to the Examiner:

(By Robert J. Bender).

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18. — Both Germany and Austria are now going through a process of meeting, in part at least, President Wilson's peace terms. Some of this "knuckling down" may be only outward show, and some of it just enough to prevent the tumultuous political cauldrons of the Central Empires from going over.

That was the view here to-day regarding the reported German and Austro-Hungarian political reforms, and regarding the persistent, though unofficial, reports that Germany was applying no torches to her path of retreat and was calling home her U-boats.

The political reforms may be sincere, it is admitted.

On the other hand, there is much question as to whether the Teutons have undertaken a sufficiently broad course to meet the President's terms —no Hohenzollern rule or at least a powerless Hohenzollern rule.

For instance, Germany apparently is saying the Kaiser cannot declare war except when Germany is invaded. This great war started on the false claim that Germany was to be invaded, and it is pointed out that the present reported reform does not prevent the Kaiser from starting a war on a very meagre provocation.

These reforms may be regarded in Germany as meeting the President's demands; on the other hand, they mean that Germany and Austria are appeasing their own people and then are going ahead in a last endeavour to stem the "war of defence." The military requirements apparently are being met for the moment.

According to all reports, the latest evacuations from the Western lines have been without the ruthless military useless destructions that marked the earlier retreat.

President Wilson decreed that such barbarities should cease as a peace preliminary. Taken with the political reform, this military reformation is held as meaning that Germany proposes to make new diplomatic manoeuvres, in which she claims she has met the President's terms.

An Extra Precaution

Care of the Feet is Very Essential This Damp, Fall Weather,

Peterboro has been favored during the present "Flu" epidemic, by having only a mild form of the disease but it is perhaps largely because of the extra precautions that were taken at the start. No relaxation of the care to avoid it should be allowed, and one of the measures at this period when wet spells are common, is to have the feet comfortably dressed. The Peterboro Shoe Store, always, a good place to buy is an exceptionally opportune place to purchase your fall and winter footwear just now as they are in the midst of a big October Sale of all kinds of boots for Men Women and children. Prices are particularly attractive, and leave no excuse for being neglectful of the feet, the most important part of the body in wet weather. The Store is at 291 George street, opposite the Opera House.

A MISTAKEN LOYALTY.

The progress of the influenza epidemic would be much more easily checked if there were not so many people who feel, out of loyalty to the firms employing them, that they should stay at work as long as they are able to drag themselves around, or get back to their occupation as soon as they are out of bed. The illness of many employees is greatly interfering with work in offices and plants, but there is nothing gained by having those who are ill come back before they are really fit. The practice is dangerous to themselves, as they run the risk of a relapse ,and is very likely to carry infection to others, so that the net result of a too speedy return to work is often serious. Complaints have been received of employers who, finding themselves short-handed by reason of the evidemic have tried to persuade people to remain at work, who should have been sent home.

Physicians everywhere are agreed that those infected with the influenza should get to bed at the first symptoms. To attempt to fight it off is dangerous to the patient and liable to cause others to be affected.

EVERYONE CAN HELP.

The epidemic of influenza raging throughout Canada, is interfering to some extent with the Victory Loan Campaign organizations, and the responsibility for the success of the project is, therefore, thrown even more directly on the individual Canadian. If the furore of great public meetings is to be absent from this year's campaign, every citizen should constitute himself a boosting agent for Victory bonds, so that enthusiasm may be stimulated, and the success of the loan assured. It is a vital necessity that every one of the five hundred millions asked for should be subscribed. The money is needed for Canada's war work, and to finance Great Britain's war expenditure in this country. By lending their money to the Government Canadians may have the satisfaction of knowing that they are not only helping to win the war, but are assisting in the general welfare of the Dominion, for it is beyond the shadow of a doubt certain that Canada's prosperity during the coming year depends largely upon the manner in which her people subscribe for the Victory Loan.

Patriotism, thrift, common sense, should all suggest the desirability of investing in the Canadian Victory Loan of 1918.

The Peterboro District Organization is ready for the campaign. Let every patriotic citizen fall in line behind the local committee, and see that nothing is left undone to make Peterboro's share of the Victory Loan worthy of the general splendid war work of this city.

SENTENCE THE KAISER

When President Wilson in January last laid down his famous fourteen peace points, the reply of the Kaiser was that there must be "no soft peace," and an offensive that came near annihilating the French and British armies. In the nine months that have elapsed—nine additional months of war forced upon the world by the Kaiser's flouting of the Allied January offer—British blood has been poured out as water. An Associated Press despatch of yesterday said:

British casualties during the first 39 weeks of 1918 aggregated 700,000 according to a cablegram received by the British Bureau of Information here to-day.

This does not include losses in the heavy fighting of past two weeks.

The message stated that during the period between January 1 and October 1 the lowest casualty list for any single week was 4,126 and the highest over 40,000.

Three-quarters of a million Britons almost as many Frenchmen and many thousands of Americans were fated to die, because a mad Kaiser, lustful for power, decreed that there should be "no soft peace." Women and children have been starved and butchered, red murder done on the high seas churches and altars desecrated and countrysides turned into blackened wastes because one human monster in Berlin, proclaiming the "divine right" of Kings, determined to subjugate the world. Will any peace be just that merely drives such an infamous murderer from his throne?

Sir Frederick Smith, Britain's Attorney-General, in a preface to a new edition of his book on international law, after dealing with Germany's cynical disregard for treaties and laws between nations, submits that the future of civilization requires that the authority of public law must be re-asserted with a punishment so memorable, because so dreadful, that the offences will not be repeated. He adds that for correction of specific infamies, international law does not exclude the castigation of guilty individuals, however highly placed. Why, then, the average man will ask, should the Kaiser escape merely with the loss of a throne? Why shouldn't this king of criminals, whose vile crime has sent twenty million men to death, who has brought unspeakable woe to the whole world, be brought before an international tribunal tried as a criminal and have sentence passed upon him for his crime? And if hanging of ordinary individuals be justified as a measure necessary to maintain law and order among men, why not hanging of the Kaiser as a corrective for possible war ambitions in some future King? — Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Victory bonds will help to drive the Germans over the Rhine.

Forget the influenza epidemic, and make up your mind to buy the maximum amount of Victory Bonds.

In the face of General Currie's message from the front, surely no one could think of refusing to contribute to Canada's Victory Loan.

Stay out of crowds, is the best tip the medical men can give to the citizens these days.

Add King Albert's name to the honour roll of those who "came back."

"Iodina" is Large But a Fine Nurse

By FRANK J. TAYLOR
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 4. (By Mail.)—They call her "Iodina" and she was the surgical dressing queen She was tall and extremely stout and with her horned-rimmed glasses she was more professional than beautiful to look upon. "Iodina" was her name in that hospital because of her philosophy which put in a single word was "iodine."

Iodine was applicable to any wound that came her way, believed this big American nurse. It was interesting to watch her at her work. A man as big as she, would be big and clumsy, his fingers would get in the way of bandages, and he would hurt you every time he touched you.

But not so with "Iodina." She was as deft and gentle as the daintiest miss in the establishment. as she removed bandages, blood-clotted and soiled, with a couple of quick clips of the scissors and after giving the wound a treatment of iodine if the doctor did not prescribe otherwise, wound up the wound with new yards of fresh bandages and adheseive tape.

From the surgical dressings nurse's point of view, which was all "Iodina" ever got from her little nook of bottles and instruments and bandages in the great army hospital, the war was just one injured man after another. All day they'd come, some new ones never seen before, mostly old ones who had been about for several days.

One after another she cleaned their wounds and bound them up day in and day out. She is entitled to two service stripes now, though all this time she has never had a closer glimpse of the front than the endless stream of men pouring through her ward for surgical dressings She sees them come in, get well, and go back, bue never gets away herself. Some have come back rewounded for her surgical dressings

"Iodina's" remarks are few. Usually they consist of, "It looks fine today." You do not see anything fine looking about the wound, but since "Iodina" does, you let her have the joy—its about the only thrill her monotonous work has. In the midst of wounds and surgical dressings, "Iodina" became real frank the other day.

"Yes, I'm pretty well fed up on war," she admitted, "but I can hold out as long as there are wounded men. But say, if I ever catch the man who started this war, I'll give him something stronger than iodine."

What's more "Iodina" is just the person who could do it.

Platinum is the Most Many-Sided Metal

VALUE AS WAR AID OVERTOPS OTHER METAL SUBSTANCES

As Dehydrating Agent, It turns Harmless Substances Into Most Violent of Explosives—Without Plentiful Supply of it, the Allies Long Since Would Have Lost.

When the chemists clamor for more platinum, and the bureau of mines says we are starving for platinum, and the person who wears a platinum set jewel is branded as a slacker, the layman naturally sits up and asks "Wht's all the talk about platinum? What is it used for?" And the answer is, "Sulphuric acid," says Mr. J. J. Willaman, a prominent Minnesota chemist.

Platinu mis a many sided metal. It is not corroded in moist air; it is not oxidized by electric sparks. Hence it is used in contact points in many electric instruments, as telphones, telegraphs, radios, signal instruments on ship board, etc. It is not affected by most chemicals or by high temperature; therfore it is used in certain parts of big guns, in chemical analyses, in elecrical furnaces It is very costly; therefore it i sin demand for jewelry by persons who do not know for what else to spend their money.

Bu all of these uses are overshadowed at the present ime by he use in the manufacture of sulphuric acid. Platinum is absolutely essenial in he making of sulphuric acid, and sulphuric acid is absolutely essential in the making of high explsives, texiles, war gases, dyes, many foods and medicines; in fact hardly a substance can be named in the manufacture of which sulphuric acid does not have to deal directly or indirectly. The late Robert Kennedy Duncan, founder of the system of fellowships in industrial chemistry at the University of Pittsburgh, speaks of it as "Sulphuric acid, oil of vitrol, the king of chemical products."

octtelodoiwo riruiecotd eird sells

Very recently a French authority, in commenting on this chemial, said: "If called upon to decide which of all the manufactured products, the industrial creations, has been the most necessary and useful to the country since the war without which defeat would have been rapid and inevitable, I should answer without hesitation, sulphuric acid. The factor which represents the economic prosperity of a nation is its consumption of sulphuri acid 'True in time of peace It is more so in modern warfare."

What does the king of chemicals do in the process of making high explosives? . The chemist says it is a dehydrating agent. That is, it has a tremepdous affinity for water. It will absiract water from the air; it will take water from anything in which it comes in contat. If water is not to be had already formed, it will take fro msome available source th eelemnts which go to mak up water and combine them. It is this latter act which is utilized in explosive manufature.

Glycerin and nitric acid are rather harmless after they are mixed. BBut if sulphuric acid is added to the mixture, it will immediately take an atom of hydrogen and one of oxygen from the nutric acid, and an atom of hydrogen from the nutric acidshdruld hydrogen from the glycerin, combine them into water, and then take the water itself This leaves he nutric acid chemically unite with the hydrogen and we have nitroglyerin. Similarly we have nitrocelulose, or guncotten and nitrotoluene, the famous T. N. T. of the present war.

Sulphuric acid is made from air, water and the fumes from burning sulphor. These are all cheap, common materials, but they won't unite without strenuous provocaion, the, ordinarily. Platinum furnishes a mild provocation. The mere presence of a trace of it causes the oxygen water and sulphor dioxide to join hands chemically and the King of Chemicals is born. A the present time in the United States more than a half a million tons a month is being made.

Twenty Per Cent. Telephone Charge Increase is Sought

BELL COMPANY ALSO SEEKS TO ADD "A SERVICE CONNECTION" FEE.

OTTAWA, Oct. 17—The Bell Telephone Company has made application to the Railway Commission for a Dominion-wide flat twenty percent. increase in rates to become effective on November 20. It has been known for some time that the Telephone Company was proposing to ask for an increase in rates but the actual amount of the increase was not known until to-day.

There is also an increase in long distance rates. The minimum long distance rate is ten cents for eight miles, and five cents for each additional eight miles or fraction thereof.

There is a new charge proposed called the "service connection charge." According to the application this charge "Shall be collected from all applicants for new or additional service at the time of application and before such new additional service is established." The charge runs from $2 to $6 according to the price of the telephone. There is also a charge for a change of name of $2.

The explanation for the increase is given as follows in the application:

"The foregoing increases and changes in and additions to existing telephone tolls are necessary in order to permit of the applicant meeting the greatly increased cost of furnishing telephone service to the public due principally to increased cost of labor and materials and other elements of cost affecting public utilities companies."

The municipalities will vigorously fight the application and the Dominion Government may take a hand

Peterboro Club Uses Soft Coal

Will Conserve Its Hard Coal for Any Emergency That May Arise

At a meeting of the Peterborough Club held last evening in response to a notice sent to the members on the 9th of October for the purpose of determining and considering the policy of continuing the Club during the coming winter season in view of the scarcity of fuel in this city. It was decided that in view of the fact that the Club has not this season been using or consuming hard coal, that the club would be continued so long as soft coal or other substitutes for hard coal could be obtained and that the supply of hard coal on hand would be conserved until a fuel crisis should arise. It is understood that the policy of the directors of the Club will be to dispose of the hard coal and to relieve cases of necessity when conditions demand it. It may be further stated that the hard coal held by the Club is of a large furnace size and not adaptable to stoves or ranges.

McCORMACK AT LAST KNOWS THE GERMANS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Torpedoing of the Irish mail steamship Leinster, with the loss of several hundred lives, "has brought home to all true Irishmen that this is a holy war to save the world from slavery," John McCormack, the tenor, declared in a cablegram to-day to the Freeman's Journal of Dublin. The message asked the newspaper to convey the singer's sympathy to relatives and friends of the victims "sacrificed to Germany's brutality."

Mr. McCormack's action was prompted, he said, by cabled information that his wife's brother, Thomas J. Foley, an official of the Dublin corporation, and Mrs. Foley went down with the ship. Announcing that he would care for their ten children, the tenor asked that he be advised "how I can help to assuage the sorrows of other bereaved ones."

Accepted Report of Special Committee on the Proposal Sewer Connection for Mount St. Joseph —Streets in Bad Condition.

TO SELL SURPLUS COAL

A by-law passed at last night's special meeting of the Council authorizes the city to enter into an agreement with the Sisters of Mount St. Joseph for the construction of a sewer on McDonnel street, connecting with the Mount. The special committee, of which Ald. Worth was chairman, brought in a report recommending to the Council that the proposed sewer be laid. Mount St. Joseph is willing to pay all reasonable costs of the sewer. It was suggested that they pay a frontage tax on their front of 234 feet as do the residents in the city, but Ald. Edgar opposed this.

"If you give them city rates, the city will never grow," he said. "They always will wish to remain outside the city while they can have city conveniences and still have only about half the taxes of a citizen."

"They're not looking for something for nothing," replied Ald. Worth. "They are willing to pay their share."

The cost of the sewer could not be arrived at until it was constructed owing to the fluctuating price of labour and material. The City Solicitor advised that Mount St. Joseph be assessed by the city assessor and not the township assessor.

"In my experience, township assessment isn't quite the same as the city assessment," said Mr. Gordon, which elicited smiles from the Council. It was also recommended that if this property became part of the city that the agreement would be superseded and so would not prejudice the city. Also, the city will not be liable for damages or obstruction to the sewer. Put to the vote, the by-law was finally passed.

Yeas— Aldermen A. A. McIntyre, Weir, Jones, M. McIntyre, Taylor, Worth and the Mayor.

Nay—Ald. Edgar.

Moved by Ald. M. McIntyre and seconded by Ald. Weir that the sewer be advertised as a local improvement. —Carried.

Increased Fares For Indefinite Period.

The Street Railway Company requested the excision of the clause "for one year" in the agreement of September 4 with the Hydro-Electric Commission in which the Street Railway Company were authorized to increase their fares to 5c. straight until one year after the war. The request was promptly carried and Ald. Worth suggested that the Street Railway Company be as prompt in acceding to requests of the Council.

Condition of Streets.

The deplorable condition of the city's streets was also brought to the notice of the Council. On the pavement in the west end of the city, the leaves are a menace to the safety of pedestrians and motor car owners alike. They have become wet and the breaks have to be applied to turn safely the corner at the crown of Hunter street. The dustless sweeper is laid up for repairs and Street Commissioner Evans has hastily gathered a gang of men to take its place. Already the people are burning the leaves in order to get rid of them and in this way damaging the pavement.

"We've had our experience with the sweeper and it is a good time to drop it," declared Ald. Weir.

"The streets have been in a filthy condition for the last two or three weeks and the city can't put up with it any longer. It is absolutely impossible for that machine to pick up the leaves," said Ald. Worth.

Ald. M. McIntyre moved, seconded by Ald. Worth, that the Mayor and the Board of Works be authorized to interview the Dustless Sweeper Company, and if no satisfactory agreement could be reached to terminate the contract with the company.

Want All Public Places Closed.

Ald. Worth drew attention to the fact that picture shows and theatres were allowed to be open, while the schools were kept closed. Ald. Edgar thought that the circulation of books at the Public Library should also be suspended.

Dr. Amys, M.O.H., will be recommended to close all picture shows and public places until further notice is given, including the circulation of books at the Public Library.

According to this proposal the reading rooms at the Library will remain open.

The Board of Works was authorized to build a sidewalk on the north side of Euclid avenue, east of Cameron street.

Mr. R. J. Kidd of the Neill Shoe Company asked permission to build a coal bin in the basement of their new building under the sidewalk at the rear of their premises. The necessary permission was given without discussion.

Will Sell Surplus Coal.

Owing to the inadequacy of the civic coal yards to hold fuel, a considerable quantity of coal now lying outside will be sold at once.

Fuel conservation was carried out to a marked degree at the City Hall last night and most of the aldermen wore their overcoats. This, together with the lateness of the hour, resulted in the postponement of the discussion of the platoon system which was recommended by the Fire Chief's convention, and is scheduled for consideration in the near future.

Voice of The People

Peterborough, Oct. 17th, 1918.

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I notice since my return that your city is suffering from a dreadful disease. Well, Sir, I think it would be a wise plan to burn all your dried leaves that you have lying about your lawns and roads, and if all good citizens would burn all those dried leaves and cause a kind of smudge it would benefit the community at large and help to kill the germ of that terrible disease. Hoping that all good people will try this plan, I remain,

Yours, sir,

TEDDY.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—It is pleasing to me to see the interest taken by your correspondents in religion. Faith means reliance upon God; and people who ignore the laws of creation, are rebels, not religious. God made, and makes alcohol, notwithstanding the prohibition law, and He sends drunkards, not even to gaol, but to hell, where they are tortured just like Red Indians for ever and ever.

Not till people realize that the world is a good place, with some drawbacks and not a vile hole and den of sin, to get out of as soon as possible, will people learn to revere God and not substitute their patent little ways for His. Religion is the result of education; not ignorance!

Daylight Saving to be Dispensed With?

Bill Before Congress Continuing Present Time May Not Pass—Canada to Follow U. S.

OTTAWA, Oct. 17. — The Government here is awaiting with interest to learn the fate of the United States bill calling for a continuation of daylight saving, for whatever action is taken by the United States in the matter will be adopted by Canada.

In both countries under the existing laws the clocks go forward to mean solar time on the 27th of the present month. But a bill was recently introduced in the United States Senate providing for a continuation of the present condition in order to save coal and light. This bill has not yet, however, passed Congress, and in official circles here it is not expected that it will.

Should it succeed in doing so, then Canada will immediately pass an order-in-Council providing for the continuation of daylight saving.

Soissons to Laon Shows Desolation

Mile After Mile of Road Littered With Abandoned War Booty.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT, Oct. 17.—For mile after mile on the road from Soissons to Laon, there is absolute desolation. It would be scarcely an exaggeration to say that for a length of some 10 miles of countryside it is utterly destroyed. Villages are scarcely more than geographical expressions. Woods have been razed flat, and the ground has been torn up into gaping masses of shell holes. Usually such are relatively small in extent, but here the scene of desolation stretches mile after mile. Masses of war material have been abandoned, and the roads are lined with shells and shell-cases, and light railways still remain in position. Tons of barbed wire have been left behind.

Crop Report on Farm Conditions

Last Week Was Ideal for New Fall Wheat—Cattle Are Doing Well.

..The following is a summary of reports made by Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:—

Last week was an ideal one for the new fall wheat, being bright and warm, and most of the early fields are now showing a good, thick covering. Kent, the leading Ontario fall wheat county, reports the acreage at about normal and in much better condition than at the same time last fall.

Muskoka reports that more spring wheat is likely to be sown there in 1919 than in 1918.

Considerable seed corn of good quality is on hand in Essex and Kent. There will be considerably more corn ensilage generally for this winter than for last.

During the open weather prevailing during the week considerable late buckwheat was harvested.

Sugar beet raising has been on the whole quite satisfactory this season. The Lambton representative speaks of fields which netted the owners from $50 to $100 per acre clear of all expenses.

Some farmers in Peterborough are topping their turnips and are leaving them in the fields for a couple of weeks longer, which they claim will enable these roots to attain a much better growth.

Hay is now bringing $20 a ton in Haldimand, and from $17 to $20 a ton in Lambton. Considerable hay has been shipped to Detroit from Essex.

Cattle have been gaining well on the excellent fall pastures that have prevailed during the last week or two. There will be considerably more corn Dry cows are selling in Norfolk at from $100 to $140 each for shipment to Toronto.

The milk supply has been keeping up well, but it is reported from Brant that owing to the labour shortage two of the leading dairymen of that county have sold their milch cows and are going into beef raising.

About the usual shipments of hogs are being made at from $18 to $18.25 a cwt. Brant states that small pigs are not in quite so strong demand as they were some time ago, and are now selling at from $7 to $8 each. The Port Arthur representative says that probably more hogs are being kept in that district than ever before.

Muskoka reports a good demand for breeding ewes.

The past week was most favourable for fall harvesting, and a great deal of field work generally was done, especially in the way of getting in late buckwheat, digging potatoes, pulling roots, clearing off corn, silo filling, and fruit picking and packing. Good apple pickers are asking $3 a day in Northumberland, but many comparatively inexperienced men, women and boys are still being employed in this work all over the Province.

New Requisition for Ashburnham Lights

The following report of the Fire, Water and Light Committee was adopted by the Council last night.

We authorized the Chairman of Committees, who are in charge of the Fuel Yard, to sell coal that is now in the yard uncovered and also to sell coal received after the bins are full or before the bins are full if it is necessary to do so to avoid serious demurrage charges, the coal to be sold in ton lots and not to be sold to any one who has 500 pounds or more.

We recommend that the Peterborough Utilities Commission be requested to place four lights on George street between Princess and Lansdowne streets and that they be urged to put up the lights in the East Ward that were ordered and to replace the lights that are ou.

Square Dancers Had to Show Their Cards

Like a bolt from the blue the military police swooped down on a dance that was held in Otonabee, and ordered the participants of the light fantastic to fall in line and present their papers, while the fair sex looked on in amazement. They all produced the necessary papers, but one, who through negligence ventured forth without the necessary documents, and as a result had the inconvenience of being escorted to his home in order to establish his freedom.—Com.

MEDICAL MAN URGES USE OF FACE MASK

Dr. Murray McFarland Would Also Relax Liquor Regulations.

TORONTO, Oct. 17.—The use of the face mask in combating the spread of the influenza epidemic is advocated by Dr. Murray McFarlane, 190 Bloor street, who has just returned from a trip to the various centres in the United States, where the disease is prevalent. This mask, which is the form of a handkerchief, is made of gauze or cheesecloth, and is placed over the nose and mouth and fastened at the back of the head. In Buffalo it is being worn by everybody on the orders of the health authorities and it is declared to be a success in the fight against the spread of the epidemic.

"When people sneeze or cough on the street, the disease germs are set floating in the air, and are consequently inhaled by passers-by," explained Dr. McFarland.

Alcohol As Medicine.

"The Government should take immediate steps to allow the free use of alcohol during the present conditions," declares the doctor. "In the pneumonia stage, a little bit of whiskey is the best thing in the world for the patient. While I am a strong prohibitionist, I believe that at this time the regulations should be somewhat relaxed, and the use of alcohol freely allowed, as it is an excellent stimulant during the depressive stages of the disease."

In most of the American cities visited by Dr. McFarland all places of amusement are closed by order of the authorities; public meetings are absolutely prohibited, and people are not allowed to congregate in larger number than ten. In Philadelphia, where the situation has been very serious during the past week, all the undertaking establishments are filled with the bodies of those who have succumbed to the disease, and it is stated that it will take days to bury the dead. However, it is the opinion of the health officials of that city that the crisis in the epidemic has been passed, and that conditions will take an immediate turn for the better.

Modern Methods of Display a Feature of Grafton Store

The workmen who have been putting the finishing touches to the interior fittings of the Grafton Store, have now completed their work, and the place has taken on a very modern and attractive appearance. One entire side in the clothing department is fitted with the latest design of clothes cabinets where the finest of the men's wear hangs in proper shape instead of being folded in piles on the tables. Made in quartered oak, these Cabinets make a handsome addition to the fittings of this part of the store.

In the furnishings department also there are many changes, and with quarters doubled in size extra equipment was required. Prominent among the new things seen is a complete line of silent salesmen, full length of the store, made up of the glass salesmen from the former equipment, and six of the newest compartment silent salesmen on the market

Altogether the store presents a most pleasing appearance and is an evidence that the Grafton Company is bound to keep their store thoroughly up-to-date, and always in a position to take care of their rapidly expanding business.

ONTARIO'S PROUD RECORD

In Last Loan Drive This Province Raised Nearly half of the Last Loan, averaging $79.03 each.

Ontario's large place in the economic position of Canada was never better illustrated than in the last Victory Loan campaign, but, if it is to be maintained, another supreme effort will be needed in the campaign soon to open. Nearly half the total subscriptions in November, 1917, were from Ontario and there has been talk that the same proportion is expected this year. The war spirit and war service of Ontario have been so magnificent that there is little prospect of a disappointment now. This Province has been the centre of munition making, with the liberal distribution of money which that brings, and its agricultural, mining and other industries have been on a most buoyant basis.

As a result of the splendid campaign and the generous response of the people, the Province of Ontario raised $204,185,400, of the $419,289,000 for the Dominion in the Fourth Loan. This came from 363,000 subscribers, averaging $79.03 each, out of the 820,035 lenders in all Canada, averaging $53.13 each. Quebec came second with $94,287,250 from 126,534 subscribers of $41.66 each. In Ontario one person in every 7.11 was a subscriber but Manitoba, with one in 7, excelled this record. In the Dominion as a whole, one in every 9.62 people was a subscriber.

A NOTED "CURE" FOR THE YANKS IN ITALY

By HENRY WOOD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Rome, Sept. 17. (By Mail.)—The Italian government is completing installation of an American hospital at the famous Italian springs of Montecatini, between Florence and Pisa.

Several leading hotels of the resort have been requisitioned, and American wounded from the Italian front will be taken there for convalescence.

The Italian government thus has followed in a general way the example set by France in taking the famous resort of Aix-les-Baine for an American hospital base in France.

Back of the choice of Montecatini for the American hospital base in Italy lies another important motive. It is desired to make the American medical profession and the public generally acquainted with the Montecatini springs, so that after the war Italy may begin sharp competition with the German spas.

Although the waters of Montecatini have been famous in Italy since the time of the early Romans, very little has been done to make them known abroad.

They are the only springs in the world that can compete in every way with those of Karlsbad and other German watering places to which hundreds of thousands of people used to flock from all parts of the world every year.

While the Montecatini springs have a large following among the Italian public, generally, they have become a rather unique centre for the Italian musical profession.

During the last twenty-five years of his life Verdi went every year to Montecatini for the usual two week's "cure" and he died in the firm belief that the waters of the springs there had prolonged his life a quarter of a century.

Every square inch of Montecatini is redolent with memories and souvenirs of Verdi, and partly because of this and partly because of the value of the cure itself Montecatini becomes every summer the great Mecca of Italian musicians Leoncavallo, Puccini, Mascagni, Caruso and Tetrazzini often take their "cure" there. Nearly always before leaving the stars give a benifit concert for something or other, in which Verdi music predominates. The half dozen where the water is sipped play Verdi.

Vast plans have been completed for big casinos, pavilions, and water drinking palaces.

Because of the large number of hotels that have been requisitioned for the Americans, thousands of Italians were obliged to go without their "cure" this year. The musical colony, however, has been taken care of, and Tetrazzini already has given her benifit concert and departed

They're Still Speeding

(By United Press)

WITH THE AMERICAN TROOPS IN FRANCE, Sept. 16. (By Mail)—New kinds of sorting stations are being organized by the American Expeditionary Forces to direct letters, telebrams, and mail of all kinds to the boys in a hurry.

The army is making every effort possible to speed mail service. Recently experts, so called because they used to work in post-offices back in The States were detailed to improve mail service. The latest devices are being installed everywhere to facilitate service.

The greatest trouble comes from misaddressed letters, according to the "P. O." boys. People back home are not careful of the addresses they use, and men are not always careful to notify families and friends when they are changed from one organization to another. But the postoffice looks men up anyway, though it's lots of work

China "Plunges" in Modern Style

(By United Press)

Tokio, Sept. 13. (By Mail.)—Twenty loans, totalling $72,665,000, have been made by Japan and China during the first eight months of 1918, according to data compiled by Millard's Review of Shanghai. The total loans from Jan. 1., 1909 to the outbreak of the war are given at $24,835,000 and since the war began at $90,25,000.

The Bank of Japan makes its large domestic loans to such institutions as the Yokohama Specie bank, according to officials of the Department of Finance. The Bank of Chosen and the Industrial Bank of Japan, which has figured largely in the loans, are semi-govenrment banks

On Jan. 6., 1918, the Yokohama Specie Bank made its second advance on the second reorganization loan, repayable out of the reorganization loan if made, otherwise a one-year loan with interest at seven per cent. This loan which is secured by surplus salt revenues, is for $5,000,000.

On Jan. 20., 1918, a loan of $7,000,000 was made by the Tai-hei Kume syndicate to the central Chinese government for the purchase of arms interest, seven per cent; issue price ninety-five; additional commission of five per cent for unspecified purpose

Jan., 1918, wireless loan, amount not known, but probably $1,500,000 for construction of wireless stations materials to be purchased from Mitsui Bussan Kaisha.

In June, a loan of $10,000,000 for forty years at five per cent was made to the ministry of communications for continuance of the Kirin-Changchun line to the border of Korea.

On July 3., the Industrial Bank of Japan and the Bank of Chosen made a loan of $15,000,000 for five years at seven and a half per cent. As security all the forests of Kirin and Heilungkiang were pledged.

On July 5., a third advance of $5,000,000 was made on the second reorganization loan.

In August, a loan of $1,500,000 was made to the Yunnan government, security being the government revenues from the Ko Chiu tin mines.

Smaller loans made by Japan to China in 1918 inslude Yokohama Specie Bank's share of group bank advance for flood relief, $100,000; Mitsui Bussan Kaisha loan to central government on bureau of engraving and printing, $1,000,000; supplement loan for Kirin-Chanchum railway, $325,000; Mitsui Bussan Kaisha to Tsao Kun, for military purposes, $500,000; Japanese syndicate for use of Hunan provincial government $1,250,000; loan to province of Fukien for general purposes, $500,000; Mitsui Bussan Kaisha to Chihli province, (in which lies Peking) for purchase of cotton yarns for Chihli spinners, $500,000; Bank of Chosen to Fengtien province for redemption of small coin notes, $1,500,000; Yokohama Specie Bank to province of Hupeh, $500,000; Okura group of Tokio to province of Shensi $500,000; Okura group of central government for military advance against Canton, $1,000,000.

Heroics Are No Hit With Gas Man

(By United Press)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 20 (By Mail.)—The gas officer is one man in the American army who has no idea of romantic heroism. Every one has been congratulating the chaps who jerked off their gas masks to do difficult jobs when the boches were heaving gas over in volumes, and the French awarded several boys the "Croix de Guerre" for their spunk.

Now comes the gas officer, taking all the joy out of being a hero in a gas attack. He says men who take off gas masks because they cannot do their work with them ought to be court martialed instead of croix de guerred. The men will have to learn to work and fight in their masks, he says.

The gas officer hands it to the boys who work right through with their gas masks on, because they stay out of hospitals. If anyone gets a whiff of gas, the gas officer thinks that man ought to lie right down and take care of himself, which doesn't sound brave or heroic at all. It sounds like quitting, the doughboys say.

But the gas officer points out that the man who quits and takes care of himself gets over his gassing in two or three hours and can go back into service again, whereas the chap who sticks it out to the last falls exhausted and needs a lot of hospital treatment before he is good for work again. This is how he gas officer figures the man who quits is a hero. He says the boches would like to have doughboys stay in the gas until they get whiffed good, and move around a lot, until it is all through their bodies, for that puts a doughboy out of commission

Of course the gas officer doesn't want anyone to be a quitter when he has an important post to hold, or he says if the doughboys use their masks quickly and correctly, the boches haven't any gas that will bother seriously.

"Ham-And" is Yankee's Favourite Breakfast

London, Oct. 3. (By Mail.)—Nothing has ever been seen like the lust of the U. S. soldiers for ham-and-eggs. At every meal-time, London rings with the voices of the Yanks calling for ham-and-eggs.

Luckily there is a good supply of ham in the country, but it is to be feared that with the approaching winter, English hens might go on strike for another war bonus, and one hates to think what might happen to these enthusiasts then!

Fair Britons Smear on Tan to Be in Style Now

(By United Press)

London, Oct. 1. (By Mail.)—The beauteous and bewitchng country milkmaid used to be a delusion of poets and optimistic painters.

In Hertfordshire and Buckinghamshire you can see the merry land-girls everywhere. In holland smocks, leggings, breeches and slouch hats, the land-girls have made the country-side ready at last.

Their nut-brown complexions bright with the glow of health, and their country milkmaid.

She is absolutely a war product. She is the pretty town girl turned land worker. Her town-bred vivacity sparkles with country health and vigor.

Women are becoming regardless of their complexions. No more shading them from sun and wind! They never realized before how charming sunburn could be.

Country girls do not tan It is the town-bred girl who has taken such care of her complexion against tan, who in the country gets the glorious "nut-brown" skin.

So great is the vogue at present that an enterprising firm is bringing out a cosmetic called "Sun-Tan."

Stout Men's Suits

Genuine Semi-ready in English Worsteds

Plain greys for Men who prefer them

Stout men need not confine themselves to plain greys—for we have fancy weaves in Worsteds and Tweeds in sizes and types for the men who like more life in the fabric than these neat greys.

Type E.

Suits marked Type E are for short stout men—they fit perfectly, with coats of right length for men of shorter stature.

Thus: Size 40 is for a man of 5 feet 4 inches.

Size 44 is for a man of 5 feet 7 inches.

Size 46 is for a man of 5 feet 7 inches.

Type F.

Our Suits marked Type F are for stout men of the average height, with coats cut exactly their right length, and with due allowance for embonpoint. Thus:

Size 40 is for a man of 5 feet 7 inches.

Size 42 is for a man of 5 feet 8 inches.

Size 44 is for a man of 5 feet 9 inches.

All sizes for short stout men, for average stout men and for tall stout men in the Semi-ready designs.

Naturally a coat made for a man of Type F would look ridiculous on a man of Type E. The Type F coat would be over an inch too long—the waist line would be in the wrong place.

Special Orders If we have not your size in the pattern of cloth you like best, we'll make it to your exact measure in four days—to Special Order—by the Semi-ready tailors.

STRIKE IN CALGARY SPREADS: STRINGENT ACTION THREATENED

Whole Outside Force of Civic Employees Goes Out in Sympathy — Defy New Order of Government.

OTTAWA, Oct. 18.—The Government has decided to take stringent measures to deal with the Calgary freight handlers strike which is in defiance of the recent order-in-Council, making strikes illegal.

The Department of Justice has issued orders to the authorities in Calgary to prosecute those responsible for the original strike. No steps have been taken in regard to the sympathetic strike which has been called, according to reports. The Royal North-West Mounted Police have the matter in hand and are gathering the information.

Hon. C. J. Doherty and E. L. Newcombs, Deputy Minister of Justice, had a long conference on the subject this morning.

The Anti-Strike Order.

The order-in-Council under which action is taken, was passed by the Cabinet Council on Friday and approved by the Governor-General. It forbids strikes and lockouts during the war. Any person violating any of the regulations adopted under the order-in-Council is made liable upon summary conviction to a penalty not exceeding $1,000 or to imprisonment for a period not exceeding six months or to both fine and imprisonment.

Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, in commenting on the prosecution of the Western strike leaders by the Government, this morning stated that it rested with the Justice Department as to what order action should be taken under. He explained that the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act made it an offence for employes to strike before an investigation by a board of concilliation and as no Board had been applied for in this case, it would be possible to prosecute under that act.

STRIKE IS SPREADING.

CALGARY, Oct. 18.—In sympathy with the striking Canadian Pacific freight handlers all outside employes of the City of Calgary, with the exception of the employes of the municipal electric railway, went on strike this morning.

Water works, electric light, health department, sewer maintaining and street cleaning employes are concerned. The number of men out is not known, as the strike only took effect at 11 o'clock this morning. Whether or not the street railway men will strike will be determined later in the day.

Churches, Clubs, Theatres, Pool Rooms Closed

All Places of Public Assembly Included in the Order Prompted by Council's Resolution.

DRIVE AGAINST EPIDEMIC

By an order of the Medical Officer of Health, acting upon a resolution passed at the special meeting of the Council last night, all churches and places of public amusement are declared closed until further notice. This order embraces theatres and motion picture shows, the Public Library, pool-rooms, the Y.M.C.A., private clubs which have been closed for some days, St. Alphonsus Lyceum and the swimming pool of the Y.W.C.A.

Dr. Amys stated this morning that the epidemic of influenza in this city seems to be checked, although there are many cases still reported. The local situation is decidedly favourable compared with the conditions in most of the other cities and towns in the Province. It is hoped by the extended restrictions that the disease will be held at its present phase, and that in a short time the closure regulations may be recalled.

The co-operation of the citizens with the authorities in the campaign against La Grippe and influenza has been highly satisfactory, and it may be pointed out that most municipalities are only now taking the precautions which Dr. Amys instituted last week. This week-end will find Ontario's citizens with no place to go but home and the open air, and it is hoped that the peak of the epidemic will have passed during the coming week.

The clubs affected are the Peterborough Club, Belmont, K. of C., G.W.V.A., I.O.O.F., and others.

Quebec Suspends Church Services

SIXTY DEATHS OF CIVILIANS FROM "FLU" REPORTED AT MONTREAL.

MONTREAL, Oct. 17. — All the churches throughout the Province of Quebec will suspend service next Sunday and Catholics are dispensed from attending mass. At a meeting of the Central Board of Health this morning this was one of the orders passed. Archbishop Bruchesi was present at the meeting and gave his assent to the church regulation in so far as it concerns Catholic churches. The Board deferred until its next meeting definite decisions to the adoption here of the Leary vaccine for influenza, discovered by a Boston bacteriologist. The military authorities are to be asked to suspend all activity in connection with drafting men during the epidemic. It was announced that Archbishop Bruchesi had placed at the disposal of the health authorities the nuns and friars of the various religious orders in Montreal.

In the city of Montreal there were sixty new deaths among the civilians this morning, and 180 new cases reported.

EPIDEMIC MORE SERIOUS

TORONTO, Oct. 18.—Reports issued in many of larger communities in Ontario today indicate that situation with regard to Spanish influenza is more serious than at any period during the raging of the epidemic in the province. Deaths since noon yesterday have in most cases increased considerably while the number of cases reported shows no decline.

Drastic precautionary measures have already been enforced in most districts, but if disease remains unchecked, medical health authorities will be forced to stop all unnecessary gatherings and it is possible that business may also be curtailed. Officials here believe that before long "the crest" will be reached in this province. For the first eighteen days of October reports made to the provincial health department by undertakers show that 135 persons died from influenza and 238 from pneumonia. So far there has been 13,038 cases of influenza or pneumonia reported to the department from different sections of Ontario. The deaths in Toronto since last night number 29.

Strict Measures Against the "Flu" in Windy City

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—With proclamation of state influenza commission forbidding all public gatherings not essential to war, in effect today, Chicago loses the last bit of the little remaining of the gay life, the cabaret and the other show off forms of entertainment in places of sport, weather "wet or dry". The order now in the hands of the police officials for enforcement puts an end to banquet dinners and club parties and similar social affairs. Athletic contests whether indoors or outdoors come under the ban. Spectators were today kept from all courtrooms, in the barber shops the barbers wear white masks while shaving and cutting hair for customers.

(Canadian Press.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 18.—Fuel Controller Magrath has made inquiries at Washington regarding the reported decision of the United States authorities to discontinue "gasless" Sundays. While it is stated that certain changes in the restrictions are in contemplation, it is intended that in the United States Sunday will be "gasless" and that it will be another week before the ban of the Sunday joy-riding is lifted, even if it is entirely lifted then. Meanwhile it is officially stated that dealers who supply gasoline to doctors or others engaged in medical or nursing work in connection with the epidemic on Sunday will not be open to prosecution. In Ottawa cars engaged marked with a Red Cross and last Sunday a continual stream of such messengers of mercy plied between the city hall and the various destinations.

According to a prominent medical journal, farmers and their wives eat more indigestible food and suffer from dyspepsia in all its forms more severely than city adults.

HANDS OF ALL THE CLOCKS TO BE TURNED BACK OCT. 27.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—No further effort will be made by Congress to continue the existing daylight saving law, and the hands of the clock will be turned back an hour on October 27, as originally planned. This decision was reached to-day at a conference between Congressional leaders and Chairman Baruch, of the War Industries Board, who had recommended that the law remain in force for the period of the war.

EMPLOYE'S ERROR CAUSED DISASTER.

Wrong Mixture of Chemicals Responsible for Trenton Explosion.

TRENTON, Oct. 17.—Failure of one of the three employes attending the nitrator to explicitly obey instructions as to the quantity of various chemicals used was responsible for the disaster which wiped out half of the $3,500,000 plant of the British Chemical Company, Ltd., here on Monday night.

This has been definitely established by an investigation conducted by Manager C. N. Barclay of the company, N. W. Pirtie, representing the department of the Imperial Munitions Board, and Mr. Fitzgerald, assistant to Sir Joseph Flavelle on the Imperial Munitions Board.

They also found that there was no malicious intent, but that the accident was due to human frailty.

THOROLD GETS COAL BY A CURIOUS FLUKE.

Two Cars taken by Controller, and Sold to Fifty Families.

NIAGARA FALLS, ONT., Oct. 17.—Thorold Town is two thousand tons short in its hard coal allotment today but part of its shortage has been made up by an interesting fluke. A few days ago two cars of hard coal reached the town addressed to the Agent of the War Purchasing Commission. A sthere is no such official in the city, the Fuel Controller, Fred Grisdale ,took charge of the cars, and ordered the dealers to sell it to the wives of soldiers at the front. It is said that it has all been distributed that way in ton lots, and about fifty of the nearly two hundred families in Thorold who were without coal, have been supplied with a ton. The coal, however, was intended for the Welland Canal, and both the civil officials of the canal and the military officials of the battalion guarding it, have made demands on Mr. Grisdale for the coal. He had to tell them he hasn't it.

EPIDEMIC COMPLICATES DRAFT ACT ENFORCEMENT.

OTTAWA, Oct. 18.—The epidemic of influenza has raised a problem for solution by those responsible for the enforcement of the Military Service Act. Although the majority of men in Class 1, under that Act have been called to the colors already there are still some becoming liable for service from day to day awaiting expiration terms of exemption. In dealing with these the officials have on the one hand to take cognizance of requirements of the military forces. On the other hand, they have to consider the possibility that men ordered to report may be brought into contract with the infection at the depots or may carry the infection to others at those training centres. The situation is engaging the attention of the military service organization and the military authorities.

Two German Defence Lines Are Pierced

Canadian Press:

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY, Oct. 18.—In their plans for retirement from Belgium, the Germans had prepared three successive lines, upon each one of which they intended to halt and reform. According to captured German officers, the two first lines already have been broken by the Allied advance, and the third one will be reached in a few days. Seventeen German divisions have lost heavily in prisoners, killed and wounded. The retreating Germans continue acts of barbarity. At Isegheim the Germans threw bombs into a dugout where civilian refugees had sought shelter and were waiting for liberation.

Rumours of Outbreaks in Foe's Armies

Canadian Press:

Rumours reaching here are to the effect that there have been outbreaks among soldiers at the front. Abusive placards concerning the Emperor, Crown Prince, Field-Marshal Von Hindenburg and General Ludendorff have been posted in various railroad stations in Germany.

ASKED TO EXTEND THE CHEESE SEASON

KINGSTON, Oct. 17.—G. G. Publow, chief dairy instructor for Eastern Ontario, is appealing to the cheese-making factories to remain open a week or two longer than usual this fall in order that the usual output might be realized. In an address to the Frontenac Cheese Board to-day he pointed out that there was a shortage of about seventy thousand boxes at Montreal compared with a year ago. He stated that one or two weeks' additional output in Eastern Ontario would wipe out the deficit and as cheese was very much needed at the front, he appealed to the farmers to do their best.

MOVEMENT IN HUNGARY TO BREAK WITH AUSTRIA

Count Karolyi Demanded Immediate Peace in Speech at Meeting of Hungarian Diet—A Disorderly Scene.

IN ACCORD WITH WILSON?

BASEL, Oct .18.—Scenes of tumult prevailed at the meeting of the Hungarian Diet yesterday, during which demands for peace were made, and it was announced that Austria was being organized on a Federal basis. So great was the uproar that the presiding officer was obliged to adjourn the sitting. The disorder continued, however, the deputies calling each other "blackguard, liar, traitor, slave," etc.

Dr. Alexander Wekerle, the Hungarian Premier, said that the Federal states which will be formed in Austria will organize their economic and military policies on an autonomous and independent basis. He made an appeal for united action by all parties.

Demanded Peace.

Count Michael Karolyi, president of the Hungarian independent party, who followed Dr. Wekerle, demanded that immediate peace negotiations be begun without regard to the community of interest arising from the policy which has heretofore been followed, according to advices from Budapest.

Count Stephen Tisza, the former Hungarian Premier, who on Wednesday had a narrow escape from a would-be assassin, attacked Count Karolyi, yelling: "You are Entente agents."

Friends of the Entente.

Martin Novassy, one of the members of the Diet, answered: "We are friends of the Entente."

Great disorder ensued in the Chamber.

When the sitting was resumed, after a brief postponement, a draft of the address to the King was read. It said the result of the war had been such as to place the throne in danger. It stated that Hungary must have full autonomy.

"Hungary feels herself to be in full accord with the ideas spreading throughout the world along the lines of the noble principles of President Wilson's address," the address continued. "Hungary must be completely independent, must have general electoral suffrage, and the relations between nationalities in the country must be governed by the principles enunciated by President Wilson.

Danger of Invasion.

"Hungary is in danger of invasion. Hungarian troops must be brought back, and non-Hungarian troops sent away."

Dr. Wekerle said:

"The protection of our integrity as a State and the maintenance of our unity are tasks we must accomplish at all costs. We desire to grant individual rights to the different nationalities who have lived among us for a thousand years. We are not contradicting our traditional point of view in accepting President Wilson's principles. As far as an absolute equality of rights of individuals and the defence of our integrity and the unity of the State will permit, we will willingly satisfy the claims of different nationalities."

Better to Stop a Clock Than to Put Hands Back

When we started in on daylight saving last spring, everybody cheerfully moved the hands of their clocks forward an hour without thinking about the problem of how they were to get them back again in the fall, writes Walter J. Barr, of the Goldsmith Stock Company of Canada, Ltd., in the Toronto News. It seemed just as easy to "Set the clock back" as it did to "Move the hands forward," he points out, and jewellers said nothing, but apparently are awaiting developments. As a matter of fact, putting the clock back is a different proposition to moving the hards forward, and it is in the interest of the public, generally, that this should be recognized.

Clock and watch makers are already swamped with work, and it is a matter of great difficuly to give satisfactory work, so that they are not in any position to attend to clocks brought in in large quantities for general overhauling at this time.

Old time tradesmen were accustomed to warn a clock buyer of the danger of turnng the minute hand back beyond the striking point. Of late years, this custom has not been followed, and comparatively few of the younger generation realize the trouble that would follow in the mechanism of striking clocks by changing the time backwards.

The proper way to get back to normal time, is to stop the clock for an hour before going to bed on Saturday, October 26th. It may bother a little to start them again and have them run properly, but this is much better than turning the hands back. In the case of watches and clocks, run by springs, it is preferable to move the hands forward eleven hours, which brings them to the desired point.

A little thought will save a lot of confusion and trouble.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers—Meat forms uric acid.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

There is no substitute for CEETEE Underclothing—it is in a class by itself. No other underwear like it is being made in America.
But, owing to the Government regulations regarding wool, which allow a very small percentage for civilian purposes, also the scarcity of available ships, we are only able to supply about half the demand for Ceetee, which is made from finest Australian Merino Wool.
However, if our many friends are unable to secure their usual CEETEE Underclothing, we suggest that they try some other Turnbull brand. We guarantee it will give excellent satisfaction.

RUTH CONSIDERS TAKING A POSITION SO SHE CAN HAVE A SERVANT

CHAPTER XVI

For days Ruth went around in a sort of dream. She continually thought of her project; yet lacked determination to carry it out—to put it, herself, to the test. Her bringing up had something to do with her attitude. Her aunt thought it alright for Ruth to excercise her talent at home with her; but she would have been inexpressibly shocked had she known a niece of hers contemplated anything so strong minded, so unwomanly, as going to work for others, or in business for herself.

Brian noticed her preoccupation and ragged her about it.

"Not planning to leave me again, are you? Going South for good?"

"You know I am not going South again," Ruth replied, not telling him, however, that he was getting "warm" as she used to say when playing hide-and-go-seek as a child.

"You better not! I'll divorce you if you do."

"You don't dare!" she laughed, kissing him. "You'd die of grief in a week."

"That's right, I guess I would." Then, seriously, "I don't know how I ever stood it, that long month, coming home to find you away It was awful, Ruth"

"I'll never dare propose it, never!" she thought when he talked like that.

But as the days and weeks passed, Ruth grew desperate. She had told Brian of her check, a present from her aunt, she called it; and had proposed they have a young girl come in and clean up mornings. But Brian had confessed to some debts. Clients had been slow, he had been obliged to borrow. He wouldn't have told her, if she had kept still about her check. But it didn't seem right not to pay when they had the money. So Ruth, who knew nothing of debt save that she viewed it with horror, gave him her precious check. To her surprise, he used it nearly all, giving her back a few dollars, and buying theater tickets as a treat.

"Did you have to have it ALL?" she asked when he came home.

"I told you I had borrowed money."

"Yes—but—Brian—how did you exto think she did. She paid me for decpect to pay it? Aunt didn't give me that check, although I allowed you o think she did. She paid me for decorating her living room Paid me the same as she would have had to pay a professional decorator." Then: "We can't expect any more from her—what will you do if you—borrow again?"

"Oh, I don't know! the Lord looks after children and fools, you know."

Don't joke, tell me, Brian. What are we going to do about such things? It seems dreadful to me."

"We're paying too much rent, Ruth for one thing!" he blustered, knowing how mean and small the flat seemed to her, yet not quite realizing either.

"You mean—"

"Yes, I mean that we can't afford to pay thirty-five dollars a month rent out of what I earn, and have enough to live on left, in these times when everything costs so much."

"But you knew how much you earned when you asked me to marry you."

Brian made no reply.

"Didn't you Brian?"

"Yes—I suppose I did."

"Then how did you expect me, us to live? Did you marry me thinking Aunt Laura would"—

"I didn't marry you for any reason on earth but that I loved you," Brian broke in excitedly. Something in her tone had cut him. "But it is not strange that I thought that a woman so wealthy as your aunt would do something for you, seeing you are the only relative she cares for and that you made your home with her."

"Oh—Brian! I never thought that you—Aunt Laura gave me a wonderful trousseau, never stopped to even ask the cost of anything And"

"It would have been more sensible if she hadn't given you so many fol-de-rols, and had given you the money instead," Brian again interrupted.

"I always supposed a man took care of his wife after he married her," Ruth said slowly, "that he did not ask her to marry him until he could."

"I can take care of you all right! You needn't think just because I needed that check to pay back the money I borrowed that I can't! But we'll have to cut the cloth according to the pattern. Sunday we'll go house-hunting. We should find something that would do until I get more business, for about twenty-five dollars a month for other things."

"You really mean that we must live in a still poorer place than this?"

"Yes. And what difference does it make? You haven't any woman friends to be trotting in and out; and we will be together, just the same. I'm sorry I'm not a millionaire. I shall be, some day—perhaps not a millionaire; but a fellow who is bright always gets along."

Ruth said no more; but that night, when Brian slept, her thoughts took on a practical shape. One that would have shocked and surprised him

A NECESSITY IN THE HOUSE.

Most of the common ills of life arise from a torpid, sluggish condition of the Liver, Kidneys or Bowels, and because they act on each of these organs in a direct and specific way Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills overcome serious and painful diseases over which ordinary medicines have no control.

SPANISH INFLUENZA RAGES IN CANADA

Thousands of Cases Reported With Many Deaths.

THOSE WHO ARE MOST SUSCEPTIBLE TO IT

"FRUIT-A-TIVES"—The Wonderful Fruit Medicine—Gives the Power To Resist This Disease.

The epidemic of Spanish Influenza which played such havoc in Europe, has reached this continent. Thousands of cases of the strange malady have appeared and many deaths are already reported; Surgeon-General Blue of the United States Public Health Service having stated that "Spanish Influenza will probably spread all over the country in six weeks".

Practically every ship which touches our shores from abroad, brings those infected with the disease.

Surgeon-General Blue urges that "the individual take all the precautions he can against contracting the disease by care and personal hygiene". Plenty of exercise should be taken; the diet should be regulated, etc.

Spanish Influenza affects most severely elderly persons and others whose powers of resistance are weakened by illness, work or worry, especially those who are "run-down" or "not feeling up to the mark."

The really great danger from the disease is not so much in the disease itself, as that it often develops into pneumonia.

What everyone needs now is a general tonic like "Fruit-a-tives". This wonderful fruit medicine is not a germ-killer. It is a body-builder; a strength-maker; a blood-purifier; a power in protecting against the ravages of disease.

"Fruit-a-tives" regulates the kidneys and bowels, causing these organs to eliminate waste regularly and naturally as nature intended. "Fruit-a-tives" keeps the skin active, and purifies and enriches the blood. "Fruit-a-tives" tones up and strengthens the organs of digestion, insuring food being properly digested and assimilated.

Everyone can take ordinary precautions, avoid crowded places, and use "Fruit-a-tives" regularly to insure sound digestion, to keep the bowels and kidneys regular and the whole system in the best possible condition. Then we are safe from disease.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by dealers everywhere at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa, Ont.

Famous Surgeon Killed by Patient

ACCORDING to Milton V. Snyder, London correspondent of the New York Sun, the assassination of Dr. Pozzi in Paris has ended the useful life of one of the most illustrious of French surgeons and perhaps the one most widely known in England and the United States. He was the victim of a man upon whom he had performed an operation for a cerebral lesion, but whom he was unable to cure. This man, owing to increased sufferings and mental disturbance, was obsessed with the idea that the famous surgeon was responsible for his condition, and in his demented state resolved to avenge himself upon the scientist who had done his utmost to restore him to normality. Prof. Pozzi had a wide acquaintance in Paris, where he is mourned by thousands of poor women whom he treated in the hospitals and by thousands more in aristocratic and artistic circles, where he was a welcome friend. In the course of his long professional life he had been a surgeon in the hospitals, a professor of the Paris Faculty of Medicine, and had made many innovations in surgery, especially with regard to the diseases of women.

He had created model wards for the diseases of women at the Broca Hospital, where he was surgeon-in-chief for 30 years. He was 71 years old and had almost ceased operating. His art demands the vigorous hands and the clear sight of the man who has not yet passed maturity. But he always continued to take a passionate interest in everything pertaining to his profession. It was he who, as the result of a journey to the United States, made known in France the splendid discoveries made by Dr. Carrel in his New York laboratory, discoveries which found a fruitful application in the treatment of war wounds. In his youth Pozzi was a splendidly handsome man, and, despite the years, he had aged very little outwardly. An admirable portrait of him by Sargent is in existence. In it he is pictured draped in his red robe of professor of the Faculty of Medicine—the professors of the four faculties, literature, law, medicine, and science, are the only ones in France who have preserved the pomp of this costume. Pozzi kept this air of a Doge of Venice with which he went through life.

The great preoccupation of this illustrious surgeon, to whom no honor was lacking, was to live as a gentleman. He was a magnificent horseman, and in the salles d'armes a fencer of the first order. He would lay down the lancet to take up the poet's pen; last year, in the Revue de Paris, might have been seen two sonnets by him, sonnets which had real merit, revealing nothing of the amateur. He was a real lover of the arts, and had the operating theatres of his hospitals decorated by artists of talent. He bought their pictures. He also bought the antique that brought him one day into conflict with Anatole France in an amusing way. The latter, in the course of his travels in Turkey, had discovered in the shop of a Jewish merchant a Grecian statue of a good period. "I cannot take it with me," he said to the dealer, "but if you should come to Paris on business, fetch it with you and I'll buy it."

Some time later the Syrian Jew made the voyage with the statue, only, instead of taking it to Anatole France, he knocked at Pozzi's door. "I thought," said he ingenuously, "that a great surgeon must make more money than a novelist and that you would pay me more." He was not mistaken; Pozzi bought the statue. Anatole France bore him a grudge for a few days only, and later on the pair of them laughed over the incident. But, above all, Dr. Pozzi was inimitably gracious toward women. Sometimes this graciousness was a trifle surgical. To a lady who said to him one day, "Oh, doctor, how nice you are to us," he replied: "I do what I can. I can boast that, of all the surgeons who have ever operated on women, I am the one who has left the smallest scars; I am too great an admirer of their beauty to wish to destroy it."

Mr. Snyder recalls an occasion when he dined with Dr. Pozzi with a distinguished company, among whom was another eminent doctor, a specialist upon diet. He passed his life saying "Don't eat that, ladies; whatever you do, do not drink that." "I don't understand him," murmured Pozzi. "From my youth up I have always said to myself that if I could not have an agreeable life and a long one I'd rather have the agreeable one. And you see that has not prevented me from having a long one, too."

"And while he drank his Burgundy and ate truffles with the appetite of a young man, says the writer, I admired his majestic and almost youthful head. The madness of a patient cut short his existence, for he ought to have lived long years yet. He was honored with a military funeral in virtue of his rank as Surgeon-General. The religious service was celebrated at the Protestant Church in the Avenue de la Grande Armee. The President of the Republic was present, as well as M. Clemenceau, who was a personal friend of Prof. Pozzi.

Influenza Microbe Has a Short Life But An Active One.

Montreal, Oct. 18—A large number of the cases first reported to the city authorities as influenza have turned out to be severe colds, and consequently the figures of the department are being constantly altered. The reports being made today, like those of yesterday, are not all new cases but are those of a few days standing.

"The reason for this," said one medical man "is that the influenza microbe is a very virulent one, and therefore has but a short life. The microbe which causes tuberculosis is of the opposite type. It takes some a person, and the microbe also lives a ...s years for that microbe to kill long time after. The influenza microbe has apparently a short life. It is exceptionally strong while it lives and creates terrible havoc, but having killed its bearer, its life is only a few hours and should he become attacher to another person the case is generally a mild one, ... usual precautions are neglected and complications ensure."

FAMOUS CANADIAN BATTLE FIELDS

By- ROLAND HILL Former Official Canadian War Correspondent

THE German line in France and Belgium from the Channel southwards to Peronne and Ham has been swept backward in the wonderful fighting of the last few weeks. The undulating barrier which on their section British and Canadian troops have now completely broken will never again rear itself as a menace to divide the forces of Britain and France. The coveted Channel ports are safe and it is almost certain that the Germans will never again be able to strike at any point in enough strength to regain those battlegrounds of France and Flanders where history has been in the making for the last four years.

Those scores of towns where Canada has shed her best blood will from now on be inviolate. German guns will never again pound the ruins of Ypres and Souchez and Courcelette and the brave Canadians who lie in the shadows of these monuments to the fallen will rest in peace. The little graveyards among the poppy fields of Flanders, some of them unhappily torn by enemy shells in this last great fight, will be silent and at peace. Now and again some comrade will steal back to find the resting place of some friend; the kind old padres will visit and tend the little white crosses: but the thunder of the guns that drummed the great funeral march when those Canadian lads were laid to rest will for the rest of the war be but distant echoes. The great victories of these weeks have saved something that those who had to stay at home in Canada may see when war is done.

Langemarck, Wieltze and St. Julian where in 1915 Canada "saved the day" are mere rubbles of brick and stone. Along the main road that runs out from Ypres there are little clusters of Canadian graves that have marvellously survived the cyclones of war that have swept by them. Out on the mangled distorted highway which runs to Paschaendale there are little groups of Canadian graves where those heroes who fell in that first great fight have been joined by their comrades who died two years later in the taking of the strong German position which was again a menace to Ypres.

In many places around the historic Flanders city you can still find traces of the old trenches. The men who know can lead you to some of the old brigade headquarters now grass-grown and pathetically delapidated. Piles of blistered stone and ironwork mark the old Flemish graveyards where well-known battalions made their stand. In Ypres itself the ruins can be marked for what they were. The asylum where thousands of wounded and gassed Canadians were tended in those heart-rending days of April, 1915, is still there and the barracks can be traced by its heavy brick walls. The ramparts, Vauban's strong fort built for other days and other kinds of warfare, are still standing in defiance of modern artillery and they have sheltered many of the Maple Leaf. There are badges of many a fine Canadian battalion painted over the big stone arches.

Vlamertinge church, the landmark that meant comparative safety in those anxious days of 1915, and the station where scores of wounded were rescued by train, are badly damaged but still proudly in evidence, their battle scars making them look wonderfully dignified. Poperinghe, the happy hunting ground of the lucky battalions in rest, is shell torn but will be salved for already the Flemish shop keepers and the restaurateurs are flocking back.

Further to the south Bailleul and Armentieres and Hazebrouk are standing and the old hotels and eating places where officers and men found change from rations in French dinners when out for brief rests are optimistically replacing their boarded windows with glass. Bailleul is the worse for war wear. The old square tower of the Hotel de Ville has been shattered. The big hostel, which always was "out of bounds for British Troops" has been burned by accident or design during German occupation. The station is a mass of twisted steel and shattered glass but already the French engineers are at work and soon the leave trains will be running again as of months ago. Hazebrouk has suffered least; Armentieres is badly mauled by shells, its great factories blown up by Hun explosives and there is still the sickly smell of poison gas.

Around historic Vimy the Germans are pressed back but slightly as yet but from Bethume to battered Arras, those little towns that have been the happy hunting ground for men from Halifax to Victoria, are now safe. Vimy's sombre cemetery, with its giant cross marking the resting place of those who won what was then Canada's greatest victory, has been won back from the range of the largest German guns. The quiet picturesque, well-tended plots that mark the graveyards of scores of Canadian battalions around Souchez, side by side with those of France who fell at the first great assault of the Ridge, will never again be disturbed by Hun shells.

Before Albert and on the Somme the line has been rolled back too. At La Boiselle and Mouquet Farm there are scores of white crosses under which sleep the fighting men from Canada. All along the Bapaume road you come across them until you reach Courcelette. The German has not harmed them since his last advance. Sometimes a stray shell has obliterated a cross but generally these little plots, screened off by fences of barbed wire torn from neighboring trenches, have been respected by the enemy.

Courcelete is a grass grown ruin but the historic points are still to be traced. The two original tanks that helped the Canadians in their successful onslaught against what was thought an impregnable position, the "Cordon Rouge" and the "Creme de Menthe" are still there. The sugar refinery is marked by its great boilers and twisted girders and stretches of wire and weed-entangled ditches will tell you where the bloody Zollern Redoubt was wrested from the Prussian Guards.

Bapume is badly smashed and Peronne also. They are sheer wreckage of war through which the traffic winds ahead to the fighting line now many miles away. There is none of the dignity of Ypres about them but they stand out pathetically on a skyline of devastation.

Southward again from the Somme there are little towns and hamlets where Canadian cavalry and the Motor Machine Gun Brigade made history. Outside of Amiens in Roye and Nestle, even to Noyon there are clusters of graves, and there and respected by the Hun where gallant men from Canada have been buried. They are set from their comrades who sleep in Flanders and around where the Canadian Corps won their other great victories, but there is one great tribute to them too, that binds them with bonds of bravery. They also "saved the day." General Gouraud who is now smashing the enemy lines in the Champagne, told those who survived and published it in French orders: "The Canadians have saved the day." General Gouraud fought with them have as careful tended these graves as they have their own. They are there alongside the bravest of France and again Allied ground.

GILBERT AS A WIZARD.

Curious Tricks of an Old Time Investigator of Electricity.

H. G. Wells has called attention in "The World Set Free" to a half forgotten worthy who, in "the spacious times of great Elizabeth," loomed large indeed. Science, to be sure, does not forget him, and one great English poet, Dryden, has proclaimed with resonant emphasis:

Gilbert shall live until loadstones cease to draw.

Nevertheless how many young students of electricity today ever heard of William Gilbert?

"It was Gilbert, Queen Elizabeth's court physician, who first puzzled his brains with rubbed amber and bits of glass and silk and shellac," says Mr. Wells, "and so began the quickening of the human mind to the existence of this universal presence. And even then the science of electricity remained a mere little group of curious facts for 200 years, connected perhaps with magnetism—a mere guess that—perhaps with the lightning. * * * Except for the lightning conductor, it was 250 years before electricity stepped out of the cabinet of scientific curiosities into the life of the common man."

Gilbert's theories and guesses about magnetism—he concluded that the world is a vast spherical magnet—were serious and farreaching, and he embodied them in a book with a ponderous Latin title—the first great book on physics published in England. But his experiments were chiefly of the curio and plaything sort. An English collection of Elizabethan letters and anecdotes of court life quotes the opinion of a provincial young lady of quality, but recently come up to London to accept a position in the queen's household, who had witnessed some of them. She wrote home to her mother:

"The queen is now well recovered of her sicknesse, which was but litle, tho it lookt at first as it wold be greate. She puts much truste in her Doctor, one Gilbert, and soe doe her ladis for the moste parte, and I am laught at by alle but onely Lady Margaret for that I doe fear the man and his cures that they bee not such as are permited to Xtian (Christian) folke to undergoe. I have seen him playe strange tricks, takeing, for the diversion of the queen's ladis, a silke glove from one and her bedes of ambre from another and a scrappe of the writeing of her Love from another, if she have it about her and can be purswaded to give it uppe, and makeing the one to russle and give forthe speckles of fyre, and the others one to pick the other uppe by touching of it—and a blacke catte comeing in he rubed her that she brisled and gave forthe litle fyres that danneed alonge her furre in the dark as if the wyches that love blacke cattes were strokeing her back. Soche matters are of the divel and sholde not be medled with for sporte, they are not meet for good Xtians."

Poor, timid little lady! If she deemed Dr. Gilbert's tricks and cures of 300 years ago so perilous to the soul what would she have thought of the electric shocks, baths, massage and all the varied tingling, prickling, crackling and spark spitting electrical devices of our modern physicians?

Before the Toothbrush.

Before the invention of toothbrushes people used to clean their teeth with linen. This is evident from William Vaughan's "Fifteen Directions to Preserve Health," published 1602, in which the author tells those who want to keep the teeth "white and uncorrupt" that they must wash the mouth after every meal. "sleepe with the mouth somewhat open * * * and in the morning take a linnen-cloth and rub the teeth well within and without." In Vaughan's time several varieties of tooth powder were known, the recipe for one of the simplest being as follows: "Burne a piece of Corke till it looks like a Coale, then take it out of the Fyre and it will fall to ashes, wherewith rub your teeth."—London Chronicle.

Fresh Figs.

The first known tree referred to in the Bible is the fig tree. We are apt to think of figs as very sweet dried fruit, brown in color, packed into long wooden boxes. When newly gathered figs are rather like pears in shape and of a green or purple color. Eaten in this state, the people of the east consider them the most delicious of fruit, but the figs are also dried, and in that form are included in almost every meal.

The Modern Way.

Mrs. Henry Peck—Men have degenerated sadly since the days of chivalry. Sir Walter Raleigh spread his cloak on the ground for the queen to walk on. Women do not walk on men's cloaks in these modern days, Mr. Henry Peck—No; they walk on men's necks now.

Open to Conviction.

"I understand," said Mr. Dolan, "that you declared there should be no more fightin'."

"I said that," replied Mr. Rafferty. "But I never was obstinate, an' mebbe a few words of argument from you can make me change my mind."

A Dilemma.

Wife—Henry, you really must have the landlord come and see for himself the awful damage the rain did to our ceiling. Hub—I can't without letting him see the damage the children have done to the rest of the house.

"We are all born for love. It is the principle of existence and its only end. —Disraeli.

Avoid Price Extremes in Buying Shoes

THE measure of economy in buying shoes is the service you get per dollar of expenditure. It is waste to buy shoes which were made to sell at a very low price, and it is equally unwise to pay extremely high prices. Beyond a certain point it is not possible to increase the practical value of a shoe, and when you pay more than a fair average price you are probably paying for "frills."

So we say to you: "Keep in the middle of the road. Don't pay less than $6 for a pair of shoes today, and expect to get good value. On the other hand, don't think it is necessary to pay more than $10—or $12 at the outside."

You probably can judge values for yourself if you will buy for service rather than appearance merely, and if you will be guided by the dealer's knowledge and experience. A quicker and easier way, however, is to look for the manufacturer's trade-mark on the shoes you buy. It is the best guarantee of good value, for the manufacturer's business reputation is behind it.

A FAMOUS MISER.

Cooke Died Wealthy After a Life of Petty Saving and Trickery.

Thomas Cooke, known as the "Islington miser," left at his death more than $300,000. His whole life was one of penury, petty saving and petty trickery. He made it a habit in order to get meals for nothing to fall in a pretended fit in front of a house at dinner time and on recovering he would naturally be invited to share the meal, which he always did after the proper amount of protestation. Often he would pretend to these kind people that they had saved his life, would make a great fuss over them and tell them he intended to remember them or their children in his will.

One man, a poor relation, occasionally sent him small presents of butter. This angered Cooke, who said to him: "Why send me such dribiets, you who are to get thousands and thousands at my death? Send me a firkin." The firkin and several more were sent, but neither this legacy nor any of the others came to reality.

Like many men shrewd in petty ways, he was easily deceived in matters out of his own line. Thus once when his horse was sick he was too mean to pay a horse doctor and asked advice of a quack, who told him he must take thirty onions, drill a hole through each, put them on a string, put the necklace around the horse's neck and let it stay there. The expense of thirty onions was too much; he bought fifteen, and when, after many days, they had served their purpose, he took them to the servant and ordered her to make an onion porridge for the day's dinner.—Exchange.

Homemade Toothpowder.

An effective tooth powder which can be always recommended is made as follows: One ounce of precipitated chalk, half an ounce of carbonate of soda, half an ounce of powdered orris root. Mix well together and pass three times through a sieve. Place in a bottle or in tins until required for use. The carbonate of soda removes the grease from the teeth and prevents decay, and the powdered orris root keeps the gums healthy.

Proof in Hand.

"Those fish will cost you just $10 apiece," said the fish warden as he caught a disciple of Izaak Walton pursuing his sport out of season.

"Great!" exclaimed the fisherman, handing over the money. "Give me a receipt, please. Now the boys will have to believe me when I tell them what I caught."

A Financier.

"Look here, Jimpson," said Brocklebank, "I'm terribly mortified about not having paid back that dollar I borrowed of you last June, but honestly, old man"—

"Oh, that's all right, Brock," said Jimpson. "Don't speak of it."

"Oh, but I must speak of it, old man," said Brocklebank. "I can't treat a friend that way, you know, and I—I want to pay you, and I will, Jimpsure thing. If you'll lend me $2 I'll pay off that debt right now, and we can start fresh again."

RESOURCEFUL MOTHS.

They Found a Way to Cross the Fruit Growers' Barriers.

England's winter moth is one of the greatest pests with which the fruit growers of that country have to contend. It begins to appear in October, and the female, whose wings are very short and quite unadapted to flight, climbs the trunks of the fruit trees and deposits her eggs. These hatch out in the spring, and the caterpillars soon devour the young leaves. Heretofore it has been comparatively easy to combat the ravages of the pest. Seeing that the female is unable to fly, fruit growers place bands of a sticky substance round each tree. The female, in climbing the trunk, comes to the band and is held fast.

But a wonderful thing has happened, says the Manchester (England) Guardian. In recent years the female moth has been found from time to time above the band, and how she got there was a mystery. Finally, however, an entomologist expert unveiled it. He saw the male and female moths together above the band on the tree—the male evidently having just deposited the female.

There appears to be little doubt, adds the Guardian, that in this we have a remarkable adaptation to circumstances. The female cannot fly, but the male can, and it would seem that he had flown to the higher part of the tree, carrying his wife upon his back. This is one of the most striking discoveries in natural history and is creating much interest among nature students.

A Narrow Escape.

"I'll give you a hamburg steak," began the kind lady, "if you'll chop"—

Here the man darted out of the yard.

Its Place.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Problem

By Ella Chadoin Hammond

For six hours Eustace Wardie had crouched in the long grass and shrubbery surrounding a pretty bungalow, moving from spot to spot cautiously, furtively. He was bent on a special mission, whose issues were vital and he dared not take any risk as to being discovered and defeated in his design.

"The sister was right," he soliloquized, feeling that he was handling a hard problem. "I haven't caught even a fleeting glimpse of the girl. She must be in the house, though, and, just as she wrote her sister, the place is guarded."

This latter fact was evident. Seated knitting in a rocking chair in the garden so as to command a perfect view of all the entrances and exits of the house, was a portly, keen-eyed woman who swept the prospect with a probing glance every other minute. On the other side of the house, reclining on the grass, a gun by his side, was a man past middle age, apparently the husband of the other watcher.

"He doesn't look as smart and vigilant as the woman," decided Wardie. "Twice he has nodded. Ah! he is gone now. Dare I venture a rush for the house?"

Wardie could distinctly catch the sound of muffled snoring. The man lay perfectly still, his face buried in his arm. Across a 40-foot space Wardie glided. He darted through a doorway to find himself in a narrow hall. Then beyond its other end he made out a graceful feminine figure.

"Miss Alice Boyden?" he spoke in a low tone, and as he extended an envelope toward the amazed girl he added quickly: "From your sister at Melville."

The hands of Alice Boyden trembled as she opened the letter and hurriedly perused its inclosure. She was at once aroused to manifest animation and excitement. The young man pressed close to her side.

"Beyond the grove yonder," he said, "I have a horse and buggy. Don't delay. The man outside is asleep, the woman is on the other side of the house and cannot observe your escape. Come."

His frank, open face pleased her. Besides, did he not come from her sister, Lucia, and under the directions of Lucia's husband, who was a lawyer? And was she not practically a prisoner, surrounded she knew not by what sordid plots and platters?

Her father had died leaving a fairly large estate. His half-brother, Hugo Blair, dominated the town. Through one of his creatures, a judge, Blair had been appointed guardian of Alice and had been given arbitrary charge of the estate. He did not intend that the rich pickings should escape his clutches.

In a vast flurry Alice followed the directions of her helper and guide. A great sigh of relief escaped her lips as they passed the sleeping sentinel in safety. They reached the grove. The color came back to that fair face, her shining eyes expressed her deep gratitude as the horse started up.

Wardie took a lonely road, but they were seen by quite a number of persons, and he urged the mettled steed to his best pace, fearing pursuit. It was just at dusk when they reached the end of the one traversed road in that wild district. Beyond it spread a 20-mile stretch of prairie, smooth as a floor. Twenty different trails had been broken through the high pampas grass. The horse was tired and Wardie allowed him to rest. Then they resumed their journey.

"Look!" exclaimed Alice, an hour later.

Perhaps two miles distant, and seemingly directly on their trail, was an automobile. Its rapid puffing echoed faintly, but its lights flared like evil eyes probing to locate the refugees.

"It is Mr. Blair's machine!" fluttered Alice in terror. "He will overtake us. Oh, do not delay! Let us hurry forward."

Wardie had halted the horse. Now he ran back about a hundred yards. He flared a dozen matches. He set the grass blazing in a dozen places. Then he leaped into the buggy and urged up the horse. He knew that the automobile would not dare dash into the advancing mass of flame, nor traverse the burned-over route where a spark might precipitate an explosion.

Wardie was right. They reached Melville in safety. At once Alice was hurried to another town and placed in charge of a lady friend, and the lawyer prepared to legally dispute the jurisdiction of the scheming half-uncle. He called upon Alice a few days later.

"I don't know what the result may be in the courts," he told Alice gravely. "It is a pity there is not some favored young man who could give you his name and his love. That would completely baffle Hugo Blair."

Alice blushed, and perhaps with reason. She had not ceased to think of the clever and self-possessed young man who had rescued her from the enemy. Craftily or incidentally, the lawyer sent Wardie with a message one day. The wily lawyer smiled to himself as he noted the happy light in his young partner's eyes upon his return.

"I fancy the problem will soon be solved," he told his wife, and it was, for when Hugo Blair came upon the scene with all kinds of dreadful legal documents, he found it of no avail, for he had to deal with Alice's husband this time.

MEXICAN MARVELS.

Tiny Dolls, Dressed Fleas and Firefly Flashlights Amaze Visitors.

Travelers and tourists in Mexico are invariably attracted by the wonderful skill and ingenuity displayed by the Indians in the making of miniature objects which they offer for sale. The little dolls, for instance, of Cuernavaca, 1-2 inch tall, and dressed in finely embroidered raiment, are the admiration of everyone who sees them.

But perhaps the most wonderful of all are the tiny dressed fleas which may be bought in Mexico City. They are all mounted in small boxes, which are little more than 1-4 inch in dimension. Here are a bride and bridegroom, the former with her bridal veil and orange blossoms, and the latter with his Prince Albert coat and silk hat. Ballet dancers, dressed in true Spanish dancing costumes, bull fighters in full regalia, and water-carriers with their water jugs are also represented among the dressed fleas of Mexico City.

Some further interesting facts regarding Mexican insects are related in The National Geographic Magazine. It appears that many of the Indian colors are made from Mexican insects, while one of the most remarkable of the many curious foods eaten by the natives is made from the eggs of a species of marsh fly. This fly deposits its eggs in incredible quantities upon flags and rushes. The eggs are then gathered and made into cakes which are sold in the markets. These little cakes are somewhat like brickbats, and the Indians enjoy a meal of them with as good a stomach as white people enjoy cheese. The eggs resemble the fine fish roe, and when mixed with corn meal and fowl eggs form a staple article of diet, particularly during Lent.

The insects themselves, which are about the size of a housefly, are captured, pounded into a paste, boiled in corn husks, and in this form are eaten.

Another remarkable insect found in Mexico is the Elater fire-fly, which the Indians use as miniature torches. The men fasten them to their ankles in going through the forest, and the women wear them in their hair under a thin gauze veil.

Tiny little cages are constructed in which three or four are kept for lighting purposes. The insects congregate by the thousands in many forest trees, and, as if by preconcerted agreement, simultaneously flash their lights, then darken them and flash them again.

The Silent Trombones.

Hans Bruder was one of the two trombone players in the Apollo orchestra. On the evening of a special concert, in the course of which an overture that contained a trombone solo was to be played, Hans received a small party in a neighboring town. Mindful of his responsible position in the concert, he hesitated for a long time before accepting, but he was an easy-going, pleasure loving soul, and an idea dawned on him—he would send a substitute to the concert in his place.

For the position of substitute he picked out a friend who could not play the trombone, but Hans assured him that skill was not necessary; it would be enough if he should puff out his cheeks and move the slide in perfect time with the other trombone player. Then Hans left him in charge of the instrument and hurried for the train.

The substitute went to the hall. The overture began. After a wild burst of music and a crash of drums came deadly silence. The frantic conductor stared at the substitute and waved his baton. Every head in the orchestra turned to see what was the trouble. But not a sound came from the puffing, pumping trombone players.

The other man also had sent a substitute.

Swiss Women Shoeblacks.

In England the shoeblack's calling has always been a monopoly of the men, but in at least one Swiss town it is invaded by women. On emerging from the railway station at Zurich one sees three middle-aged women kneeling at their wooden blocks, and eager to shine the travelers' boots. When no customers are forthcoming the shoeblackeases of Zurich spend their time knitting stockings, an industry closely allied to the main vocation of their lives. — London Globe.

When Youth Wanes.

Old age has many definitions, and middle age more. But you may take it that you are not really an old man so long as you take an interest in your personal appearance. There is not a nurse who does not know the sign of convalescence—when the patient wants to be shaved and put on a good appearance in this world. And so long as the man of sixty can take an interest in the latest fit—and tie it—he is preserving his youth.—London Chronicle.

Nothing Left Behind.

"Are you afraid to go away and leave your windows unlocked?"

"Not at all. What is there to be afraid of?"

"I should think you'd be afraid that thieves would get in and steal your valuables."

"Oh, no. We don't own more jewelry than my wife can wear."

Laboratory Projected.

A solar physics laboratory is to be erected in New Zealand, at Nelson. The site will probably be on a summit known as the Fringe, which has an elevation 2,500 feet above sea level.

Speed of the Street Song.

One of the curious things about the popular song is the rapidity of its dissemination among the street children. Few of them can hear it at first hand at the music halls, yet long before the latest catchy tune has found its way to the barrel organs or Sunday newspaper you will hear it rendered with amazing accuracy by tiny boys and girls. It seems to travel like rumor through an East Indian bazar.—London Standard.

His Kick.

"Why don't you go to the doctor with that cold?"

"Can't afford it."

"You buy a pair of shoes when you need them?"

"Yes, and that ends the transaction. The doctor keeps telling me to come again."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Great Scheme.

"How's your play?"

"A great success. My creditors are all coming to see if I am making money, and through their patronage I am."—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Your Friends.

Treat your friends as you do your bank account. Don't be reckless with them just because you've got them.—Detroit Free Press.

Cooking Your Goose.

The phrase "I'll cook your goose for you" originated in this manner: Eric, king of Sweden, coming to a certain town, besieged it, but, having few soldiers, was obliged to desist. The inhabitants in derision hung out from the walls a goose on a pole. Later Eric returned with re-enforcements and in reply to the challenge of the heralds observed that he had come "to cook their goose for them" and proceeded to storm the town and make it hot for the inhabitants.

Railroad Building at Night.

Railroad construction in Africa at night is made possible, says a scientific journal, by the use of a freight car as a lighting plant. Projecting from a tower built at one end of the car is a light arm that extends far out over the track. At the extreme end of this arm two searchlights are placed, while other lamps are located at intervals along the arm. By means of this arrangement plenty of light can be shed upon the portion of the track that the arm overhangs, while beams of the searchlights can be cast ahead where the work of preparing the roadbed is under way. The lighting plant permits of work in the cool hours while the torrid sun is below the horizon.

WOMAN'S EXTRAVAGANCE.

How much is said and written upon this subject. Now pause a moment, my dear masculine friend, and let us compare notes. We will be very brief and only enumerate a very, very few so as not to tax your patience in the least or weary you with many comparisons. To be sure our ribbons and laces look like great prodigious piles to your unfeminine eyes, but could not the entire lot be bought with the money thrown away in your cigar stumps? Our darling bonnets, though so lilliputian in this age, we admit cost a trifle, but so do all those luxuries over the way where we, poor souls, never care nor dare to enter, and where even you for modesty's sake have to go in at the back entrance. Our silks and satins cost less than your broadcloth. Now saying nothing of your clubs, and the secret associations to which you belong, but ignoring all these, where are all the superfluities of our sex, I would ask, not overbalanced by those of your own? Where are they?

HOME, SWEET HOME.

Stay, stay at home, my heart and rest;
Homeseeking hearts are happiest.
For those that wander they know not where
Are full of trouble and full of care.
To stay at home is best.

Home—the name made dear by sacred associations, the place where childish feet take their first faltering steps and infant minds receive their first ideas. Where lessons of love and truth, or right and wrong, of faith and hope and purity are imprinted upon the plastic heart, and all the sorrows and perplexities of after life are inefficient to quite efface these first deep true impressions. Sweet home, where the mother's gentle hands prepare the little domestic comforts that a father's love provides, and filial affection is the silver link, the silken tie that binds the household band together. Trials may come and clouds may lower, but in the seclusion of home remains sweet healing for the wounds that brave and sensitive hearts hide from a disdainful world. There these hurts and distresses may be confidently revealed and a sovereign remedy found in its unquestioning faith. There a child's pure kiss or the touch of dimpled fingers may revive a soul on the verge of despair and in the home the brightest dreams become more golden, the rarest pleasures more intense, the tenderest joys more serene. And if, in the varying degrees of fortune, its loving shelter must be abandoned, how the exile folds about his heart, as the traveller does his cloak the memory of its lights and flowers, its loves and hopes and kindnesses.

There the noblest influences exist, the holiest impulses find expression, and there have been born the chaste and lofty sentiments that have made a whole world better.

The bitterest tears shed over graves are for words left unsaid and for deeds left undone. "She never knew that I loved her." "He never knew what he was to me." "I always meant to make more of our friendship." "I did not know what he was to me until he was gone." Such words are the poisoned arrows which cruel death shoots from the doors of the sepulchre.

There is an enduring tenderness in the love of a mother for her son that transcends all other affections of the heart.

A crust of bread, a pitcher of water, a log cabin and perfect love—there is happiness for you, whether the day be rainy or shiny. It is the heart that makes the home, whether the eye rests on a potato patch or a flower garden. The heart makes home precious, and it is the only thing that can. Home is where the heart is.

While a man admires womanly beauty, yet in married life he admires much more — a good square meal cooked by his loving spouse; and let a wife have little or no knowledge of the art of housekeeping, domestic economy, or is a poor cook, be her husband rich as Croesus, her lot will be miserable.

Says a father of a small family to us, "My boys and girls do not leave the door yard after seven o'clock unless specially detained." We know of others that adopted that same rule years ago and their sons and daughters are to-day a credit to the town and community. There is nothing elevating in a street education.

That was a wise remark of a wise woman who said she counted the battle of life won if, at fifteen, her children preferred their home to any other place in the world—a remark not true without exceptions, but to be trusted a great ways.

The mother who allows the blues and sulks to overshadow the home, who allows herself to be moody and discontented, fails in a chief duty and places a handicap on her husband and children in the race of life.

The more a woman allows her sons to spend time and money in dressing themselves up, the more it will cost their father some day to dress them down.

Four Good Lessons to Remember

First—Once your kidneys are affected, chronic complaints are sure to follow—if you don't remove the cause immediately.

Second—You can't neglect kidney or bladder derangements and stay healthy. Putting off will never cure. You must assist Nature.

Third—The symptoms of kidney or bladder trouble—the commonest symptoms—are: Pains in the back and sides, swollen joints, painful urination, brick dust deposits, and constant headaches or dizziness.

Fourth—The sure and safe remedy for all afflictions caused by weak or deranged kidneys is Gin Pills.

Gin Pills have been the means of restoring thousands of chronic sufferers to health and strength again. If you suffer from kidney or bladder troubles—use Gin Pills. They seldom fail to bring relief.

Read what Gin Pills did for Mr. James Stackhouse, of Toronto. Mr. Stackhouse became convinced that he was in for an attack of Kidney trouble. Although subjected to X-ray treatment, the cause could not be located. Finally he was forced to leave his work and go to a hospital. His place was filled by another, as he never expected to go to work again.

Five boxes of Gin Pills put him on his feet again, and to-day he is physically fit again and ready for work.

GREAT SWIMMER DIES OF SPANISH INFLUENZA

Harry Elionsky, Who Once Swam Ninety Miles, is Latest Victim.

NEW YORK Oct, 17.—Harry Elionsky, the strongest swimmer in America, is dead from Spanish influenza. He was a member of the Pelham Bay Naval Station, and once swam ninety miles without a stop. One of his favorite performances was to swim from the Battery to Coney Island, New York, with hands and feet manacled. Several times he towed a rowboat, loaded with passengers, several miles while his hands and feet were tied.

A CHILD DOESN'T LAUGH AND PLAY IF CONSTIPATED

Look, Mother! Is tongue coated, breath feverish and stomach sour?

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver, bowels.

A laxative to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the California Fig Syrup Company."

Hazy Ideas.

"I have been promised a job in the forest service," said the politician.

"What are your duties to be?"

"I don't know much about the proposition. I have been told that I may be sent out to inspect government preserves."

"For what purpose?"

"To see if they comply with the pure food laws, I suppose."

Danger Signals.

It takes a cheerful philosophy to find virtue in the sulphurous odor of a bad egg. But if all bad water and bad milk were blessed by a like beneficent danger signal what a host of dead and dying human beings would have been saved!—Exchange.

LINED WITH SPIDER WEBS.

One Has to Cut One's Way Through the Roads of Paraguay.

The roads of Paraguay are about five yards wide throughout, and the trees meet overhead at a height of some eighteen feet, thus forming a tunnel of very uniform dimensions. In the clear parts of the tunnel—that is, where it is not choked up with the giant nettle—it is full from roof to ground of enormous spiders' webs stretching clear across the road, the big trees usually being chosen as anchorages and the total clear span being thus more like eight yards than five.

The main cables or framework of the nets are composed of five or six strands of thick yellow web and are almost as strong as cotton thread. The rest of the net is made up of single and double strands of the same stout material, which is as sticky as it is strong. Every yard or so one of these nets extends across one's path, making it necessary to hold a cutlass or a fairly stout stick at arm's length in front as one walks.

The makers of these troublesome but picturesque obstructions are large, highly colored, gaudy looking spiders with bodies that look as if they were about to explode, they are so blown out and glossy.

At intervals in some more open space where the sky is visible one will notice a different kind of web, far more irregular in shape, but far larger than the others. Not content with the space available in the tunnel, these webs are stretched in complicated mazes from the ground to the very tops of the surrounding trees, with clear spans frequently twenty or thirty yards from one tree to another.

From these main cables smaller ones extend to the ground—a drop of fifteen or twenty yards—and the spaces in between are filled up with a mass of webs spun in all directions.—Wide World Magazine.

WORKED HIS WEAK POINTS.

Mr. Ape Had No Memory, but Lots of Curiosity and Cowardice.

"Curiosity and cowardice," said the one legged veteran, "are the chief characteristics of all monkeys and of most men. I worked in a zoo after the war. I was the keeper of the monkey house. My biggest charge was an ape the size of a twelve-year-old boy, and it was through his curiosity and cowardice that I used to manage him.

"We exercised this ape in the big room every day, but when we wanted him to go back to his cage he'd climb up to the roof of the big room, and even with food you couldn't tempt him down.

"So I would go to Jack Lover and take him gently by the arm and direct his attention in a quiet, mysterious manner to the dark passage under the steam pipes.

"Lover and I every day tiptoed to the pipes. We pretended to point out to each other some horrible, unknown creature in the passage, and we'd say: 'Look out! There he is! There he is!'

"As we held each other's arms and bent over and peered into the darkness we'd hear very soon the delicate patter of small, active feet. The ape's curiosity had got the better of him. He crouched beside us. He, too, peered into the dark passage fearfully.

"Then suddenly Lover would shout: 'Look out! He's coming out!' And we'd scamper away in the direction of the ape's house. But the ape would be ahead of us. He'd rush into his house in a perfect whirlwind of excitement and terror. Then—click! We'd snap the door to on him, and he'd look very foolish.

"Every day we fooled the ape in this way. He was long, you see, on curiosity and cowardice, but very short on memory."—Chicago Herald.

How Hadley Proposed.

The way President Arthur Twining Hadley, according to a Yale legend, asked his prospective father-in-law for permission to marry his daughter was characteristic. At the time this gentleman, Luzon B. Morris, occupied an anomalous political position. He had recently been elected governor of Connecticut, but his claim was disputed, and the state was in a political turmoil.

"Mr. Morris," was the way Mr. Hadley approached the subject of his call, "I hope that I—at least—may be permitted to—to call you—governor."—World's Work.

SECRET OF STEADY GOLF.

It Lies In Proper Use of the Club and Nerve Control.

There is no such thing for any man as eternal steadiness, but there is no reason why most golfers shouldn't develop a much greater steadiness than is shown. It is all a matter of practicing two things—the proper use of the club and concentration, or nerve control.

Remember at each practice or during each friendly round to try to make your brain work as well as your arms and legs. Remember, above all other factors, that it is vital to the success of the shot that you keep your head still, often referred to as "looking at the ball." Make it a point to school your brain as well as your muscles, for the brain is in control of the muscles. The golfer who can't concentrate, who doesn't practice concentration, will never be able to develop steadiness, although he may be a fine shot maker and may be capable of some wonderful rounds.

So, to put a few suggestions into compact, concrete form, the following are offered to those who desire a change for the better in their golfing steadiness or unsteadiness:

First.—Practice concentration—keeping your mind on the ball as well as your eye.

Second.—Make up your mind to accept a bad lie or some bad luck as part of the game and to be expected.

Third.—Play each shot as it comes, without regret over past mistakes or worry over future troubles.

Fourth.—Practice the short game, shots around the green, at every possible chance. It is here that scores are reduced.

Fifth.—Practice with the brain as well as with the arms and legs. Cultivate brain control over muscle.—Jerome D. Travers

ALLIES ARE BREAKING THE HINDENBURG LINE

Important Railway Centre of Wassigny Has Been Captured in New Offensive Between Bohain and Le Cateau, Which Has Already Penetrated Four Miles.

PROGRESS REPORTED

LONDON, Oct 19.—British and American troops continuing their attack between Le Cateau and Bohain have captured the important railway centre of Wassigny, Field Marshal Haig reported last night. Fighting is still going on in the region.

Further progress was made on the whole front, from the North Sea to the Sensee River.

Additional advances of more than five miles were made between Lille and Douai. The British captured Tourcoing and Roubaix and passed eastward of these cities. The occupation of Douai was completed.

Advancing Rapidly.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Associated Press this morning issued the following — British and American troops fighting their way into Hunding line, southeast of Le Cateau are advancing quite rapidly in spite of considerable resistance of the enemy. Since fighting began there on Thursday morning Germans have been forced back more than four miles.

British warships have come to assistance of Allied land forces in Belgium and are shelling Germans who are trying to escape through narrow neck of land between Bruges and Dutch frontier. Relentless pursuit of retreating Germans in Belgium and down along battle front continues as far as the area just to west of Valenciennes.

There is a probability that the Germans by flooding country east of Burges will be able to delay advancing Belgians for time. German engineers have been working on line of defense running through Ghent and along the Scheldt river and it is probable that British, French and Belgians will be forced to fight very hard before they can make much of an impression in this position. Although Germans have lost large number of men and guns they appear to have extricated buly of their forces from threatening position in which they were left by collapse of line north of Lys river.

WITH THE ALLIES ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 19.—British and American troops southeast of Le Cateau captured 1,200 prisoners and 120 guns yesterday, and have advanced four miles since attack began there. British are now more than three miles southeast of Lille. On Belgian coast British warships are shelling retreating Germans.

Are Quitting Brussels Now

Evacuation Reports From Belgian Deputy Refer to German Soldiery.

(Associated Press.)

AMSTERDAM, October 19. — The evacuation of Brussels by the Germans has already been begun, according to M. Heinrich, an activist Belgian deputy. The deputy is quoted thus by the correspondent of Nieuws Van Den Dags, at Rosendal, on the Dutch frontier, who says the Deputy himself has arrived at Brussels. Evacuation reports, it is declared, refer to German troops, and not the civilian population of the city.

Ruling Classes Prevented Kaiser From Abdicating

Intervention Also Interfered With Sending of Reply to Wilson's Note.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Intervention by the ruling classes in Germany restored the Kaiser after he had actually abdicated, and interfered with the sending of a reply to President Wilson's last note, the Chronicle to-day declared it had reason to believe. According to this newspaper's belief the Kaiser abdicated for several hours, and probably even signed his abdication. An agreement on an armistice was actually under way when the ruling class intervened, caused a cancellation of the note and the restoration of the Kaiserdom. In connection with this report it was noted that there were many rumours early this week of a reply already being en route. Then neutral news centres received accounts of the arrival in Berlin of Hindenburg and other military leaders and at the same time riots were reported in the German capital.

FRENCH REACH SAMBRE CANAL

PARIS, Oct. 19.— French continue successfully their advance south of Wassingny and east of Guise. They have reached the Sambre canal on a front of nearly nine miles south of Hannappes.

French cavalry were reported tonight to have reached the outskirts of Ghent. The reports indicate a continuation of the rapid Allied advance in Belgian coast.

Riots in Berlin Are Reported

Hundred Window Panes in Imperial Palace Smashed.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 19.—A hundred window panes in the Imperial palace in Berlin were smashed by a rioting mob during a peace demonstration Wednesday, according to reports received here. The police were routed, advices said. Thereupon the crowd rushed to the palace and did considerable damage before being dispersed. At the recent election to select a successor of Kaempf, the Independent Socialists paraded carrying placards with the slogan, "If the war lasts another year the Kaiser will make his exit like the Czar did."

GIFT STOCKINGS FOR THE SOLDIERS

The Major Bennet, Chapter I.O.D.E., Peterborough's youngest chapter of the Daughters of the Empire, have contributed a splendid gift to the Canadian wounded soldiers in England by making 14 daintily stitched net stockings filled with all kinds of good things. The little girls divided into groups of thirty each group undertaking one stocking, when completed and filled with chocolates, games, tooth brush, etc., they represented an expenditure of $2.00 each. The stockings leave Peterboro next week for Toronto to be forwarded on to England. At present they are on exhibition at Grafton's store.

HAMMERING THE HUNS—This map shows at a glance the importance of the Allied progress in Belgium and France. (A) shows Bruges taken back by the Belgians and French; to the northwest are Ostend and Zeebrugge, the two submarine bases now freed from the Hun pirates. Below are Throurout, Roulers, Courtrai and Lille, all now redeemed. (1) Is the line at which military experts believe the Germans will make their final stand, running from near Lille to Mauberge, Mezieres. Montmedy and Metz. (2) Shows Douai, the home of the Roman Catholic Bible, now in our hands. (3) Is where the Allies are pressing forward to the east of Cambrai and St. Quentin. (4) Is the area in which Laon, the great German bastion, is being encircled. (5) Shows the German lines in front of Laon. (6) Is the Champagne front, where the Germans are in full retreat; and (7) is where the French and Americans are advancing slowly but surely from Verdun toward Montmedy, this sector forming one of the mouths of the bottle in which the German armies are now placed.

CAN'T CUT WOOD FAST ENOUGH TO SUPPLY ORDERS

This is the Explanation Given by One Dealer for Declining to Accept All Orders Offered.

MACHINE WORKS TO LIMIT

Wood, wood everywhere, and not a stick to burn! This has been the plaint of many citizens whose orders have been refused by the dealers, although the latter's yards are piled high with the summer's importations. At a meeting of the Trades and Labour Council this week members told of the repeated rejections of their wood orders, in spite of the fact that their needs were urgent, and the dealers' supplies were obviously ample.

Asked for an explanation of this apparent discrepancy between the demand and the supply, Mr. Tom Pratt, of the J. E. A. Fitzgerald coal and wood yard, said: "It is not a question of transportation, but simply of cutting and splitting the wood. We are filling our orders as quickly as we can, and that means just as fast as we can cut and split the wood. The capacity of our cutting machine is from thirteen to fifteen cords a day, and this is all required for the orders that we have on file. We have one man cutting the wood ten hours a day, six days in the week ,and two men splitting it. So far this year we have put out more wood than we have ever delivered before in the same time."

Orders only for a Week.

Mr. Pratt added that orders are accepted only for a week's cutting and splitting. This limit was adopted in order to avoid confusion.Hence the placing of a consumer's order depends upon the extent of the delivery of the orders already on hand.

Probably dealers would be glad to deliver wood in four foot lengths, and let the householders cut and split it themselves, but the bucksaw has become practically extinct. The men of to-day demand their wood cut and split, ready for the fire, and it is hardly to be expected that the dealers will put themselves to the expense of installing extra machinery for the present rush of business, which when it has passed will leave these additional machines idle.

The statement of Mr. Pratt doubtless expresses the explanations of the other dealers in Peterboro.

BERLIN TO BE BOMBED

Great Aircraft Capable of Carrying Big Load of Bombs is Being Perfected by British Firm to Use Against Huns.

DISTANCE SHORTENED

Special to the Examiner:

(By Carl D. Groat).

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—Berlin is to be bombed.

The makers of the British airplane, Handley Page, are perfecting a giant craft which shall meet the requirements of a big gasoline load and a big bomb load, according to information from Major-General Kenly, Chief of the United States Military Aeronautics Branch.

While the British are developing this important machine, others among the Allies are striving toward the same end. There has been much unfounded, much imaginative talk about what airplanes would do to Germany. Now, however, rational authorities say that the Handley Page development assures the bombing of Berlin, and will make easy the dropping of heavy loads of T.N.T. on many Teuton towns.

One thing helping the airplane situation immensely is the Allied advance in Belgium and elsewhere along the Western front. This is shortening the flying distance materially. In airplane construction the great difficulty is to develop a machine which can carry sufficient gasoline for a long flight wih a heavy load. In other words, as Major-General Kenly put it, it is a hard proposition to do much damage to Germany if the flyer can only remain out four hours and has large bombs to drop on some German city.

VALENCIENNES IS MENACED BY NEW BRITISH OFFENSIVE

Allies Are Only Seven Miles From Important City, While the French and Americans are Pressing Back the Enemy in Metz Sector.

SQUEEZING THE FOE

Special to The Examiner:

(By William Philip Simms.)

PARIS, Oct. 19.— The British are making progress in their new blow which menaces Valenciennes, only seven miles distant. French and Americans are pressing back the Germans left west of Metz. Thus the Boche armies are gradually being squeezed into a bottle neck between Metz and Aix La Chapelle.

It is believed here that Ludendorff hopes to give a general battle somewhere beween the present line and that line, but by then his armies will be demoralized and broken, and incapable of great effort. The feeling is that if the Allies do not relent, but increase their efforts, the Germans will be crushed then, if not before. It was this knowledge which drove the German military leaders into asking for an armistice.

C.N.R. Exonerated by Jury in the Houlihan Inquest

GUNNER D. J. McLEOD.
He enlisted with the Cobourg Heavy Battery, in April, 1917, and recently sustained a gun shot wound that fractured his left arm.

Verdict Declared That Airbrakes on C.P.R. Train Were Considerably Below the Standard of Effectiveness Required by Regulations.

COLLISION ON OCT. 12TH

The Canadian Northern Railway was completely exonerated last night by the jury empaneled to inquire into the circumstances surrounding the death of brakeman Michael Houlihan, who was killed at the C. N.R.-C.P.R. diamond at Bonar Law on October 12th.

"We find from the evidence that the accident was due to defective air brakes on the C. P. R. train, and that the accident would not have occurred had they been in proper working order," was the verdict.

Engineer's Story.

The most important witness was Mr. William Page, the engineer on the C. P. R. train at the time of the accident. He said the C. P. R. engine was travelling at only about 5 miles an hour when it struck the C. N. R. engine. When coming down the grade into Bonar Law Junction he discovered that the air brakes were not of sufficient strength to stop the train before it came to the diamond. This is where the C. N. R. and G.P.R. cross at right angles. A C.N.R. train was standing with the fore part of the engine over the diamond. Mr. Page, the C. P. R. engineer, seeing that he could not stop his engine before it ran into the C. N. R. locomotive, blew his whistle until he was close to the C. N. R. locomotive, when he jumped. In Mr. Page's opinion, the cause of the accident was the failure of the brakes to hold the train. There were 26 loaded cars on the C.P.R. train, on which the brakes of three cars were out of order, according to the Air Brake Inspector at Havelock. When the cars making up the train were inspected after the accident eleven cars were reported to have inoperative brakes, The C. N. R. had the right of way at Bonar Law because the signal board was "against" the C.P.R. The C.P.R. engine crashed into the front of the C.N.R. engine, pressing the boiler of the standing engine against the tender, and crushing the engineer. Brakeman Michael Houlihan was just stepping off the C. N. R. cabin steps when the crash occurred.

Dr. Carmichael, who attended Houlihan at the Nicholls Hospital, amputated both his legs, but he died later. The C. N. R. engine was pushed almost at right angles with its track by the heavier C. P. R. locomotive.

According to the railway regulations, 85 per cent. of the cars making up a train must have effective air brakes. In this case, 11 of the 26 cars had inoperative brakes, or only about 42 per cent.

Edward Kelsey, conductor H. Buchanan and C. Knapp, brakemen, composing the rest of the C. P. R. train crew, corroborated the evidence of the engineer.

J. F. Baker, joint agent of the C. P. R. and C. N. R. systems, at Bonar Law, was only a few feet from the diamond at the time of the accident. He ordered the auxiliary from Havelock, which carried Houlihan to Peterboro, where he subsequently died from shock.

Dr. Honeywell Returns Home

Evangelistic Campaign Will Not be Resumed—Epidemic of Indefinite Duration.

At a meeting of the executive of the Evangelistic meetings held last night in George street Methodist church it was decided to withdraw the campaign altogether. On account of prevailing conditions which will probably not be cleared up for some time it was not thought advisable to consider the resumption of the services because of the unsettled conditions.

Dr. Honeywell who was present said he felt such steps the wisest course to pursue. He returned to-day to Chicago.

Reverend A. J. Thomas occupied the chair.

CARRIED OFF MACHINERY FROM LILLE

Factories in French City Stripped by the Enemy.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—(British Admiralty wireless). — Although the first reports indicated that the town of Lille was left intact, the houses have been stripped of all their valuables and the food supplies looted. The London Morning Post, giving a description of how the Germans set about crippling Lille's industries, declared that not only did they commandeer all stocks, but they ripped the machinery out of the factories and sent it to Germany. This probably refers to the time just after the Germans took Lille in 1914.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 19TH, 1918.

A WISE MOVE.

The closing of places of public assemblage, including the churches, clubs, theatres, moving picture shows, pool-rooms, Public Library and schools as a preventative against the epidemic of influenza will be welcomed by the public generally, who are willing to be deprived of the benefits of these places, if by so doing, the epidemic is prevented from gaining the hold in Peterborough it has obtained in other centres in the province. There have been different opinions expressed as to the futility of closing public places, but in the end nearly every city visited by the influenza has been forced to adopt the measure, and the local authorities are wise in clamping the lid on tight. There is no doubt that the influenza thrives in crowds, and that infection spreads most rapidly when many people are brought in contact with each other. The drastic action of closing all places where people ordinarily come together should prevent a good deal of infection and help stop the progress of the disease.

MAKE VICTORY SURE.

Money is the great driving force behind the Allies' war efforts. That is why the Canadian Victory Loan campaign is of the greatest importance. No one should be carried away with the idea of an early peace. The concentrated efforts of the Allies will be necessary to ensure victory, and Canada must continue to play her great part in the struggle until the end. She cannot do so without finances, and she cannot obtain the necessary money from any other source than from her own people. Every Canadian, therefore, should rally to the call, and Canada's answer to the appeal for five hundred million dollars should be a record investment, the news of which will shake the German morale like the Canadian Army Corps shattered the enemy divisions that tried to stop them on the Queant-Drocourt switch line. All that is necessary to accomplish this result is for Canadians at home to show the same spirit as General Currie's men have shown at the front.

Peterborough must do her share. One of the Governor-General's honour flags is a war souvenir that this city cannot afford to be without, and the citizens of Peterborough should not rest content until the district allotment is surpassed and an honour flag has been safely won.

OUR STATE MERCHANT FLEET.

Before the end of this year Canada is likely to have Government-owned and operated freight vessels plowing the Atlantic. It is expected that two ships, to be named the Canadian Pioneer and the Canadian Voyageur, of 8,100 and 4,350 tons respectively, will be completed in five or six weeks. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries says that about 22 ships are under construction or contract for the Government, at a cost of about $25,000,000, and that next year the number will be even larger. Canadian steel shipyards are now engaged mainly on Government ships.

The operation of the Government fleet will be a sharp test of State efficiency in handling such matters. In the United States there is widespread discussion of what will be the ultimate fate of the huge fleet of Government carriers. The leasing of them to ship companies, after the traffic conditions become normal, is strongly advocated. However, until the results of Government operation are ascertained, at a time when privately-owned ships have free play with rates and routes, judgment necessarily has to be vague. It is very important to Canada that we have more Canadian ocean freighters. Hitherto, we have been dependent largely on British ships. Most of our ocean-going tonnage consisted of liners. One of the objectives we should keep in view is the special use of the Government merchant vessels to develop our trade with the other parts of the Empire. We have preferential arrangements with other parts of the Empire, but inadequate transportation has handicapped the reciprocal development of trade with them. Britain will enter the peace period three or four million tons short of her former sea-carrying strength, while the United States and foreign countries will have millions of tons extra. Much as the Motherland will do to provide complete transport service over Empire routes, the Dominions will serve the Empire and themselves well by building up their own merchant fleets. Australia not only bought 15 steamers for State service, but is building ships in which home-made plates are used.

After providing for the returned men the first problem of the reconstruction era is ships — ships to carry much-needed raw materials and food supplies to the war-harassed Allies in Europe. There will be a general scramble on the seas for everything needed to fill acute needs in every country. Rapidly, the trading aspect will become uppermost. Magnificent markets await the early deliveries. Canada has much to sell. Self-reliance on the seas, providing for ourselves a maritime service devoted solely to Canadian trade interest, ought to repay many times over the net outlay on the venture. The unfortunate thing is that the programme is not much farther advanced — because declining construction costs in other countries, on the coming of peace, will increase our disadvantage in that respect. — Mail and Empire.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

This is old home week for the Belgians and Serbians.

The Germans also seem to be planning a re-union of their own across the Rhine.

Buy Victory Bonds and keep the Huns on the run.

Peterborough wants an honour flag. Help to make it sure by investing in the Victory Loan.

Get out into the open air tomorrow. It will help you to fight the "flu."

Fresh air and sunshine are the most powerful safeguards against the influenza.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

Hardly.

Ottawa Journal: No, our young men don't study this Daily Racing Form to see how much they can invest in the Victory Loan.

A Vast Improvement.

Toronto Star: President Wilson has improved more as a writer during the past two years than any literary man we know.

The Only Answer.

New York Herald: Unconditional surrender— not Hun-conditional— is the only possible answer to the Teutonic camouflaged "Kamerad."

Good For All Time.

London Free Press: Keep clean is the advice of doctors to those who would avoid Spanish influenza. Beauty of this is one may continue this treatment after the danger is passed; it has no bad effect.

SUPPLIES REACHING CZECHS.

Clothing from America for Fighters Arrives at Vladivostock.

Vladivostok. — Significant of the intention of the United States to aid Russia was the arrival yesterday of the first consignment of supplies for the Czechoslovak Army, the gift of the American Government through the Red Cross, and the opening of the office of a representative of the United States War Trade Board, which makes certain the import into Russia of kerosene, clothing, hardware, and other material of which Russia is in dire need. All articles reimported will be under control as to price and distribution for the purpose of preventing profiteering. This control is something unknown heretofore in Russia.

The consignment to the Czechoslovak army included 75,000 weathers and overcoats and other equipment, without which the Czechoslovaks would have been at the mercy of the Siberian winter. Some supplies had been shipped last week to the Czechoslovaks as an emergency relief before the setting in of the extreme cold.

Owing to the political and economic situation, transportation is the greatest problem yet unsolved, but it is expected that this will greatly improve in the near future owing to the coalition of the Horvath and Omsk governments, which coalition is receiving increasing support.

LAKEFIELD KNITTERS WILL BE GIVEN WOOL

(Special to The Examiner)

LAKEFIELD Oct 19.—At the meeting of the Soldiers Comfort Club held on Thursday afternoon, in response to the appeal made for socks to be sent to all the Lakefield boys overseas, the president made the announcement that the officers were willing to provide the wool if each church would be responsible for knitting for their own boys. As the time is short the churches hope that all who can possibly do so will knit socks for our Lakefield boys overseas

Mrs. Marling, the president and Miss Griffin will be at the town hall at 3:30 on Monday afternoon to give out wool to the representatives of the five churches in the village.

Mr. W. A. Nixon is spending a few days at his home in the village.

ASQUITH'S FRIEND DIES.

Lord Lyell's Heir is Victim of Influenza.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18. — Major, the Hon. Charles Lyell, principal aide to Major-General McLachdan, military attache of the British Embassy, died here to-day of an embolism, following an attack of Spanish influenza. He was the second member of the embassy staff to fall a victim to the scourge. Capt. Angus Mackintosh, son-in-law of the Duke of Devonshire, died on Sunday.

Major Leyell, though only 43 years old, was a prominent figure in English public life. He had been a member of Parliament and served as Parliamentary private secretary to Sir Edward Grey and Premier Asquith. As a soldier he served in France, where he suffered from severe shell shock, which led to his detachment and assignment to Washington. He was the only son of Lord Lyell of Kinnordy, and his five year old son now becomes heir to the peerage. Burial will be at Arlington National cemetery next Monday.

TO FARMERS

The Government has sent out an appeal to the Canadian people to buy at home. Why? Because when we buy abroad more than we sell we have to pay a premium on the excess, in addition to the price of the goods. This is known as an adverse rate of exchange. We have bought four hundred million dollars' worth more from the United States than we have sold to it. The rate of exchange is 2 per cent. against us. In other words, we are paying 2 per cent. on four hundred millions of dollars, or eight million dollars, which means that if we owe a great deal of money for goods bought we have to pay extra for the privilege. If we keep this up Canada will bleed to death. Please inquire into this matter at once.

No Humbug! Lift off Corns

Doesn't hurt a bit to lift a corn or callus off with fingers.

For a few cents you can get a small bottle of the magic drug freezone recently discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Just ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone. Apply a few drops upon a tender, aching corn and instantly, yes, immediately, all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you lift it out, root and all, with the fingers.

Just think! Not one bit of pain before applying freezone or afterwards. It doesn't even irritate the surrounding skin.

Hard corns, soft corns, or corns between the toes, also hardened calluses on bottom of feet, just seem to shrivel up and fall off without hurting a particle. It is almost magical.

Ladies! Keep a tiny bottle on your dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.

ALL FRANCE THRILLED AT RELIEF OF LILLE

PARIS, Oct. 18.—News of the deliverance of Lille spread rapidly in Paris, arousing deep and quiet joy. Flags were hung out on all sides and a crowd of refugees from the Lille region paraded to the Lille statue in the Place Concorde, where they sang the Marseillaise and decorated the statue with Allied flags.

ON A BRIEF MEETING WITH A DEAR FRIEND.

How sweet it is to meet again
The true, tried friends of long ago,
Kind Heaven to mortals does not deign
A purer pleasure, here below.

The warm handclasp and greeting Smile
Can bridge the long dividing years,
And fancy's talisman beguile
The past, till present, it appears.

And brings again the bygone days
When skies were bright, and hearts were young
And hope, her sweet delusive lays
In carefree bosoms, gaily sung.

What ever fortune we may share,
As up life's rugged path we wend
Beyond the price of rubies rare
Is Heaven's best gift, a faithful friend.

Others may see the failing frame,
And silvery threads among the gold;
To us our friends are still the same
For loved ones change not, or grow old.

Although full soon those blissful hours
Of glad re-union, now are passed.
While reason holds her conscious power
The memory of that time will last.

Earth's partings, with deep sorrows rend,
The heart, and tears bedim tre eyes,
But in the world that knows no end
We'll meet, where friendship never dies.

Farewell, my friend, ah! words are vain
Still this shall be my heartfelt prayer
That God, until we meet again,
May keep you in His tender care.

Mrs. A. F. CALDER.

When Canada Promises to Pay

There is no more certain way of making money than by loaning money at interest.

—provided the security is good.

—provided the borrower is known to be able to pay the interest as it falls due and to repay the principal on the date specified.

When you loan money to Canada you know beyond all possible question your money is safe—the security for the loan indisputable.

Canada's war debt per capita is the lowest among the nations at war—her wealth per capita, enormous—her resources, so great as to be almost beyond reckoning.

And all the resources of Canada are behind the Victory Loan 1918, which will be open to the Canadian people for subscription within a few days.

Like the Victory Loan 1917, it will be welcomed by all loyal Canadians:—

—as an opportunity of proving that we are determined to fight on to Victory with our dollars, as well as with our men and our guns.

—as an opportunity of placing our earnings in what is at once the greatest of causes and the safest of investments.

—as a loan in which there is absolute certainty that the borrower will repay and equal certainty that the interest will be paid every six months.

The security is so strong that none can question it—for it is safeguarded by all the wealth that Canada possesses—by all the developed resources represented by her combined industries and by all the untouched resources of her mines, forests, lands and fisheries.

When you invest in the Victory Loan 1918, you will become the owner of a Victory Bond. That Bond is Canada's signed pledge of repayment—a pledge that Canada is in honor bound to redeem—and, in wealth of resources, abundantly able to redeem.

Get ready to do your share in buying Victory Bonds

Issued by Canada's Victory Loan Committee in co-operation with the Minister of Finance of the Dominion of Canada.

Science Failed to Guard Us

When the history of this influenza epidemic comes to be written, it will not reflect much glory on medical science, or, to be more explicit and to recognize the great truth that responsibility is always personal, on the doctors in whom medical science is embodied. It will have to be admitted that though the members of the profession in the United States had long and full warning that the infection would come to this country, though they had read all about its ravages in Europe, and though it is a disease of few or no mysteries either as to its nature or method of distribution, when it arrived they did little more than tell us that among a well-fed people there would be no widespread infection and the cases that did appear would be far milder than under the much different and far worse conditions existing in the war-worn foreign nations.

That makes strange reading, now, with deaths more numerous in our training camps than anywhere else. One recalls, too, that to early suggestions of strict quarantine the reply was made that such measures could not be taken because they would interfere with the movements of our troops and the general conduct of our war business. Would they have done so more than does an epidemic that now covers practically every State in the Union and practically every town in every State?

That the doctors have been either idle or helpless nobody imagines. Widespread as the malady is, and serious as are its effects, it can be claimed without the possibility of contradiction that it would have been worse, the fatalities more numerous, except for the wisdom of our physicians and the labors of the nurses trained by them. That, however, is poor consolation, as the same method of reasoning always is, for what troubles us are the ills we have, not those we might have had, but didn't.

There has been what seems like a lamentable delay everywhere in the adoption of such precautions as the closing of schools, theatres and churches, and it is only now, when the epidemic is at its height, that we hear, and hear from Washington alone, as yet, of people who go about the streets and in public conveyance, wearing the gauze masks to which resort was long since made by the members of the attendant staff in all well regulated hospitals. That device certainly has some merit. If it has much, the experts ought to say so and then we would all follow it.

Citizens of Lille in Frenzy of Delight at Deliverance

Wept Tears of Joy When French Soldiers Arrived After Four Years' Occupation by the Germans—Mayor's Son Flew Home in Aeroplane.

SHOUT "VIVE LES ANGLAIS"

PARIS, Oct. 19.—"I have just witnessed the most touching spectacle of my life. The whole city, in a delirium of joy, was ready to throw itself upon us, the first to enter Lille," telegraphs the war correspondent of The Petit Journal from that city.

"To-night at nine o'clock, near Armentieres, an officer shouted to us 'Lille is taken'. We speeded our auto, crying amid sobs of joy 'they have gone, they have gone. Vivent les Anglais. / Vive la France!'

"We went a little farther; then a huge shell hole obliged us to abondon our machine and proceed on foot. Two more girls who had run out of the city to meet their deliveries sooner, cried, while tears streamed down their cheeks, 'They won't come.' A hack appeared and we got in, but a crowd, every member of which was weeping, seized us. One man climbed on our shoulders. Another shouted to us, 'my name is Guiselin. I am city councillor. The Germans offered me a million to betray my country. The cowards, the cowards,' and then he burst into sobbing.

Word From Motherland.

"Carried by the crowd, we arrived at the city hall. Deputy Mayor Baudon stood at the door. When we entered everyone rushed to embrace us. An old man, with white hair stood with a violin at the top of the grand staircase and played the 'Marseillaise.' Outside, the crowd seethed like a sea. We were the first messengers from the Motherland.

"'Speak, speak to us,' they cried. We opened the windows and told of our victory. A shout went up that filled the city. We told of the Bulgarian capitulation. Again the cheers rang out. We told of the Turkish promise to quit the war and again the crowd cheered. Then we told them that President Wilson hes refused to grant an armistic and demanded Emperor William's head. The crowd, in a frenzy, tossed everything it could lay hands on into the air."

Buildings Intact.

At the Prefecture, the acting Prefect, M. Regnier, embraced us and there was a fresh outburst of cheering from the crowd. It was for Mayor Delasalle and for his son, a French officer of the Legion of Honor and wearing the War Cross. This officer, an aviator, heard at 11 o'clock that the city had been freed He leaped into his machine, flew quickly to Lille and landed in the Place d'Theatre. Alighting, he rushed home to see his father. His was the first French uniform the liberated citizens had seen and the sight of it increased their delirium of joy. There remain 120,000 inhabitants in Lille. The Germans had carried off all the male population more than fourteen years of age. The city is not greatly damaged and the public buildings are intact.

New Health for Women

The most fateful years in a woman's life are those between forty-five and fifty. Many of the sex enter this period under depressing conditions through overwork or worry about the home, or through a condition in which the blood is weak or watery and so they suffer heavily. Among the commonest symptoms are headaches, feverish flushes, palpitation of the heart, dizziness, backache, depression and other well recognized disturbances of the health which signalizes that the blood requires attention. Women urgently need rich, red blood all their lives, but never more so than in middle-life, when the nerves are also weak and overwrought.

Now every woman can prove the prompt help afforded to her health by renewing and building up the blood. It is a test that any ailing woman can make by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for these pills make rich, red blood, which in turn stimulate the appetite, strengthens the nerves and restores full robust health. Thousands of women have found in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills new health and strength and with these a new happiness and interest in life.

So if you suffer, avail yourself at once of the splendid home treatment which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills so easily afford, and you will be among those who rejoice in regained health. These pills are sold by all dealers in medicine, or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ROUGH LUCK FOR THIS YPRES PLAYER.

Brought "Flu" Home From Camp and Everybody Caught It—His Mother Dead.

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 18.—Hundreds of friends of Jack Hughes, well known Winnipeg hockeyist, who performed so brilliantly for Ypres in Allan Cup contests at Toronto last March, will no doubt sympathize with him, as he has lost his mother, Mrs. Sarah Hughes, of Donald Street, and his younger brother, Richard, who have expired from Spanish influenza. Hughes is reported to be suffering from the dreaded disease in the hospital at Moosejaw. His sister, Winnifred Hughes, is also down with the malady. Jack spent a few days in Winnipeg on his way to Siberia, having been with the 76th Battery at Camp Petawawa all summer, and no doubt brought the germ into his family, when he left for the West he was complaining of a sore throat.

Public Library Notes

The average man, entering a library and looking casually at the shelves, is often tempted to remark on the tremendous amount of waste material that seemingly lies there. In one sense he is right, but, in another, undeniably wrong. He is right, because, insofar as the books are not used the, are wasted, but he is wrong in counting them useless, as the offscourings of a factory might be counted useless, for they are simply unused gold mines waiting for a proper prospector to turn their wealth of ore to good account.

One does not need to go back five, ten, or fifteen years in order to look for the waste. Every year hundreds of books are bought for all libraries which from the day they are received to the day they fall to pieces from dry-rot, are neglected so utterly by the public that the only things that serve to keep them in man's memory are the titles on their covers.

Books Carefully Chosen.

I doubt very much if there is any library in the province where books are chosen by a Library committee with more care than in our own. In looking through the Accession Book one cannot but be struck with the fact that they have been drawn from all sources, that not one bookseller, but many, have acted as agents in obtaining them from the publishers and that the markets of England as well as those of the United States and Canada have been drawn upon freely for their stores. Yet, with all the labour expended in choosing them and endeavouring to obtain a right percentage in the various classes so as to suit all tastes and all ages, the fact indubitably remains that scores upon scores of books never leave the shelves after they are once placed there.

Libraries, for the same reason, have been likened to cemeteries, and various other cheering similes have been used to emphasize what is certainly a regrettable state of affairs. But such similes are wrong, for, in contradistinction to the human frame, a good book need never die. Voiceless for centuries, maybe, the touch of a hand can suffice to arouse it from its enforced letheragy and offer to you the fulness of its riches. Here, Socrates may descant on thinking and acting in accordance with the dictates of reason, there, Alexander prate of his conquests, or Xenophon expatiate eloquently on the march of the Ten Thousand from the heart of Mesopotamia to the coast of the Black Sea. We may hear Boswell indulging in his incessant chatter and picture Reynolds seated, ear-trumpet in hand, at the head of that brilliant galaxy of men of wit and learning which counted among its members much that was memorable in the intellect of the latter half of the eighteenth century.

All ages, all climes are represented in a library. We can sit in the company of princes and peasants, travel with the explorers, fight with the soldiery of Agamemnon or Napoleon, and in the most dreadful of all struggles, the present great war, be present in spirit, even if we cannot be in the flesh, with the splendid heroes of our own country and of the nations with whom we are allied.

In the Presence of the Great.

If everyone entering a library would strive to realize that he is, in a very real sense, in the presence of the world's notables, he would find an added fascination in roaming round the shelves. Potentates who once held the nations in awe wait for him to speak to them; sages who gave vent to their feelings reservedly even in the presence of kings, would regale him with their choicest aphorisms. He would find himself the equal of all. Statesmen, philosophers, captains of industry, ascetics, men whose lives had been one long negation of worldly pleasure, fops, parasites, mountebanks, women of culture, women whose influence has had its effect on the fortunes of dynasties and who have been either the guilding stars or the stumbling blocks in the destinies of individuals; he would find that in that great republic, the real of Bookland, class distinctions are unknown, and that the living and the dead are able to meet and greet each other on the same plane.

People were at one time much exercised in their minds as to the harm that might be exerted by libraries. They were afraid that too much acquisition of knowledge by the people at large would be a bad thing, that it would unsettle their minds and conjure up ideas subversive of law and order in the commonwealth. Things are viewed differently now. Libraries are here to stay, and as our educational system broadens out they will become more and more marked factors in helping men to distinguish the good from the bad, the false from the true.

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy has no equal. Easily and cheaply prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It is very easily prepared, and really there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a 16-oz. bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth); then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make 16 ounces. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, this mixture saves about four-fifths of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

The Transportation of Troops

BY LIEUT. K. N. COLVILLE

The Strategist of the Breakfast Table for the most part scorns Tactics. Strategy, and the Higher Strategy which handles no divisions or corps, but whole armies, is his passion.

Just lately he has been having a glorious time of it. He has been snatching up armies, American, British, French, Italian, Czecho-Slovak, Japanese, or what not, and hurling them now against Vladivostok, now against the Aisne, now leading them on the Lurman coast and Anon landing them at Ostend and turning the whole German line. And he has always been ready at a moment's notice to divert them against the Trentino or the Salonika front.

It would be a salutary thing for the Strategist of the Breakfast Table if he would spend a few minutes in reading some of the official figures regarding troop transport, such as are to be found in the Field Service Pocket Book of the British army or the little pamphlet issued to the press some time ago by the War office.

He would learn from these sources that the maximum normal capacity of any double line of railway is reckoned, in England, at 6 trains per hour each way; that a good complement for a two-engined train is 144 wheels (at 6 or 8 to the coach and 4 to the truck); and that eight men, (with their equipment) go to a compartment and five compartments to a coach, and eight horses or one four-wheeled vehicle to a truck. From this he can deduce that a train might carry, say, four hundred men, sixteen horses and two wagons. He can then further deduce the painful truth that only some 1,200 men an hour can pass any given point in the same direction, without allowing at all for accidents or delays in getting men in and out and turning the trains round; and it must be remembered that time lost in this sort of job can never be regained.

The same lesson is taught by the Field Service Pocket book, which lays down 75 trains as the requisite for a cavalry division. This would take therefore 12½ hours to pass any given point, and the strength of a cavalry division being only some 9,000 men, the Strategist of the Breakfact Table can see that moving an army corps is going to take a considerable time.

"Ah" says the brilliant S. B. T. "but we don't need cavalry, and of course its the 9,000 odd-horses that take up all the room. I'd only send infantry."

Which is another point wherein the S. B. T. errs. 9,000 infantry do not need 9,000 odd horses perhaps; but 9,000 infantry represent half a division and the number of horses to a division, according to the authority already quoted, is not far short of 6,000; or 2,500 to the aforesaid 9,000. And today, as every S. B. T. knows, artillery is needed in even greater quantity than our pre-war establishment, and big guns take a lot of moving.

Indeed, it is one of the S. B. T.'s chief defects that he consistently forgets to count, anything except bayonets and guns. As a matter of fact the 18,000 men of a division include not much more than 12,000 swords, sabres and bayonets (reckoning all the employed men and the brigade and regimental headquarters) and only 1,000 or so of the remainder are gunners in the sense of being men who actually handle guns. The remainder are drivers of ammuniton or transport vehicles, signallers, engineers, R. A. M. C. men and so on. Of the large numbers of these soldiers who figure on the strength of the corps and not on the division (the whole of the Siege artillery with its cumbersome transport for example) he usually knows nothing.

But the movement of the trains once they are started is not the only thing to be considered. The time taken to entrain and disentrain the troops will, except in very favourable circumstances, be the regulating factor. At the ordinary wayside station, we are told, it is not safe to allow less than two hours for getting a train load entrained. Where several platforms can be used simultaneously the time can of course be proportionately reduced till the 6 trains per hour limit is reached; beyond which it is no use going, unless you have an alternative line.

There remains for consideration (and the S. B. T. can do a little researching for himself in this matter) the question of transport by road. Here the points to ascertain are the length of the columns, the strength of the bridges, how long the roads will last before getting foundrous, and of course, unless everything is to go on its own feet or wheels, the amount of transport required. When he has finished with that he can go to consider the problems of Transport by Sea. "But that is another story."

Minstrels End a Successful Tour

Have Covered This District Since First Performance in Peterboro

The Nationality Minstrels made a fitting closing to a series of entertainments when they apeared at Lakefield Town Hall on Wednesday evening, October 16th. Those who had the good fortune to be present at the previous entertainments agree that the final one at Lakefield was possibly the best of the season. While the audience, on account of the influenza scare, was not as large as would otherwise have been expected, it was most appreciative. The gratifying sum of $63.25, net, was realized, which amount will be turned over to the Treasurer of the K. of C. Army Hut Fund.

After the performance, the members of the cast were most hospitably entertained by Rev. Father Meagher, who had prepared a most pleasant surprise in the form of a sumptuous banquet at the Lawless House. Among those present were Reeve Moore and Controller Braden of Lakefield; Rev. Father McAuley, Enismore; Rev. Father McGuire and Rev. Father Guiry of Peterborough. Rev. Father Meagher, with his customary congeniality made an excellent Chairman. Short speeches were delivered by Reeve Moore, Councillor Braden, Rev. Father McGuire, and Messrs. Casey, Hunter and Judge.

Reeve Moore expressed his pleasure at being present, at the high standard of the performance given by the Minstrels and of the good feeling that existed in Lakefield among all classes.

Mr. Wm. Casey, manager of the Nationality Minstrels, took occasion to thank the members of the cast for their co-operation and assistance in conducting the several entertainments during the season.

A most pleasant evening came to a close in tendering to Rev. Father Meagher a hearty vote of thanks, and the singing of the National Anthem.

Admiral Keyes Reached Ostend in Whaling Boat

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The Admiralty has issued the following statement, forwarded by Vice-Admiral Keyes, regarding yesterday's naval operations at Ostend.

"Admiral Keyes reports that on the morning of Thursday the military situation between Nieuport and Ostend was obscure. It seemed uncertain whether the enemy had withdrawn from the coast. Up to then no fires had been started by him either in Middlekerke or Ostend. A division of destroyers reconnoitered the coast, assisted by aircraft. They arrived off Ostend at eleven o'clock, at which hour one of our aircraft landed on the beach, where large crowds of the inhabitants had assembled.

In a Whaler.

"I proceeded into the harbour in a whaler and landed about 11.30, meeting with a great reception. The enemy at the time was not clear of the town and a light battery at Le Coq opened fire at the ships. Two shells, falling on the beach close to a crowd, excited the inhabitants.

"A heavy battery of four guns in the direction of Zeebrugge opened fire on the destroyers, and it seemed possible the presence of the naval force might lead to the bombardment of Ostend or to more shells falling in the town, where they would endanger the lives of civilians. I decided to withdraw the naval force and thus give the enemy no excuse for firing towards the town.

Destroyers Withdrew.

"I therefore re-embarked, and the destroyers withdrew, being heavily shelled, to just east of Middlekerke. Four motor launches were left at Ostend as an inshore patrol, the inhabitants being nervous of the Germans returning.

"The King and Queen of the Belgians expressed the wish to visit Ostend, either from the sea or the air. In view of the difficulty of landing and the uncertainly of the situation they proceeded in the destroyer Termagant, flying the Belgian flag at the main, to the vicinity of Ostend.

"The senior officer of the British motor launch patrol off Ostend, which had been reinforced by French motor launches, reported that all had been quiet for some hours.

GUARD THE CHILDREN FROM AUTUMN COLDS

The Fall weather is the most severe season of the year for colds—one day is warm, the next is wet and cold and unless the mother is on her guard the little ones are seized with colds that may hang on all winter. Baby's Own Tablets are mother's best friend in preventing or banishing colds. They act as a gentle laxative, keeping the bowels and stomach free and sweet. An occasional dose will prevent cold or if it does come on suddenly, the prompt use of the Tablets will quickly cure it. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers, or by mail at 25 cents a box, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.

JACK MARSHALL LOSES TWELVE-YEAR-OLD SON

Montreal, Oct. 18—Robert C. Marshall, the 12-year-old son of Jack Marshall, the veteran hockey player and coach, died at his father's home, 27 Prospect street, of pneumonia. "Bobby" Marshall, as he was known among his schoolmates, was a promising junior athlete. He participated in the games at Queen's School and was the centre scrimmage of the rugby team.

SHALL WE SPARE THE ROD?

By LIEUT. K. N. COLVILLE.

The Germans, without a doubt have, as the saying is, overstayed their market. It is possible that they would not easily have found buyers for their stock even last spring; but had they been wise, they would at least have offered to sell then on reasonable terms. To-day it looks as though the bottom might fall out of their market. Fluctuations in price there may yet be, but never again will the shares in the Hohenzollern-Hapsburg combine stand as high as they did even so late as midsummer.

It is true we heard a good deal about the German peace-offensive, but it was a far worse fiasco than its military counterpart. It suffered of course, by reason of the comparative success of Ludendorff's campaign, which caused the German autocrats to let him have a main hand in the political pie, whereas, however capable he may be as a butcher, he has none of the qualities of a good cook Kuhlmann, who is at least a scoundrel of some talent, was thrown over, and the peace-offensive, conducted mainly through the columns of the Jingo press, such a the Kreuzzeitung, was more suggestive of Birnam wood coming to Dusinane a mere camouflaged method of warfare, than of the approach of bearers of the olive-branch. The terms suggested, though of course always unofficial, so that they could be raised if the Western powers showed signs of weakening, were at their lowest preposterous, at their highest almost blasphemous,— since they amounted to little less than the recognition of the Kaiser as God Almighty of the Prussians as His hierarchy of angels, and of the lesser German tribes as His chosen people.

Of all this we may feel certain we have heard the last. To-day the German strength is waning just about as rapidly as the Western Powers is waxing, to back Hindenburg, or Ludendorff, or Mackensen, or any other general whatever would be like backing a bridge player who held no trumps and no court cards. The autocrats of Germany are more likely to begin to see if they cannot save something for themselves out of the wreck in which they have involved their people, and the jackals of the alliance, Bulgaria and Turkey, will begin to slink away hoping to be left in possession of the scraps they have managed to hoard away in their lairs.

The question at once suggests itself, "What advantage are Germany's enemies to take of the situation?" and the pacifists will presently lift up their voices and say, "Germany has overstayed her market, you say. Very true. See to it that you do not do the same. Make peace now while you can and do not drive your enemy to desperation. We want no excuse for a German gospel of "la revanche."

But the policy of the Western allies is not really in any way brought into question. It has always been plain—the frustration and future prevention of Germany's ambitious plans. Our terms have never essentially changed, though the entry or disappearance of combatants has necessarily modified their form. Germany must so far as is humanly possible, make good the wicked damage she has done. Further she must give adequate security that she will hereafter keep the peace, and something must be done to serve as an unmistakable symbol of the retribution that sooner or later must, if the world is to be a safe place not only for democracy but for civilized men, befall the disturber of the public peace. The Allied terms are not like Germany's, a matter of bargaining high to-day because our star is in the ascendant, low perhaps tomorrow if fortune frowns. Our terms have been stated by representatives of all the great powers, most fully, perhaps, by President Wilson. Germany must signifty that she is ready to make peace in accordance with those principles and, since her original infraction of Belgium's neutrality, her conduct of the war and her perversion of the terms of Brest-Litovsk have made it impossible for any sane person to accept her bare word, she must give substantial earnest of her good faith before negotiations can begin.

Prevent the "Flu"

by wearing

Dr. Chase's Menthol Bag

SINCE 1510 influenza has periodically swept over the known world. The last big epidemic in this country was in 1889, when almost every person in every home was brought down.

But the present form, known as Spanish "Flu" because it started in Spain, seems to be a most fatal variety on account of the quickness with which it develops into bronchial-pneumonia.

Hence the wisdom of preventing infection by every means possible, and our suggestion is to "Wear a Menthol Bag."

We have arranged for the manufacture of thousands of these Menthol Bags, and while they last shall give them away to the first persons who send in the coupon printed below.

These bags are pinned on the chest outside of the underwear, and the heat from the body causes the menthol fumes to rise and mingle with the air you breathe, thereby killing the germs and protecting you against Spanish influenza and all infectious diseases.

It was always the aim of Dr. Chase to serve his fellow-man by the prevention of disease whenever possible, so that this gift is in line with the policy which he established.

In his large Receipt Book Dr. Chase devoted five pages to the treatment of influenza, and of his medicines on the market Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and Dr. Chase's Nerve Food are used to splendid advantage in fighting this malady.

The Linseed and Turpentine should be used freely just as soon as there is any tendency for the throat and bronchial tubes to be affected.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is used to strengthen the action of the heart and aid in the restorative process.

The great secret of keeping healthy as well as of regaining strength after illness is by keeping the blood pure, rich and red.

Red blood is the greatest of germicides, for no disease can make any great headway so long as the blood is in condition to restore the wasted tissues.

In Dr. Chase's Nerve Food are found the vital substances which go to the formation of new, rich blood. It fortifies the system against attack and hastens recovery. You can buy half a dozen boxes from your druggist for $2.75, but be sure to see the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., on the box you buy.

But in the meantime send for a "Menthol Bag" and do all you can to protect yourself against the Spanish "Flu."

Sunday a Day of Special Prayers Ministers Advise

The clergy of Peterboro are generally united in favor of the decision of the Council and M.O.H. to close the city churches on Sunday. Called upon today they were unanimous in their endorsation of any such drastic action if it would in any way check the epidemic of enfluenza. One clergyman said that while he personally didn't believe such steps were necessary as the precaution will be of little value, he is still willing to forgo his personal opinion and abide by the authorities' decision. Another of the clergy stated that if the movies are to be closed, he is willing for the churches to be likewise.

Every Day A Day of Prayer.

"This is a time," Revd. Robert Pogue said "when the days should be spent in prayer whether in church or in the home and I leave it to my people to take what action they feel necessary." He said in reference to the closing of churches that the public must already have their hands full nursing their own sick as few homes have not been visited by illness of one kind or other.

Revd. W. H. White, rector of St. Luke's church said that while he had not heard in time of the order to consider a course of his parishoners to take during the churchless Sunday, he would strongly advise family service in the homes.

Revd. Benj. Greatix, pastor of St. James Methodist church, considers the Board's steps splendid. He would strongly advise family prayers and service in all his parishoners' homes.

Why Not Insure The Payment of Your Premium?

Suppose you are thirty-five years old, and carrying $10,000 of Life Insurance costing you, say $300.00 per year, would you not like, (in case of serious accident or illness destroying your earning power) to have the payment of this premium paid for you as long as you live?

Then Read The Following:

The Sun Life of Canada will give you a further insurance of $5,000.00 if you are still insurable, and if you become totally and permanently disabled from any cause, the Company will not only relieve you of all future premiums on THIS policy during such disability, but they will guarantee to hand you a $500.00 cheque every year, which you see will pay the premiums on your $10,000.00 and in addition will give you a handsome CASH XMAS BOX each year and, nevertheless, will pay the face of your policy at maturity or death.

WILSON ANSWERS AUSTRIAN PEOPLE MUST DECIDE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—President Wilson has anawered the peace note of Austria-Hungary, with the declaration that the Austro-Hungarian government must satisfy the national aspirations of its own people and that the people shall be judges of their rights and destinies. The note calls attention to the recognition by the United States of the Czecho-Slovaks National Council as a de facto belligerent government, and states that this country has also recognized the justice of nationalistic aspirations of the Jugo-Slavs for freedom.

BUT WHAT ELSE WOULD ONE EXPECT OF YANKS?

(By United Press)

London, Oct. 3 (By Mail.)—For good behavior American soldiers are walking off with the palm.

The Londoner is favorably impressed with the quiet gentlemanly conduct and soldierly bearing of the Yankees. Although vast numbers of American soldiers are met in London streets every day, not a single case of drunkenness among them has been brought to public notice.

Voluntary women workers at the Eagle hut are unanimous in their praise of Americans, who they say, are always courteous and never inclined to "freshness,"—though, of course, the Yank is quite an adept at a well-turned compliment, and does not try to hide his appreciation of what English women are doing.

PLAN HOLDING FIRM FOR SOLDIERS' STORES

(By United Press)

London, Oct. 3. (By Mail)—A big municipal holding and operating company may prove the solution of that big little economic problem, the one-man business. Hundreds of men who own and operate little stores, dry goods and notion stores news stands, fruit stands—have been called up for service in the army. Some few have been able to sell at a good price, and others have left the camp in charge of their wives. But a great many have had to put up their shutters and let the dust gather until the end of the war or sell out at a loss.

Taken separately, one of these stores amounts to nothing in the whole huge scheme of British business. But as a section of the entire trade they are extremely important, and the hardship of their closing has affected a considerable number of industrious people.

Hammersmith borough, London probably will be the first borough to try out the idea of the holding company. Under the plan substitute labor will be provided, and the concerns will be operated by the company for the smallest possible cost to the owner. After the expense of the operation has been defrayed the owner or his dependents will receive whatever profits are realized.

WINDSOR, Oct. 18.—Two deaths and 85 new cases of Spanish influenza were reported to the Windsor Board of Health during the last 24 hours.

HAMILTON

MILITARY POLICE BUSY TO-DAY

The Military Police were busy on the market this morning, inspecting exemption credentials of young men who would seem to be eligible for the army. Up to 11 o'colck ten young men had been brought to the inspector at the police station. Most of them carried registration certificates, but had no other papers to show their age or why they should not be in khaki.

"I left them at home in my Sunday clothes," was the most common plea.

Men without the necessary papers are liable to be sent to Kingston and put in khaki until the papers can be produced. In Toronto Magistrate Denison has fined hundreds of young men $50 for their carelessness and indifference.

Out of consideration for the young men, Sergt. Wand has allowed the offenders to telephone for their papers.

Quite an impressive row adorned the couch of the locker room at the police station waiting for their papers which in some cases have to come as far as from Ida and Douro.

The call for nurses cannot be met, although teachers and patriotic women workers have been called upon.

Lone Canadian Rushes a Nest of Enemy Guns

(By J. F. B. Livesay—Canadian Press Correspondent).

WITH THE CANADIAN FORCES, Oct. 17. — Better than any general description are the bare records of individual acts of gallantry for bringing home to the reader the true pictures of conditions under which the Canadian Corps have waged war since September 27 in this terrible battle of Cambrai.

Alberta battalions, while attacking the Morcoing line on September 28, ran up against heavy uncut wire and numerous machine guns. A private discovered one of these which was inflicting heavy casualties. In the face of point blank machine gun and rifle fire he attacked voluntarily, sniping as he went, and then rushed this formidable nest, capturing the gun and twenty men.

Silenced Enemy Guns.

In a night attack by a Quebec regiment on the Marcoing line a lieutenant who had won his Military Medal in the ranks, found his platoon held up by machine gun fire from a railway embankment which lay in front of his objective. Realizing that unless silenced the entire advance must be held up, he called for two volunteers and attacked. Under continually heavy fire and blinded by flares the enemy was throwing up the little party crawled the entire distance. Waiting his chance he ordered bombs to be thrown and rushed the position, killing two of the crew and capturing the third, the remainder falling victims to bombs. Owing to the heat caused by their intense fire he was unable to remove the machine guns, but after putting them out of action, he sent back word that the advance might be resumed.

Remarkable Feat.

While leading his platoon against Bourlon Wood a lieutenant of a British Columbia battalion found himself held up by machine gun fire from a sunken road. He took his men round the enemy's flank and captured the stronghold, killing the crew and capturing one officer and ten other ranks, with one field gun and four machine guns. Later on, having passed through our front wave, his party was checked by a strong enemy post south of Bourlon Wood. Many of his own company by this time were casualties. So, gathering together a detail from another company, he led them in. He rushed the post at once, killing the officer and capturing forty-nine prisoners with machine guns. Pushing on to their final objective the party captured two officers and forty-five other ranks. His right flank being in the air he took up a defensive position, forming a flank for the adjoining troops.

In the attack on Bourlon Wood on September 27, a lieutenant of a Manitoba battalion, finding his company commander and all other company officers casualties, took command of the shattered company and skilfully reorganized it under heavy shell-fire, and machine gun fire. He then attacked and carried his objective.

Holding the Military Medal, being promoted from the ranks, the lieutenant of a New Brunswick battalion personally led an attack in front of Inchy on September 27. The next day near Baillencourt, notwithstanding heavy casualties, he again led the battalion into action, storming his objective. Towards evening the enemy launched very heavy counter-attacks on brigade front. The brunt of it fell on this battalion, which was formerly a Manitoba unit, and owing to severe casualties, the line was temporarily pushed back. After making a personal reconnaissance the lieutenant organized all the elements of the battalion and in co-operation with other units of the brigade, counter-attacked, and drove the enemy out, re-establishing the line and recovering our wounded lying in front. His gallant personal example inspired the men and contributed largely to the indomitable spirit they evidenced under trying circumstances being cheered by his contempt of danger, his initiative, and fine leadership.

Baker is "Great Chap" English Writer Says

(By United Press)

London, Oct. 2 (By Mail.)—A little story about an Alsatian girl in a pair of new shoes among the ruins of St. Mihiel won for Sec. N. D. Baker a place in the hearts of the English newspaper men who interviewed him in London to-day.

The young woman in her Sunday best, was wandering among the ruins. She had on a pair of brand new shoes, exquisite creations that would have been fine even in pre-war days. And this after four years of German occupation.

Baker stopped to question her.

"Oh, I bought them before the war," she replied. "I hid them in a cellar when the Germans came. I wanted to have them ready for the day of emancipation I knew it would come some time. But it seemed a long time coming, sometimes.

"That secretary of yours is a great chap," an English journalist remarked after the interview. "He's so jolly human and unaffected. That was a tophole story about that girl with the new shoes, wasn't it now? Fancy a secretary of war noticing little things like that. I like that kind of man."

MR. FARMER
Which Field Pays Best?

UNPRODUCTIVE FARM PRODUCTIVE

Land Clearing Made Easy with C.X.L. Stumping Powder

The above pictures represent the same field before and after using C.X.L. Stumping Powder

With the increased demand for Agricultural Products, caused by the War, which is now devastating the European Countries, Mr. Farmer, can you afford to have unproductive land? Every acre of tillable land will be required to offset the great falling off in agricultural products, and it is up to you, Mr. Farmer, to take advantage of this situation.

C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER will enable you to clear your land quicker and cheaper than by any other method and place you in an immediate position to reap a revenue from land which has heretofore been unproductive.

C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER is an explosive manufactured expressly for the farming trade; it is less dangerous to handle than Dynamite and more effective for agricultural purposes. It has been rightly termed by thousands of satisfied users as "The Farmer's Friend".

To-day time on the farm means money just as it does elsewhere. Therefore, why spend hours digging and pulling at stumps and boulders when a few sticks of C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER will do the trick in a few minutes. The progressive farmer no longer plows and reaps around stumps and boulders; the money spent in repairs on machinery and harness will offset the cost of clearing that field which has meant so much hard work to get under crop and harvest. This is your opportunity now when the markets of the world are pleading with you to produce more.

How about that field that is not producing the crops you expect from it? Have you ever stopped to think that you have been turning over the same depth of soil year after year, coaxing the land with fertilizers, to half a crop? What about the valuable plant food contained underneath the plow line? Try a few pounds of C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER on that field, bore holes to a depth of 2½ to 3 feet, at intervals of from 10 to 20 feet apart, and explode half of a cartridge of C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER in each, thus loosening up that fertile subsoil and giving your seed a chance to get below the worn out top soil to benefit from the valuable volume of plant food stored there.

The leading Agricultural Colleges of the world are now advocating subsoiling with Dynamite. Experiment on an acre this year and note results.

Tree Planting with Dynamite has long since passed the experimental stage. Leading orchadists of Canada to-day are planting fruit trees in holes exploded with C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER instead of in spade dug holes. The subsoil is loosened up and enables the roots of the trees to immediately expand in search of nourishment and not remain cramped up in a limited space.

Dig your ditches with C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER and do in one day the work it would otherwise take you a week to accomplish with pick and shovel.

Now, Mr. Farmer, the above are all common sense facts, and can you afford to continue cultivating land strewn with stumps and boulders, getting only half a crop and spending a portion of your profits on repairs and renewal of equipment, or letting valuable land under stumps and boulders lie idle? Figure this out for yourself and see if you are getting the revenue you are entitled to. Send us a trial order for a 50 lb. Box of C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER and judge for yourself the benefits you will derive from this, the greatest of Labor saving agents for the Farmer to-day.

C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER will enable you to clear your land of Stumps and Boulders,—Subsoil worn out land,—Plant Trees,—Dig Ditches,—Make and Improve Roads,—Rejuvenate Orchards,—Dig Post Holes,—Break up hardpan, etc., etc., cheaper, quicker, and better than by any other method. A trial will quickly convince you in this respect.

FROWNS ON SMOKING IN PUBLIC PLACES

Methodist Conference Passes Resolution Favouring a Legislative Ban.

HAMILTON, Oct. 17.— The feature of to-day's session of the Methodist conference was the passing of a resolution that the Federal Government be requested to pass legislation making smoking in public places unlawful. This paragraph caused more discussion, some of which was of a decidedly warm character, than all of the other resolutions made during the morning, despite the fact that many of these were of a most important character.

Numerous speakers expressed their views on the subject, one prominent brother stigmatizing it as "petty legislation." Rev. Dr. Rose, Ottawa, came out boldly on the question, stating emphatically that it was futile to ask for legislation that would probably not be granted; and which, even if put in force, would not be enforced.

Rev. J. D. Fitzpatrick, Hamilton, characterized smoking as a selfish habit, the worst feature of which was its interference with the rights of others.

Cyrus Birge, Hamilton, declared that he had been a smoker since the age of sixteen and hoped the conference would not make itself ridiculous by passing the item.

"We talk a lot of what we are going to do for the returned men," said Rev. Dr. Sanford, New Westminster, "and we must not be too pernickety in our judgments. If you do this thing, what about the boys when they return? You can't stop two-thirds of the men of the country smoking, and we must not put ourselves in an indefensible position."

The lengthy and heated discussion resulted in an amendment scoring the discourtesy of public smoking being voted down, and the original recommendation sustained by a standing vote of 67 to 55.

So much of a furore did this action cause that the meeting almost broke up in disorder, groups of the brethren gathering about the church and the corridors at the close and strenuously expressing their views pro and con. Numerous leading delegates, such as Rev. Dr. Bland, from the West; Rev. Dr. Endicott, Toronto, and Rev. Ernest Thomas, Vancouver, voiced strong disapproval of the action, and it is not unlikely that the matter will be re-opened, as here is a feeling of dissatisfaction over the "pettiness" felt to have been shown.

An allowance of $2,000 was made to Rev. Dr. Briggs, the retiring book steward.

The soliciting of funds for a training school for deaconesses was authorized.

The enactment by Parliament of legislation against profiteering was urged.

Favour Nationalization.

Nationalization of natural resources and public utilities was advocated.

The conference went on record that there was no necessity for the importation of intoxicating wine for sacramental purposes.

THE JOYS OF LIFE

You are wastisg your time, Miss Saleswoman. Mrs. Joy is not getting a single new thing this season because she believes it to be unpatriotic to waste money in finery when every spare cent is needed to carry on the war. As late as yesterday, Miss Sadeswoman, she told her associates in the Ladies' War Relief Society that folks who didn't want to see her in her old duds this winter just needn't invite her to their homes.

No doubt, Miss Saleswoman, you are correct in stating that it will be an economy to purchase the fur coat as it will cost twice as much next season, but although her sealskin is shabby and she does need a moleskin badly, she wouldn't think of expending so much money for comfort during these trying times. It was different with the pussy willow satin evening gown you just sold her, because she simply hasn't a decent rag to her back. Heaven knows she must keep up some kind of an appearance and everybody has seen the turquise blue tafetta she got away back in April, as well as the old crepe de Chine French bodel that she purchased during the month before. And it is the same with the Burgundy cloth suit that she has just ordered; she would have had to have that anyway; and she hopes nobody will have the heartlessness to criticise for selecting a hat to go with it when they realize that she hasn't another one to her name. Of course there is that old velvet thing that she paid $45 for in February and which she wears for shopping and going about doing her war work, but she has to have something to wear to church. She will also have to have some sort of a cheap house dress that she can slip on afternoons when she has callers, but her evening wrap will have to do just as it is. She is having it relined with satin and new fur put on it, and people who are tired of seeing it will just have to look the other way.

But, after all, Miss Saleswoman, your argument in favor of economy is having great weight with her, and perhaps it is her duty to have the coat sent up. Same address, Miss Saleswoman, and she has an account.

Mrs. Joy, this season is not getting a new thing.

In cakes and puddings one does not have to use so much sugar if raisins are used.

STORY OF A BLACK WATCH PRIVATE

By Lieut. R. S. M. Sturges.
Issued by the British War Office

Early in April of this year a private of the Black Watch was admitted to a Liverpool hospital suffering from severe burns on arms, hands and thighs. He said he had received these burns during the fighting which took place in the neighborhood of Arras on March 28, and of the manner in which he had received them he had a remarkable and ghastly story to tell. So remarkable and so ghastly was his story that a military court of inquiry was held, and he was required to repeat his story on oath before the court.

The man is a young Scotchman of 19. He is intelligent and educated. A cross-examination showed that so far from exaggerating the facts, he had been prone rather to understate them. He began his story by narrating the events leading up to the German attack near Arras on the early morning of March 28. After a violent bombardment, the Germans attacked at dawn in mass, and forced back his battalion by sheer weight of numbers. He himself, in company with about thirty other men and an officer, was cut off, surrounded and compelled to surrender. He himself was unhurt, but the officer and most of the men were wounded. From this point I will give the story in his own words, exactly as he told it on oath before the court:

"* * * Almost immediately the Germans were on top of us, having worked up the trench behind us, and some also came over the top; I should say about fifty or sixty came all together. There appeared to be a German officer or warrant officer there.

"We were deprived of our arms and marched down about 200 or 300 yards to what appeared to be the end of a trench, which had been widened out to a width of about nine feet; the depth of this inclosure appeared to be about six feet and the length about nine to twelve feet. The sides were both perpendicular, and any one wishing to climb out that way would have to pull himself over. The end of the inclosure appeared to have been smashed up and was not perpendicular but sloping.

"The officer who was taken prisoner was with us in this inclosure. We were quite tightly packed up together in the inclosure. I happened to be one of the first to go in, and, accordingly, was one of the furthest from the entrance. All the Germans I saw were wearing great coats with full equipment and "tin" helmets.

"After about fifteen minutes the men who had remained on guard seemed to disappear, and almost at the same time two men appeared in the trench at the entrance to the enclosure. One of the two Germans had no equipment or rifle, and he was carrying a revolver and appeared to be an officer. The other German was also not wearing equipment, but had strapped to his back a cylinder with a flexible tube over his shoulder, the end of which he was holding in his hand.

CAUGHT THE MEN

"Just as he reached the entrance a flame spurted out in a stream from the pipe and caught the men who were nearest to the entrance. When I saw the flame I immediately dropped down as far as I could and got my face on the ground. The other men were lying in heaps around and partly on me. I heard the hissing sound for a short while, and it then stopped and started again.

"During this time the men were shrieking and writhing about. I should say that the flame was playng for about half a minute the first time, and the second time it reached right to the back where I was, and the back of my overcoat and tunic caught fire. By this time all the men were on the ground. I struggled to get my overcoat and tunic off, and in doing so it struck me that I might be able to get away by going up the sloping end of the inclosure. I got my overcoat and tunic off, and then bolted up the slope and got round behind where the two Germans were. When I was passing behind the German officer he shot at me from the trench with his revolver at about twenty yards, but missed. At that time I was unarmed and without my tunic. * * * I was badly burned in the back, on both hands, in my left knee, and the back of my hair was singed." * * *

There follows an account of his struggle back to his battalion, of his treatment at the dressing station in Arras, and of his journey to England. Of the fate of the other man and the wounded officer he knew nothing.

Such is the evidence of this young Scotsman, given in plain unembroidered language in the unimpassioned atmosphere of a British military court. It carries conviction by its very simplicity. One would like, however to disbelieve the whole story and to waive it aside as some horrible nightmare of a disordered brain, but unfortunately there is corroborative evidence which is overwhelming.

Three other men in three other hospitals—in London, Dundee, and Birmingham—likewise suffering from severe burns, have, unknown to each other, made similar statements describing precisely similar experiences in the same locality on the same date. But the instances are different. In one case the prisoners were herded together in a dugout, in another in the open trench. Each of these men managed to escape with his life to tell the tale.

In the face of this evidence, derived from four distinct sources, we are compelled to face the fact that on March 28 during the attack on Arras, the Germans deliberately and system atically rid themselves of their British prisoners of war by burning them alive with liquid.

Shifts in Cabinet Coming, According to Ottawa Gossip

Hon. Mr. Cochrane for State and Mines Portfolio, is One Rumor

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.—Here is an interesting rumor in political circles that Hon. Frank Cochrane, who is much improved in health, will be made Secretary of State and Minister of Mines, when the Cabinet is reorganized. Hon. Martin Burrell, it is stated, will go to the Senate. Hon. T. W. Crothers will also retire, according to the rumor, and will be succeeded by Mr. R. F. Green, member for Kootenay.

The Department of Mines would be a suitable one to be assigned Mr. Cochrane, as he represents the great mining country of Northern Ontario and has always taken a deep interest in mining problems.

Mr. Green if this plan went through, would succeed Mr. Burrell as British Columbia's representative in the Cabinet. Mr. Green is acceptable as Labor Minister to the western labor interests. On a number of occasions he has represented the Government in negotiations with the western miners, and has always shown great diplomacy and tact. The present arrangement by which the western mines are operated by a director who fixes price of coal at the mine and wages was arrived at through Mr. Green's influence.

This arrangement would reduce the number of Cabinet Ministers to twenty, making outside the Prime Minister eight Liberals, ten Conservatives and one Labor. With Hon. Hugh Guthrie Solicitor-General, given Cabinet rank as suggested, the Liberals would have nine representatives. There is also talk of another Labor man although no names are mentioned.

The whole question of Cabinet reconstruction is in the hands of the Prime Minister, so any gossip at present can only be regarded as rumor.

DOCKET FOR FALL ASSIZES THAT OPEN HERE ON TUESDAY

Hon. Mr. Justice Latchford will preside at the fall assizes which open here on Tuesday at 1 p.m. There are no civil jury cases. The non-jury civil list is as follows:

The plaintiff, William James Outram, asks for the establishment of the will of Alfred John Gaddye made in Peterborough on Jan. 17, 1917, by which he was to receive all the real and personal property of the deceased, who died here on Aug. 17th, 1917. Peck, Kerr & McElderry for the plaintiff and Gordon, Widdifield & O'Brien for defendants.

The defendant, Ethel May Guerin, in her defence says that she is the only granddaughter and is one of the next of kin to Alfred John Gaddye. She does not admit that the will referred to was the last testament of A. J. Gaddye.

Hatton Vs. the County of Peterborough.

Crown Attorney Hatton claims that the county refused to provide him with proper accommodation, which he now asks from the court, plus $1,200. D. O'Connell for the plaintiff, Peck, Kerr & McElderry for defendants.

Meharry Vs. Auburn Woollen Co.

William John Meharry alleges that under an agreement made on Sept. 3, 1915, the defendants agreed to sell to him and he agreed to purchase certain gravel lands in the city. He says that he made two payments of $200 and $500 to the company and tendered a balance of $4,452.50 on Sept. 24, 1917. The plaintiff asks that the agreement be specifically performed and that he be paid $2,800 for 11,200 cu. yds. of gravel removed by defendants, or that he be paid $700 with interest and damages for breach of contract.

Chas. Dawson vs. Quinlan and Robertson Ltd.

Chas. Industry Crippled in America by the Epidemic of "Flu"

"Canadian Machinery" this week says:

Manufacturing interests in Canada and the United States are being hard hit in many cases with Spanish influenza.

It is reported that plants in the Chester and Eddystone district, Philadelphia, including the Baldwin Locomotive Works, are short 50 per cent. of their workmen. One plate mill's production dropped to one-third last week; it had been operating at over 95 per cent. Some others show a reduction of 25 per cent. in workmen. The Hog Island ship plant is short about 10 to 15 per cent. of workmen. It is reported that Worth Bros. Co., at Clayton, Dela., will close down temporarily. There are said to be 200,000 cases of influenza in Philadelphia, and strict measures are being taken to fight the epidemic. Office forces are badly depleted and much work is being held up. Plate mills are also watching their pig-iron and coal supplies closely. The mills buying these materials are using them from hand to mouth and are unable to accumulate stocks for the winter.

Industrial centres in Canada report much the same condition of affairs.

There has been considerable activity in the buying of machinery last week. In the East some large orders were placed in the Philadelphia market, but New York and New England trade was relatively quiet. The United States Government dominated the trade in all sections, the Ordnance Bureau of War Department placing orders for tools for arsenals and also buying for manufacture, with whom it has placed contracts for guns, shells and aircraft. Large contracts are still pending for equipment for gun shops at home and abroad.

Recent activity throughout the industry is reflected in an advance of prices for some lines of tools.

The War Department has approved appropriations calling for the expenditure of several million dollars for additions to arsenals and for several other plants that are executing gun and ammunition contracts.

The scrap market during the past week has been devoid of any changes of interest. Only a fair amount of business is coming in. The orders are smaller than usual, and apparently users in many cases are not inclined to stock up. American points have been reporting a very serious shortage in all grades of scrap, but within the last few days it has come to notice that some of the dealers there are actually in the market with very attractive tonnages of sorted material for sale. Canadian dealers have been contending all along that access to the U. S. market would be a good thing for them, but the embargo has prevented this. It would seem now that selling in the home market, although more limited, is about their only chance.

Many Eating Less and Saving More

People Take Light Lunches—Feel Better—and Save Money.

Many people are eating less these days. Partly it is from necessity. One no longer has the same free hand as formerly with the bread, the butter and the sugar. These are doled out to him now in more or less minute quantities. But partly it is from deliberate choice. Many feel that, in these days when the need for thrift and self-denial of all kinds is so urgent, anything like feasting must be rigorously cut out. There are not a third of the dinner parties that there used to be in pre-war days. An astonishingly large number of club men, too, who formerly used to tackle a full course luncheon, will now have what is known as a "light lunch" consisting of a bit of fish and a cup of coffee or something of that kind. Many men who used invariably to lunch at a club will now be seen eating a much lighter and more modest repast at a "chair lunch."

In the Restaurants.

Apart from the frequenters of clubs, a whole lot of office men and others who frequent restaurants and other eating places are obviously endeavouring to make their luncheon and its concomitant bill both as light as possible. Enormous numbers of men of this type have forsaken the idea of a regular "sit-down" luncheon altogether and content themselves with a piece of pie and a cup of tea or some light refreshment of that sort. That is easy enough for the married man with a home who goes home to a proper dinner in the evening. But the case is rather different with the young fellow who rooms or boards. If he makes a light lunch it is more than likely that, with the prevalent ideas as to what ought to constitute a meal, he will not have the opportunity of making up much leeway at his evening meal.

A very large proportion of the men who still make a "sit-down" luncheon are observed to eat fish. Indeed, the extent to which fish, as an article of diet, has come into its own, is amazing. It occupies a prominent place on all restaurant menus and is in great demand. This is all to the good, as the more we substitute fish for meat the more of the latter is available for export.

Those who are conscientiously and patriotically endeavouring to accumulate money savings find that conservation of food may easily be made a means to conservation of money as well. They have a sense of double duty performed. For both money and food are vital to Victory.

NEW GERMAN LINE STARTS AT ANTWERP.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The military correspondent of the British wireless states that extensive preparations had been made for the evacuation of the Belgian coast. However, there is nothing in the situation on the Western front to indicate that the Germans are on he point of collapse.

The enemy probably intends to retreat to a line running through Antwerp, Brussels and Namur and thence along the right bank of the Meuse.

Germany will no doubt attempt to delay the Allied advance on the line of the Scheldt, which is of great natural strength, although no extensive prepared positions exist along it.

ISOLATES "FLU" GERM.

Queen's Lecturer has Inoculated Many with Good Results.

Kingston, Oct. 18. — Dr. G. B. Reed, assistant professor of botany and lecturer in bacteriology at Queen's University, believes he has isolated the Spanish influenza germ. He is growing the germs by millions, and has prepared a vaccine, with which he has already inoculated some two hundred persons with good results.

Russ Prisoners Used Like Dogs

By JOSEPH SHAPLEN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Oct. 19.—Despite the agreement between Germany and the Bolsheviki for an exchange of war prisoners, Germany is detaining most of the Russian captives for work in Germany, at the western front and in the Baltic provinces.

Russians who managed to make their way from the latter region to Petrograd declare that thousands of Russian soldiers have been sent to the Baltic provinces to work on the estates of the pro-German Baltic barons. They work under guard of armed German soldiers and under a discipline as rigid as that of the prison camp. The Germans do not hesitate to use clubs and the butts of their guns on the Russians.

The horses are better taken care of than the Russians. As a result, many of the Russians are suffering from tuberculosis and other diseases and are dying by hundreds. Natives of central and Siberian Russia are those chosen for work in the Baltic provinces. The Russians captured by the Germans in Esthonia and Livonia have been sent into the interior of Russia—the soldiers for field work and the red guardsmen for digging trenches.

No sooner did the Germans begin to feel themselves masters of the situation than they levied severe taxes upon the Russian population and the proletarian population in general. A separate passport tax also was levied. If a Russian civilian desires to leave for Russia he must pay as high as 150 roubles for a passport. Taxes have been levied on windows, window curtains, beds and pillows.

The population of the region is living in a state of terror. Instead of the promised autonomy it has been given the most outrageous form of despotism, petty and large. As a result, thousands sought to flee, especially from Livonia.

The big centres are depopulated. In Riga, for example there are no more than 100,000 of its population of 300,000 left.

WILD JOY IN LILLE

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The Mail correspondent on the British front, describing a visit to Lille, says: It was a physical struggle to advance and a sentimental struggle to wish to. All mothers wanted their babies kissed, and one was bombarded with embraces, handshakes, cheers and thanks. Imagine the better part of a hundred thousand people, mostly women, all crowded into one or two streets, all hysterical with joy and all intent on expressing the joy of liberation.

ALL THE CHURCHES CLOSED TO-MORROW

By formal resolution, "that we meet the request of the city health officers and that no service be held in any of our churches tomorrow", the Ministerial Association decided unanimously this morning to abide by the order of the M. O. H. There will be no public service in the Roman Catholic churches tomorrow.

OPPOSITION SLIGHT IN LILLE SALIENT

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The British are meeting with little opposition in the Lille salient and to the northward. In most places difficulty is found in keeping in contact with the enemy's main forces owing to the rapidity of his retreat. During the last fifteen days of their occupation of Lille, the Germans took away into captivity 15,000 inhabitants of the city.

Food Board Flashes

Food saving must go right on. We have not yet made up the deficit of Europe or built up our own reserves. Success lies in reserves—reserves of men, munitions, and food. Every day the war lasts means so much less productivity in Europe; and every soldier that goes over means that much more food to be sent.

There can be few general rules in this matter of food conservation, for different localities have differing problems, each of which must be met in its own way. Sometimes the problems change overnight, because of some newly entering factor.

So that the first word to the housewife is: "Stand ready to change the details of your programme whenever you are assured by the Food Board that a change is necessary."

As long, however, as the need for food conservation for fighting men across the sea lasts, there will be certain fundamental principles that we should never tire of considering, no matter what temporary superficial changes there may be, viz.: "Save wheat, meats, fats, and sugar" and "use perishables."

BLAME C.P.R. FOR DEFECTIVE BREAKS

HAVELOCK, Oct. 18.—The inquest held here on Wednesday on the death of Fireman Leng, of Havelock, who died as a result of scalds received in a wreck at Bonar Law last Saturday, resulted in a verdict blaming the C.P.R. The evidence went to show that the engineer didn't have control of the train on account of the defective air brakes in certain portions of the train.

KAISER PLAYS IT, TOO

(By United Press)

London, Oct. 1. (By Mail.)—In a town-bound train, a stalwart kilted sergeant had in custody a thin, lanky German prisoner of war.

The prisoner was a boy of some sixteen or seventeen years, and he seemed highly pleased with England. When not surveying the passing scenery, he cheered himself by playing on a mouth-organ. After trying on or two tunes he suddenly broke into "Love me and the world is mine."

"Stow that, young'un," growled the sergeant, "We don't love yer, and the world ain't yours. See?"

ROY STUDIO 140 1-2 HUNTER ST. PETERBOROUGH

THE RAISING OF CALVES

This subject could be very well divided into three parts, viz., (1) Breeding, (2) Feeding, and (3) Housing.

(1) Breeding.—In order to get the most profitable results for feed consumed and labour spent in raising calves it is necessary to see that the breeding of the calves is of the best, that their sires and dams are good individuals of the breed which you are working with, and that they have good records of performance behind them. This applies to beef breeds as well as dairy.

(2) Feeding.—As soon as the calf is dropped it should be separated from its dam and not given any food for twelve hours, when it will have developed a good appetite and be ready to take its first food which should consist of 5 pounds of its mother's milk. This should be duplicted in 12 hours which will make 10 pounds per day, which amount the calf should receive for the first two weeks. At the end of two weeks the calf should be getting 6 pounds twice a day, which should be continued for three weeks, at the end of five weeks commence feeding the calf a small quantity of skim milk, mixed with the whole milk, gradually increasing the skim-milk and decreasing the whole milk until at the end of the seventh week the calf would be getting 15 pounds skim-milk per day. This amount should be continued until the call is six months old. As soon as the calf is getting skim-milk alone, there should be added to the milk a small quantity, of equal parts of oil cake and ground oats with hulls taken out. This is a good cream substitute which partly takes the place of the butter fat which is lacking in the skim-milk An ounce of this mixture, at first, twice a day, is sufficient, but should be gradually increased as the calf develops. When the calf is six or seven weeks old, there should be placed before it some nice, sweet clover hay and equal parts of ground oats and bran which it will soon learn to eat. It should have as much of this feed as it will eat up readily twice a day. Always be careful that there is no feed left over in mangers and that all pails and boxes in which calves are fed are kept perfectly clean and sweet. They should be fed an accurate quantity at regular times which is very important in keeping the calf's digestive organs in the best condition possible, which is very essential for rapid and robust development.

(3) Housing.—All quarters in which calves are kept should be clean and they should given all the room possible so as to allow chance for exercise. They should always be well bedded with plenty of light and good ventilation, so that the calf will develop a good strong constitution in order to be a healthy acquisition, when grown, to the farm herd.

INFLUENZA WORSE THAN HUN BULLETS

Claiming More Victims Than Battle Fronts of Europe—Disease Can be Avoided.

According to carefully compiled statistics, it is an indisputable fact that the Spanish influenza epidemic which is now sweeping all parts of the country is daily claiming far more victims than German bullets on the battle fronts of Europe. Although civil and military authorities have succeeded in checking the disease in some localities, it is growing worse in others and continues to spread at an alarming rate. That the disease can be avoided there is no longer any doubt. According to leading authorities the powers of resistance of the human system can be so perfected that it can throw off almost any infection, not even excepting Spanish influenza, which is one of the most contagious diseases known.

It is persons who are suffering from lowered vitality, who are weak and run down and who have not the strength to throw it off who are the earliest victims. Persons who have bad colds, who are suffering from catarrhal troubles, or inflammation of the mucous membranes are especially susceptible, as the inflamed mucous membrane linings of the nose and throat are an open door to the germs. This condition is almost always accompanied by a weakened condition of the system.

If you are suffering from any of these symptoms nothing on earth will build you up and strengthen you like Tanlac, which contains the most powerful tonic properties that are known to science.

This statement is easily proven by the fact that Tanlac is now having the greatest sale of any system tonic in the history of medicine. In less than four years over Ten Million bottles have been sold and the demand is constantly increasing. Thousands are using it daily for the above troubles with the most astonishing and gratifying results.

Tanlac increases your strength and weight and creates a good, healthy appetite for nourishing food. It keeps you physically fit and helps every organ of the body perform its proper function in the natural way.

In connection with the Tanlac Treatment be sure and keep thebowels open by taking Tanlac Laxative Tablets, samples of which are included in every bottle.

NEGOTIABLE PAPER

Bills of Exchange, Bank Checks and Promissory Notes.

IN A CLASS BY THEMSELVES.

These Convenient Substitutes For Specie, Which May Pass From Hand to Hand as Readily as Coin, Differ Radically From Other Contracts.

We may speak truthfully of the strength of paper, yet how like a paradox it sounds! From childhood we have been accustomed to take frequent liberties with the flimsy material, to fold and rend it according to our lightest whim, and now to speak of it as strong! But strong it is, and the business world of America is bound into a cohesive whole by the fibers of millions of notes, checks and drafts which pledge the honor and credit of its citizens.

In this brief article we shall attempt to define three kinds of commercial paper—bills of exchange, promissory notes and bank checks—that are all business contracts. They are contracts, however, as to which business convenience decrees that the form shall be just as important as the substance.

If I am hiring Regan the contractor to build my house and we fall out over our agreement the court will consider every possible point connected with the transaction in order to determine what our mutual intentions really were. But if I employ Regan to do the work and give him a promissory note in payment of his services, our rights, so far as that note is concerned, are largely determined by the exact form in which I issued it, taken in connection of course with the subsequent indorsements—that is, whatever written additions were afterward made to it in the course of business.

The vital feature of bills of exchange—or drafts, as they are generally called—promissory notes and bank checks is their negotiability—that is to say, they are a special class of contracts which are so framed and so favored by the law that if certain rules are adhered to they can be passed from man to man quite as freely and far more conveniently than actual cash.

An ordinary contract may be assigned or transferred from one to another. Thus if I have agreed to furnish a large factory with knitting machines I may assign my right to be paid for doing so to Bogardus for a valuable consideration. Suppose, though, that I misrepresented some important feature of my knitting machines to the Success Textile company, which ordered them, and after I have transferred my rights in the contract to Bogardus they find it out. Under such circumstances the textile company can employ the defense of misrepresentation against Bogardus just as readily as they could against me, for he has simply stepped into my shoes and is in no better position than I would be had I remained a party to the contract.

Now, this is just where drafts, notes and bills, or, as they are often called collectively, negotiable instruments or commercial paper, differ radically from other contracts. While still in the hands of the original parties who gave them birth they are subject to any defenses which one may have against the other, so that if Curzon gives a promissory note for $100, due in sixty days, to Plaisted and then finds that through mutual dealings Plaisted really owes him $500 he may at the end of the sixty days refuse to pay Plaisted the note and demand instead $400 from him. Suppose, however, that Plaisted has meanwhile sold the note to Rangely, who knows nothing of his debt to Curzon, can Curzon still set off Plaisted's debt and refuse to pay Rangely the note? Undoubtedly he cannot do so.

Such a case illustrates the distinguishing characteristic of commercial paper. Like a bird which has flown from the parent nest, it is freed from any defenses which the original parties to it may have, just as soon as it has been purchased, in good faith and for a valuable consideration, by some third person.

In every other form of contract the rule is otherwise; land bears its burdens from owner to owner, the assigned mortgage conveys no better title to the purchaser than the assignor had to give; but for the purely practical reason that in trade there must be some convenient representative or specie, which may pass from hand to hand as readily as actual coin, a general agreement and strength of custom among merchants bred the three forms of credit paper—the bill of exchange, the promissory note and the bank check—all of which travel, in the words of a great jurist, as couriers without baggage, and to all of which an innocent purchaser, for value, gets an absolutely clear title.

ORIENTAL LACQUER.

Japan Got the Art From China, Then Surpassed Her Tutor.

Lacquer has furnished a most varied material for one of the earliest industrial arts of China, and, though there are no authentic records of its origin nor of the steps of its early development, the process is already called an ancient one in a work published in 1387, in the first year of the Ming period, which proves that the art was known in as remote an epoch as the Sung dynasty. The culminating years of its development were reached in the reign of the Emperor Chien Lung (1736-95), who greatly encouraged its manufacture and had large quantities of lacquered objects made with which to furnish and decorate his palace. After his death the art seems to have declined in merit, and since that time little or nothing of any high artistic value in Chinese lacquer has been accomplished.

The Japanese first learned the process from China, but have since brought it to a point of perfection which surpasses the finest productions of the Chinese. In Japan, however, lacquer is applied solely to objects of comparatively small size, while in the Chinese empire it served to decorate screens and panels of tremendous dimensions.

Lacquer is divided into two classes—painted and carved lacquer. Both kinds are sometimes inlaid with mother-of-pearl, ivory, jade and various semi-precious stones.

It was in the early seventeenth century, when Holland and Portugal began their trade with the remote east, and particularly with China, that marvelous empire teeming with so many extraordinary artistic manifestations, that Europe first began to realize the new and vast field of decorative elements which were contained in and revealed to her artists by oriental art.

A Primitive Hunting Weapon.

The bolas is a missile weapon used by hunters and Indians in South America to entangle the feet of animals and thus throw them to the ground. This primitive weapon consists of two or more balls of stone or metal, usually covered with leather and connected to the ends of cords or thongs. The hunter holds one of the balls in his right hand, whirls the other around his head and, when the proper momentum has been obtained, sends them whirling like chain shot through the air. When the thong comes in contact with the legs of an animal it is tightly wound about them, a fall results, and escape is impossible.
